Tenants and Landlords.

So few people, comparatively speaking, live in houses of their own, and so many are constantly moving from house to house, that it becomes very important both to tenants and landlords to understand clearly their respective rights. It may be stated in general terms that during the past few years the decisions of the courts have been much more liberal than formerly toward the tenant, because they realize the great change which has occurred in the proprietorship of houses. These changes are regarded as advantageous to both tenant and landlord, since if tenants are given considerable latitude in relation to improvements the letting of premises for short periods will be greatly hindered. The more prudent tenant will consider the matter of improvements before he goes into a building, and have an understanding with the landlord as to what fixtures he may take away when he vacates.

There are, however, some general matters upon which there can be no doubt. The tenant may take away ordinary gas fixtures, chandeliers, brackets, a heater, a portable range, or furnace, being of a useful character elsewhere and which are so connected with the masonry of the house as to require the breaking away of walls. The same is true of shelves temporarily put up by the tenant, or with coal bins. Anything which is nailed to the walls with the idea of permanency cannot be taken; and the law makes a difference between screws and nails, the former being used with the intent of taking down the structure. One principle is is well to observe: a tenant cannot tear down the house of his landlord in order to remove his property. Neither can he injure it, as would be the case if the tenant, having papered or frescoed the walls at his own expense, should, from any cause, scrape off the paper or paint. Should a tenant do this, the landlord could make him pay damages. In short, the right of a tenant to remove goods extends to the hundred things which a tenant takes into a house for his comfort and the ornamentation of his dwelling. The character of the thing and the way in which is erected must indicate a temporary use and a purpose of removal in order to be taken away. In general, it should be added that anything which is attached to the soil cannot be taken from the land of another. A fruit tree cannot be taken up; a house under which there is a cellar cannot be taken away, but a building setting upon posts or lumber, etc., on the land of another, can be taken away by the tenant if it was placed there by the tenant.

It is claimed that the tenant's right to the removal of property like that to which reference has been made—temporary improvements—should be taken away while he is yet in possession of the tenement.

The best course to be pursued is for the tenant and landlord to have a clear understanding about the nature of the improvements which the tenant makes with the idea of removal. Then there can be no cause for disagreement and annoyance.—Boston Journal.

The following complimentary notice is from the Lawrence Eagle. Mr. Fallon is father of Mr. J. Howard Fallo n Superintendent of the Danvers Bleachery:

Mr. John Fallon closes a long term of service in the Pacific mills, a service that has been creditable to himself, valuable to the corporation and beneficial to the city. In all questions of municipal policy Mr. Fallon has maintained an attitude of wise regard to the good of the community, and has uniformly evinced an interest in Lawrence as well as in the business with which he was immediately connected. He has always had the welfare of the operatives in view, and has taken pleasure in pointing out to strangers the evidences of thrift and good citizenship that the Pacific mills employes always exhibit, Among mill operatives throughout New England their Lawrence co-laborers are regarded as conservative and slow to join in any ill-timed controversies with mill managements. Mr. Fallon is entitled to much credit for fostering this spirit of self-reliance and forethought among the many who have looked to him for counsel. We are glad to learn that he will remain in Lawrence, in whose welfare and development he never fails to have an interest.

WHO OWNS THE WHALES?—A dead whale was washed ashore at Brewster, Mass., April 9, 1880, and was taken possession of by Solomon Rich, who converted the fish into oil. The same fin-back had been struck and killed three days before by a bomb-lance thrown by Jessie Gheu, off Race Point. In the United States District Court, before Judge Nelson, Gheu, a resident of Provincetown, brings a libel admiralty to recover the value of the whale. The libellant claims that the universal custom among whalers is to grant the ownership of the fish to the man first planting an iron in it. Judge Nelson, in his decision sustained this usage, and awards damages in the sum of $71.05 without costs.

PEOPLE WHO LAUGH.—There is a family near Doylestown, Pa., afflicted with a laughing mania. Twice a day each member of the family is furiously affected with this pecullar disease. The father was first taken ten years ago.—Then the youngest daughter caught the contagion, and finally it spread to all the other children. There is very little physical annoyance by reason of this uncontrollable mirth; the afflicted people can write, read and sleep without difficulty, but cannot speak or eat while the fit is on them. Physicians have vainly sought for a cure.

In Portland, Me., about one-third of the population goes to the Catholic church, one-third to the Protestant, and the other third goes nowhere. Probably that is about the average in all the New England cities, except in summer, when the third that usually goes nowhere is swelled to two-thirds, who go to the seashore or anywhere else that offers a cooliug breeze.

David Davis is not very much like a cat in politics, but it is remarked that he is always on the fence.

Poet's Corner.

What is All when All is Told?

Wealth, and glory, and place, and power—
What are they worth to me or you?
For the lease of life runs out in an hour,
And death stands ready to claim its due.
Sounding honors, or heaps of gold—
What are they when all is told?

A pain or a pleasure, a smile or a tear—
What does it matter which we claim?
For we step from the cradle into the bier,
And a careless world goes on the same.
Hours of gladness, or hours of sorrow—
What will it matter to us to-morrow?

Troth of love, or vow of friend—
Tender caresses, or cruel sneers—
What do they matter to us in the end?
For the brief day dies, and the long night nears.
Passionate kisses, or tears of gall—
The grave will open and cover them all.

Homeless vagrant, or honored guest—
Poor and humble, or rich and great—
All are racked with the world's unrest—
All must meet the common fate.
Life from childhood till we are old—
What is all when all is told?

Well, Not This Evening.

'Twas a bright and moonlight evening,
As they wandered on the shore,
And she gently pressed his coat-sleeve,
As she oft had done before.

And they talked about his college,
While she charmed him with her looks;
Then she called him very naughty,
Not at all well up in books.

"Have you ever read," she murmured,
"Squees' Memoir? I wish you would."
"Well, since you insist," he whispered,
"I will try and be so good."

"Take your arm away—you monster!—
From my waist, you awful man!
That's not what I meant at all, sir!
There, you're breaking my new fan!

"'Twas the Life of Joseph Squees, sir,
And I think you're awful bad!
Am I angry?—Take me home, sir.
Yes, I am just fearful mad!"

'Twas a bright and moonlight evening,
As he wandered on the shore;
But no maiden pressed his coat-sleeve
As she used in days of yore.

Selected Story.

Odd Fellowship Exposed.

The following comes to us unvouched for, and it may be true or it may be not, we leave that for the Odds, to say, as it makes no odds to us. It purports to be the personal experience of an initiate under the "Old Work," whatever that may be, and there really seems to be something in it:—

MY INITIATION.

My experience, which I here describe, occurred under the "Old Work," so called to distinguish it from the "New Work," and people who are posted will know what I mean. I made up my mind to join the order, and well remember the emotion that filled me, as I put on my best clothes to attend to initiation, after my worthiness had been tested by a ballot in the lodge. The guardian angel of my domestic peace, as I informed her where I was going, told me not to make a fool of myself.

She is a wonderful woman, and her rhetoric is original. I looked at her earnestly for a moment, and then kissed her a tender good bye, on her nose, as I was not positive as I should ever see her again. I was always timid, and the ordeal through which I had to pass seemed dreadful.

I had a brother-in-law who was an Odd Fellow, and wore a breast-pin composed of three links, a bow and arrow, and I don't know what else—all of solid Attleboro gold—and he had a savage way of speaking about "putting me through," as though they were going to kill me. But I suppressed my fears, as well as I could, and I presented myself at the lodge room, up seven pairs of stairs, for admission. I tried to knock at the door boldly, but it was the feeblest kind of summons; enough, however, to attract attention on the inside, when the door swung open, creaking on its rusty hinges, a hand was laid upon my collar, and I found myself in a dimly lighted room, smelling strongly of burning sulphur, a small dish of which was upon a bracket, and gave all the light that was visible. My sudden entrance, my fear, and a waxed floor, brought me suddenly to a sitting posture, when a small door to the right opened, and a little old fellow, the warden, approached me, dressed in a black robe and wearing a huge white wig, bearing a book in his hand, and addressed me:—

"Mortal! What seekest thou?"

I told him very timidly, that, just then, I thought I should like to find my feet.

He took me by the hand and lifted me to a perpendicular position. I then said: "My distinguished friend, I came here to present myself for the honors of this worthy order, and should like to be taken in."

He gave a loud "Ha!" and I heard it reverberate half a dozen times, as though fiends were laughing. As the echoes ceased, an invisible door was thrown open, through which burst a stream of light that overwhelmed me.

Heads piled o'er heads, beyond the door, and a hundred eyes were gazing upon me, filling me with terror.

There then filed in the oddest looking crowd I had ever seen, dressed in all sorts of fantastic way, the leader of which said, in a two-story voice:—

"Mortal! You are standing in the vestibule of an Order that antedates Moses; that numbered the Patriarchs among its members; that kings and potentates have patronized; and that embodies to-day all the known virtues of humanity, and many that are not known and never will be. Are you prepared to enter upon its experiences?"

"Yes, sir, I am," I managed to say.

He reached his hand towards me, which I, not rightly comprehending, seized and shook warmly.

"Hand over your entrance fee, then," cried he, in a voice of thunder and lightning, which I did.

"Now wait the coming of your conductor," he said, as he and his retinue passed within the door.

By-and-by a huge fellow, fully five feet three inches tall, dressed in a sheepskin coat which hung to his heels, with a tall cap of the same, came up through a trap-door just in front of me. He bore an immense spear in his hand, the butt of which he brought down violently on my toe, and shouted:—

"Stand!"

This command seemed unnecessary as I was already on my feet; but I stood some more, as he required, and waited further orders.

"Come with me," said he, "along those paths we all have trod, which lead through trials, to the perfection of peace, come!"

He led on, through a door opposite to that by which I had stood, into what seemed to be a sort of cavern, dimly lighted, and as we crossed the portal two ruffians, masked, and armed with huge wooden axes, jumped out and impeded our way. One of them, in a hoarse whisper, as if he were troubled with bronchial difficulty, said, as he brandished his axe:—

"T'other or Which?"

My conductor said "Which," when the axes threatened no more and we were allowed to pass. Soon we came to a massive oaken door, by the side of which a sentinel sat, seemingly asleep. A candle burning in the neck of a bottle gave the only light by which we could see a huge sword lying across his knees. My conductor touched his foot, saying:—

"Most vigilant sentinel!"

No answer but a snore.

"Most wide-awake old stop-watch!"

Another snore.

"Most lively old guardian of the approach to the Temple of Mystery, deign to heed us."

He gave, as he said this, a vigorous kick to the old sentinel on the shins, who leaped to his feet, swinging the sword over his head and yelling:—

"Who comes?"

"A stranger, unsophisticated and unenlightened, who, having gained admission to the vestibule of all virtues, is now desirous of pushing on to where those exceedingly interesting articles are dispensed with."

"Push!" was the answer.

My conductor bade me push at the door, which I did but could not move it.

The sentinel then spoke:—

"Stranger, these hinges only turn when lubricated by the oil of palm."

He held out his hand, when I gave him a quarter, and then I tried the door, which swung easily on its hinges. We entered a vaulted chamber, lit by a lamp hanging from the center of the ceiling, when I was immediately seized from behind, my hands pinioned, a hood-wink placed over my eyes, and hurried on in a zigzag course, till I had no idea of position, except the perpendicular, and couldn't have named the town I was in. This ended by my coming to a full stop against an iron door. A loud knock with an iron hammer was answered by a voice within:—

"Hallo! what's up?"

My conductor gave a reply, in a whisper, at a wicket, when the door was opened, and a chorus of voices exclaimed:—

"Death to all intrudors!"

Then my conductor said, as if addressing some one:—

"Most Perpendicular Potentate, we are a stranger, pretty good looking, and would fain come in."

"This is but the entrance," replied a voice; "doth the stranger know the perils by the way—the ravens, volcanoes, lime-pits, cataracts, avalanches, wild beasts, and so forth?"

"He doth, and he knoweth and so forth best."

"Doth he fear the goat, and hath he been baptized in the seventh bath of Senacharib with the leaden faucet?"

"He hath."

"Then he can enter for the race."

I crossed the threshold and the door closed behind me with a startling clang, which made my nerves jar so that I seemed to hear them. I missed my conductor from my side, and found I was to "go alone" with what I felt was not a very good hand. I was then questioned:—

"Do you promise to see, and yet not see—know, and yet not know—feel, and yet not feel?"

"I do," I said as firmly as I could.

"Then bring the testing ordeal."

A moment after I felt a pin thrust about two inches through the thick part of my flesh, and I yelled with all my might.

"A forfeit! he feels!" was shouted.

I inwardly confessed that I did, and would have given a dollar to hit the one that made a pin cushion of me.—My hands were released and the bandage taken from my eyes, when I saw before me, on a tripod about ten feet high, my brother-in-law, as the Grand Augur, armed with a cleaver, supported by two furious-looking ruffians, masked. I nodded to him, when the cry was again raised:

"A forfeit! he sees!"

Then the Grand Augur said, while sternness sat on his brow and judgment beamed from both his eyes:

"Take him before the Grand Oriental Dictator for discipline."

"Hold on," said I.

"A forfeit! he hears!" rose around me.

"Away with him," cried the Grand Augur.

I was seized by several, dressed as imps, and rushed around the vast apartment which stretched away into the distance, about which many odd-looking chaps were seated, until we came to a raised throne on which the Dictator sat. His official symbol was a pair of scales, that did not seem to hang very even, and his dress a scarlet robe trimmed with ermine. He was armed with an immense axe.

One of my attendants then spoke:—

"Most Puissant Dictator—the culprit in hand sees, hears and feels, contrary to his obligation."

The axe was slowly raised, the eyes of the Dictator flashed angrily, and I stood expecting to be knocked, when the axe was lowered.

"No," said he, "his innocence and beauty save him; conduct him to the Final Arbiter in the south-east."

I was then led to another seat on which was an immensely fat man, dressed in a long black robe, and wearing a three-cornered hat.

"What hast in hand, brother?" he said.

"A culprit sent you for arbitration, he having passed three great ordeals through the aid of impudence and beauty."

"Bring out the goat," said the Arbiter.

I could not see whence he came, but before was a huge animal of the Ibex pattern, with horns on both ends, that stamped the floor as if he had important business on hand and was impatient to be about it.

"Let him ride," said the Arbiter.

I was immediately strapped on the animal's back, an immense gong was sounded, and away I was carried—round and round and round—till consciousness left me, and I was taken off. A bucket of water was dashed over me, and as I came to myself, a shout arose:

"He has settled!"

I thought he had, rather. The goat had disappeared, and I was again before the first tripod.

"My brother," said its occupant, rubbing his nose, "from the ceremony you have passed through, you are to guess three things: Friendship, Love and Truth are the cardinal principles inculcated, and by these lessons you have received you are to see the necessity of untiring Friendship, as a general thing, when it serves your purpose best; Love, discreetly confining yourself, for prudential reasons, to the masculine sex—if you are a married man. Regard the Truth always for it is as impossible for one of us to get along without Truth as without soap. The world may condemn you for sticking to the truth, but don't mind it. You will pass to the Grand Whitewasher for purification."

I was then conducted to a throne in the north-west on which sat the Grand Whitewasher, clothed in spotless white. Near him was the Troubadour, dressed as Apollo, with a lyre. The G. W. said:

"Strike the lyre!"

I thought he meant me and ducked, but the lyre was struck and lyrist sung:

"The weary ways are o'er at last,
Of pain and keen vexation:
Now rest upon the happy shore
In purifi-ki-ation."

They then put a white gown on me, tolerably clean, and the G. W. sprinkled some rose water on me from a silver water-pot, which I was told was the purification designated. I was then taken to the centre of the room, where the whole body joined in a dance round me, chanting to the twanging lyre:

"It is finished! He is ours,
We are his by occult powers;
May we all of us prove zealous
As the Oddest kind of fellows."

Each one as he passed gave me a punch or a kick, as a proof of the sincerity of his feeling, intimating that all were "good at a pinch," but my head grew so dizzy that I fell down, in which condition I was taken out. When I came to I found myself at home, my wife pinching me in order to wake me up. And that was my experience in the "Old Work." Was it a dream?

Of the lessons I received, that regarding the Truth sticks to me still, and I always inculcate the Truth, illustrating it with the story I have heard of G. Washington, who, at ten years of age, confessed to barking up a cherry tree with his little hatchet because he wouldn't tell a lie. "Come here, my son," said old Mr. Washington, "and let me larrup you, for it were better that twenty boys should be flogged than that another cherry tree like that should be spoilt," or words to that effect.—Ohio State Gazette.

Anecdotes.

LAWYER'S EXPERIENCE IN SLEEPING CAR.—I never did, never could and never will sleep a second time in a sleeping-car berth. But all of the party said it was because I thought I couldn't, and quoted many texts of Scripture and old saws to prove that a man could do anything he resolved upon. As usual, female pertinacity and volubility prevailed, and we tried it.—I resolved I would omit no means of alluring sleep, that I would array myself as for my bed at home, take my usual night-cap of cold water, "Lay me down to sleep" and "pray the Lord my soul to keep." I put my boots outside the curtain, crawled up to the top berth, and after many contortions of the body, bumps on the top of my head and lacerations of my limbs, contrived to fall in in due and regular order. I had been told to lie flat on my back and obediently did so. The cars rattled and jolted over the road, stopped every few miles with a jerk and started with a greater one, until it seemed to me that my soul and all that was within me were being agglomerated into one consistent and uniform jelly. I tried my right side a while and became satisfied that was the wrong side. Then I tried the left, and was sorry I had left the right. I then thought it was too light, and got up and shivered around ten minutes trying to fix my overcoat as a shade to the lamps. A man who slept opposite my section alternated between fearful snoring, strangulations and wild and copious expectorations. I felt I had nearly composed myself to sleep, when it occurred to me that sound and direction indicated that my boots were being utilized by my catarrhal neighbor. I hustled down again and drew them from the storm. Then I became certain that my money was in peril, that my pants and vest which contained my treasures must be taken from the pegs and stored away behind me in the berth. I tried for two or three hours to fix things right so that I could go to sleep and enjoy that piece and rest that are the possessions of the innocent and good, but things went on from bad to worse, and, under renewed tortures to head and limbs, I dressed me, took a cigar, went to the smoking room, threw myself into a corner and smoked sullenly and silently through the dismal night. — Lawyer Stearns in Springfield Republican.

A GATE STORY.—"Serena, darling," he murmured; and the old gate scarcely creaked as it swung to and fro beneath her light weight, and the silent stars looked down with tenderer glances, and all South Hill seemed to hold its breath to listen. "Serena, sweet," he said, and the radiant blushes that kindled over the pearly brow and cheeks softened the silent lovelight in her eyes; "Serena, my own, if every glittering star that beams above, if every passing breeze that stops to kiss thy glowing cheeks, if every rustling leaf that whispers to the night were living, burning, loving thoughts; if every—Oh-h-ho-ho! Ow-w! Wow-ow! Aw-w, oh, oh, oh! Oh, jimmy pelt! Oh, glory! Oh, murder, murder, murder, murder! Oh dad-rang the swizzled old gate to the bow-wows!" And she said stiffly, that no gentleman who could use such language in the presence of a lady was an acquaintance of hers, and she went into the house. And he pushed the gate open and pulled his mangled thumb out of the crack of it, and went down the street sucking the injured member and declaring that, however lightly 105 pounds of a girl might sit upon the heart of a man, it was a little too much pressure when applied to an impromptu thumbscrew. And the match is drawn, and all side bets are declared off.—Hawkeye.

"Seizing the gigantic Indian around the waist the brave boy lifted him into the air and flung him headlong down the chasm. Panting, the boy stood and watched the Indian's body fall from crag to crag until it disappeared in the darkness below. Just at this moment—" just at that moment the father of the boy who was reading this trash came along, lifted the youngster by the ear, and in the woodshed matinee that followed the boy had no thought of flinging the old man down a chasm. There was no chasm handy.—Detroit Free Press.

Miscellaneous.

BE GENTLEMEN AT HOME.—There are few families, we imagine, anywhere, in which love is not abused as furnishing a license for impoliteness. A husband, or father, or brother, will speak harsh words to those he loves the best, simply because the security of love and family pride keeps him from getting his head broken. It is a shame that a man will speak more impolitely at times to his wife and sister than he would dare to to any other female except a low and vicious one. It is thus that the holiest affections of a man's nature may prove to be a weaker protection to a woman in the family than the restraints of society, and that a woman is usually indebted for the kindest politeness of life to those not belonging to her own household. Things ought not to be so. The man who, because it will not be resented, inflicts his spleen and bad temper upon those of his hearthstone, is a small coward and a mean dog. Kind words are the circulating medium between true gentlemen and true ladies at home, and no polish exhibited in society can atone for the harsh language and disrespectful treatment too often indulged in between those bound together by God's own ties of blood and by the still more sacred bonds of conjugal love.

HOW TO USE LEAD PENCILS.—The act of putting a lead pencil to the tongue to wet it just before writing, which we notice in so many people, is one of the oddities of which it is hard to give any reason—unless it begun in the days when lead pencils were poorer than now, and was continued by example into the next generation.

A lead pencil should never be wet. It hardens the lead and ruins the pencils. This fact is known to newspaper men and stenographers. But nearly every one else does wet a pencil before using it. This fact was definitely settled by a newspaper clerk away down East.

Being of a mathematical turn of mind, he ascertained by actual count that of fifty persons who came into the office to write an advertisement or church notice, forty-nine wet a pencil in their mouth before using it. Now this clerk always uses the best pencils, cherishing a good one with something of the pride a soldier feels in his gun or sword, and it hurts his feelings to have his pencil spoiled. But politeness and business considerations require him to lend his pencil scores of times every day. And often after it has been wet till it was hard and brittle and refused to mark, his feelings would overpower him.

Finally he got some cheap pencils and sharpened them and kept them to lend. The first person who took up a stock pencil was a drayman, whose breath smelt of onions and whiskey. He held the point in his mouth and soaked it for several minutes, while he was torturing himself in the effort to write an advertisement for a missing bull dog.

Then a sweet-looking young lady came into the office, with kid gloves that buttoned half-way the length of her arm. She picked up the same old pencil and pressed it to her dainty lips preparatory to writing an advertisement for a lost bracelet. The clerk would have stayed her hand, even at the risk of a box of the best pencils Faber ever catered, but he was too late. And the pencil passed from mouth to mouth for a week. It was sucked by all degrees of cleanliness and uncleanliness. But we forbear. Surely no one who reads this will ever again wet a lead pencil.

HOW TO CURE A COLD.—A medical journal tells how one man was cured of a cold: "He boiled a little wormwood and horehound together and drank freely of the tea before going to bed.—The next day he took five pills, put one kind of plaster on his breast, another under his arm, and still another on his back. Under advice of an experienced old lady he took all these off with an oyster knife in the afternoon, and slapped on a mustard plaster instead. Then he put some hot bricks to his feet and went to bed. Next day another old lady came in with a bottle of goose oil, and gave him a dose of it on a quill, and an aunt arrived about the same time with a bundle of sweet fern, which she made into tea and gave him every half hour until noon, when he took a big dose of salts. After dinner, his wife, who had seen a fine old lady of great experience in doctoring, on High street, gave him two pills of her own make, about the size of a walnut and of similar shape, and two teaspoonfuls of home made balsam to keep them down. Then he took a half pint of hot rum at the suggestion of an old sea captain visiting the next house, and steamed his legs with an alcoholic bath. At this crisis two of his neighbors arrived, who saw at once that his blood was out of order, and gave him a half gallon of spearmint tea and a big dose of castor oil. Before going to bed he took eight of a new kind of pills, wrapped about his neck a flannel soaked in hot vinegar and salt, and had feathers burned cured shovel in his room. He is now on a and full of gratitude."

Rupture

ITS RELIEF AND CURE AS CERTAIN AS DAY FOLLOWS DAY, WITHOUT ANY OPERATION OR HINDRANCE FROM LABOR.

Since the reduction of Dr. Sherman's terms, thousands are crowding upon him for treatment, gladly throwing away their griping, irksome, dispiriting and life-punishing trusses. His treatment for this affliction makes the patient comfortable and safe in the performance of every kind of exercise or labor. It is a grand thing, and those who are ruptured and do not provide themselves with it, must endure the dangers of the precarious affliction and the use of trusses all through life. Thousands of those cured give the most flattering testimonials of gratitude to Dr. Sherman. He is the author and inventor of his popular system; he imparts his secret to no one; it is applicable to all classes, and, under his reduced rate within the reach of almost every one.

Patients can receive treatment and leave for home the same day. Dr. Sherman's Book on Rupture gives convincing proofs from professional gentlemen and others of his successful treatment. It is illustrated with photograph pictures of bad cases before and after cure and is sent to those who send 15 cents. Principal office, 251 Broadway, New York. Branch office, 43 Milk street, Boston. THAT BOY OF GALLAGHER'S.

The circumstances were as follows: Mr. Gallagher had to take a train that left at 6 o'clock, so he arose before daylight to breakfast, and thought he would put on his thick boots instead of the very light shoes he had on over evening. Now it seems that Gallagher's son had worn the old man's boots while roller skating, and had left the skates on the boots, and in the darkness Gallaghor didn't notice this fact as he pulled the boots on, though he thought the boots felt heavy. He then groped his way to the head of the stairs, the skates making no trouble on the carpets. Then he started to go down stairs. He got there dreadfully sudden. He was terribly annoyed as he picked himself up, and said very wick d things as he started for the dining-room. Breakfast was laid, but only a dim light was burning. Immediately he set foot on the polished floor Mr. G.'s feet flew into the air and his head came down with a terrible force. The wild yell that he gave brought his wife and mother-in law from the kitchen. He arose to his feet, but they immediately started off in different directions, and after wrenching his spine and knee joints terribly in trying to control them, they got away, and he jarred the spinal column the whole length as he went down. "Land of gracious; this floor is oiled," he roared, as he began to make efforts to rise. "Have you apoplexy or have you been drinking?" asked his wife as she strove to assist him to get up. "You hold your jaw, you idiot," he replied, and then she let go of him sort of sudden, and down he went, bruising himself in six places. "Gosh," "tunket," "drat" and "durn" were words called into requisition to relieve his mind that time, and he told his mother-in-law, who had fallen, laughing, into a chair, that he hoped she'd meet cows every time she went out. Then he essayed to rise once more, and got upon his feet. The skates began to slip, but he struggled like a hero and clutched the air wildly to keep his balance. No use. As he fell forward he wildly grabbed the tablecloth, and as a result yanked the entire breakfast upon him. The hot tea scalded him, the pepper got into his eyes, the mustard into his mouth and the eggs all over him. His cries were fearful. They hauled him from the debris and started to put him to bed, when they discovered the rollers. Mr. Gallagher was terribly used up, but he started at once to find his son, and the lad's sighing over his great grief was heard blocks away.—New York News.

HOW IRISH PEASANTS LIVE.

The dens, misnamed cots, in which the the peasantry of G lway and Mayo counties live are merely stone shelters; owing to the intense ignorance of the people they are not provided with any facilities for drainage, and are often incomparably filthy. The floors are of hard mud; it is rare to find more than one room in a hut, and only one story. Beds and bedding are luxuries which the poorer tenants do not possess; old heaps of hay and straw are the couches on which the lovely, brown-eyed, large-browed maidens of Connaught repose. The smoke from a peat fire in a common peasant's cabin spreads through the room, and you narrowly escape strangulation on your first visit. I have had this experience in Herzegovina, and consequently minded the smoke but little. How family decency is maintained in these dens is a mystery, and how the people manage to keep clean—for they look clean—is a puzzle. The pigs run in and out of the doors—and such wretched pigs! A North Carolina wild hog would be an aristocrat beside them! In dozens of these cabins sick people are to be found—sick people dependent either on the charity of their neighbors or on friends in America who send them small sums. A gentleman in Galway told me that the agents of landlords treated the poorer tenantry as if they were animals. He instanced the case of one agent who, on rent day, when any tenant was short a half crown in his payment, would knock the money off the table on the floor, so as to humiliate the tenant before his fellows. Up to a recent date even the better class of tenants would not dare to resent such behavior; they were ready to fawn before the man who had insulted them. Now the tables are turned, and the agent sneaks in and out among the people, taking twenty-five per cent. less than the usual rental, if indeed he gets anything at all, and is glad to get away again out of the farming district with his head still on his shoulders.—Edward King's Letter from Galway.

LAND IN ENGLAND.

Behind the land question in England is the question of habits. The land is held in these great tracts, not for employment, but from pride. The brains of men are so equal under modern facilities of education that hereditary descent would be inconsequential if it did not have hereditary estate to advertise the fact; and consequently every parvenue in the nobility rushes to buy land at a ridiculous price, so that he can appear on the landscape of the country among the sons of Normans. For the greater part of the year an English estate is not fit to live on, on account of the climate, and there is plenty of land to be had for less than $1 per acre on the steppes of the Rocky Mountains more agreeable for hunting, for residence, and for every other enjoyment than the best land in England.

Amongst such as, out of cunning, hear all and talk little, be sure to talk less; or if you must talk, say little.

"When is a man not a man?" asked Jones. Of course he expected everybody to give it up, and then he was going on to say, "When he is a shaving." But they didn't give it up, not a bit of it. One said it was when he was fool enough to deal in conundrums; another answered that it was when he worked over jokes a thousand years old; and a third told Jones to look in the glass and see for himself. Jones said he didn't see what in time they were driving at, but somehow he had lost all interest in his conundrum and hadn't the heart to tell them the true answer.

DR. A. P. LIGHTHILL,

Office hours from 8 A. M. until 12 M.

TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.
Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,
Universalist Pastor.
For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.
Peabody, Mass, June 27, 1879.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,
Of Beverly, Mass.
I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, CATARRH, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him; his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.
Beverly, Mass, Oct'r 29, 1879.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,
Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence, Ms.
My dear Dr. Lighthill.—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the larynx into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted. I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.
Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.
Lawrence, Nov. 4, 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,
Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.
The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celebrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.
I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.
I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.
From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,
Piano Manufactuier, 185 Washington St., Boston
Dr. Lighthill,—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.
I have the honor to be very truly yours,
A. M. McPHAIL, JR.

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.
From Mrs. M. A. Emery,
Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends, and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,
Mrs. M. A. EMERY,
359 Lowell Street,
Lawrence, Sept. 21, 1880.

HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES.
A REMARKABLE CURE.
From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.
Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man. G. H. ROBINSON,
Methuen, Nov. 1st, 1880.

Please Remember—Dr. LIGHTHILL'S Office is at 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St., Boston.

THE New York Times (Republican) calls the Washington City National Republican, of which Geo. C. Gorham and Thomas Brady are editors and proprietors, the "thieves' organ."

IT has been estimated that every letter carried to its destination over certain of the "Star" routes costs the post office department from $300 to $500. It would be cheaper for the government to deliver each letter by a special messenger.

IT will not be forgotten that a committee of a Democratic House of Representatives looked into the Star Route business, reported everything all right and had their report accepted. It remained for the Republicans to detect their own thieves.

BOSTON THEATRE.—The comic opera of "Donna Juanita," a work full of curious complications, and partaking of a military character which makes it the more attractive, will constitute the attractions for the remaining entertainments to be given this week at the Boston Theatre. Matinee on Saturday at 2 o'clock.

CAPTAIN PAUL BOYTON, the famous swimmer, who was captured by the Chillians while he was in the Peruvian torpedo service, arrived at New York last week in the steamer Cresent City, under the assumed name of De La Porte. He had a false passport. He escaped from his captors by the aid of some friends, and swam to an English steamer which took him on board.

JAMES T. FIELDS' WILL.—The will of the late James T. Fields has been filed at the probate court in Salem.—Among the provisions is one giving to his wife all the Charles street (Boston) property, including the house, furniture, books, pictures and manuscripts. She also has the insurance on his life and an income of $100,000. There are numerous bequests of from $1000 to $5000 to relatives and friends, including one of $1000 to Edwin P. Whipple.

THE "SCREEN LAW" requires the removal of all screens placed before the doors in drinking saloons to hide the bar from the street. In some places the liquor dealers have begun to remove their window obstructions, in anticipation of the enforcement of the law, and the following salutation hereafter among saloon keepers: "Have you taken down your blinds and removed your screens and partitions?" It is said that the first prosecution under the law will be made a test case and will be carried to the Supreme Court.

Oleomargarine.

The Oleomargarine bill reported to the State Legislature by the committee on agriculture covers all that has been asked for by the produce dealers without in any way infringing on the rights of manufacturers. It simply provides that every package of any compound made to imitate genuine butter or cheese shall be plainly labeled, so that the buyer cannot be imposed upon.—There is nothing in the bill to prevent the manufacture or sale of any article that parties may see fit to make, provided the product is sold on its own merits. Some objection has been raised to the second section of the bill, which requires that boarding house and restaurant keepers, who serve the compound to their customers, shall post in four conspicuous places in their dining or lunch rooms, a notice bearing the words, '' Oleomargarine served here;'' but this provision is considered necessary to protect the consumer, and let him know just what he is eating. It is well known that a large quantity of oleomargarine is sold to dining room and boarding house keepers throughout the State, who, no doubt, place it before their patrons as real butter. If a notice is posted, so that all can read as they eat, the rights of nobody will be curtailed, and everybody will be cautioned. But after all these precautions, there will probably be considerable adulterated stuff sold and used as the genuine article, and the best way to stop the imposition is for buyers and consumers to be on their guard and assist in every reasonable way the execution of the law. If the consumer is indifferent to what he eats, nobody can protect him. The law is as strong as it can justly be made, but the public opinion will be necessary for its enforcement.

The papers from everywhere sing out "clean up or shut up." The clamor to clean up is especially great. This is all right. People in towns and country can not be too careful in the observance of sanitary rules, and cleanliness is in order at all seasons. We say again, pains should be taken by everybody to clean up their premises. It should be a matter of pride. The sanitary officers should see to it that the regulations are obeyed by the people and the officials should scrutinize streets and alley-ways and see that no dead rats, cats, chickens or dogs are allowed to go unburied. But while we say this, we do not see any occasion to predict that the cholera, small-pox, measles, rheumatism, gout and a thousand more maladies will torture and destroy the people, by wholesale, in the coming months. There will be sickness, as a matter of course, but there is no good sense in worrying about it.

The Old World is unpeopling itself on our shores. Nearly sixty thousand immigrants arrived in the month just ended at Castle Garden alone. Boston, Baltimore, and other ports no doubt have thousands more to add to this volume, which surpasses anything ever known in the history of the country. Tyranny, crushing taxation, military oppression, bad crops, grasping landlords, governmental spy systems, and laws that repress hopes of advancement, contrasted with the freedom and the prospect of happiness offered on this side of the ocean, are doubtless the causes of this vast wave of immigration.

A young lady, who is much annoyed by the staring of rude young men in the horse cars, and is, moreover, beyond her years a shrewd judge of human nature, has discovered a simple remedy against the discomfort. She reports that by gazing at the shoes of such silent admirers with a look composed of equal parts of amusement and deprecation, the most annoying bore is reduced to a contemplation of the same articles, and in wondering what is the matter with them is kept diligently employed for an indefinite period.

Lobsters have been growing smaller by degrees and less in numbers, until a humane Legislator, who prefers to wait rather than use a dozen lobsters to make a single salad, has introduced a bill for giving the animals a rest from July 20 to Sept. 20 of each year, in order to enlarge their dimensions. If it becomes a law, the lobster pots must be annually withdrawn from the fishing grounds two months, under penalty of $100 fine or imprisonment to the violaters of the statute aforesaid.

The mania for striking has reached the New York street-car drivers. We cannot but feel a sympathy for these men, although we doubt the wisdom of their policy. No class of laborers work harder or longer hours for as small pay as these drivers, and the corporations which employ them, almost without exception, are paying large dividends to stockholders.

"Let me go home and bear the blessed tidings to my unbelieving wife," said a man wearing a many-pocketed ulster, who had just professed religion at a New Jersey revival meeting. Marrowfat got up unusually early the other morning, and his wife asked him if he would go out and buy some eggs for breakfast, as she had forgotten to order any the night before. Feeling unusually good-natured, he answered in the affirmative. "But," said Mrs. M., "don't go the grocer's; they charge twenty-five cents a dozen for them there, and they were only twenty-two cents at the butter and egg store yesterday." Marrowfat said nothing, but a quiet smile played around the corner of his mouth as he put his hat on and went out of the door. When he returned his loving spouse queried, "Eggs the same price to-day, my dear?" "Well," replied Pater Familias, "these cost me thirty-two cents." "Why, Mr. Marrowfat, what do you mean?" asked she. "The grocer's is next door, the butter and egg store quarter of a mile away; I rode down and back; the cheapest things, my love, are sometimes the dearest," chirped Marrowfoot, as he buried his head in the morning paper.

The Mormons seem to make plenty of converts among women, notwithstanding the outcry against polygamy. Is it possible that the ladies rather like an eighth or a tenth part of a husband, apiece, instead of a whole one? It looks like it, and in some cases that we have seen we should not blame the woman for preferring a very small fraction to the entire individual. — Cambridge Press.

OBITUARY. — Huldah B., wife of Mr. James N. Estes, died April 23d, aged 67 years 9 months and 28 days. Her death was chronicled and a brief notice given in the Press, a few days later; but she was a woman possessed of qualities which cause her friends to deem a longer notice desirable. Her maiden name was Gove. She was born in Deering, N. H., of Quaker parentage, and always retained an affection for the teaching and habits of those of that persuasion. To a simplicity of manner she joined an earnest devoted spirit. Wherever duty called her she was ready to respond, and, until prevented by bodily ailments, faithfully performed her daily round of work, or her special labor. Possessed of a sympathetic nature she was ever ready with kindly counsel or friendly deed to aid those in trouble. For about a year she was confined to her bed, suffering much, but bearing it with resignation and patience. During this long period she was tenderly and faithfully cared for by her daughter, and many kind friends inspired her to continue in her patient mood and Christian faith which upheld her to the end of her painful trial. She compared her sufferings to those the soldiers, who were wounded, must have experienced, and told how she pitied them, and spoke how thankful we ought to be for their devotion, and how courageously we should emulate their example and bear our trials.

She died as she had hoped to, at the time "when the beautiful sunset came." She has left a husband, four sons and one daughter. Her place in the home is vacant, but her memory will be a source of inspiration to her family and friends.

The hands which toiled are folded now to rest.
No pain or trouble stirs the peaceful breast.
But sleeping calmly with earth's labors o'er,
She waits the summons to a brighter shore.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

As Mr. N. M. Quint and his family were returning home last Sunday afternoon, they met three young men, one of whom was riding a velocipede belonging to Mr. Quint's son. Mr. Quint jumped from his team and started in pursuit, and captured the one with his property, and compelled him to return it, while his wife drove to the station for an officer. Officer Frank O. Parker responded to the call, and arrested the young man, who proved to be one Pat Ronan, one of a family who have figured more or less conspicuously in our police court, having one brother (the notorious Sailor Ronan) now confined in the House of Correction, and another under bonds for assault. Before the officer arrived, Ronan made desperate attempts to escape, and Mr. Quint was attacked with stones by the roughs, and had hard work to defend himself. The officer took the young scamp in charge, and started for the station house, but before they had proceeded far Ronan broke and run. The officer called for him to stop or he would shoot, but he paid no attention to him. The officer fired, the ball entering the thick part of his leg below the hip, causing a flesh wound. Ronan continued to run, and not till he heard the officer's revolver click as he cocked it the second time, did he stop. He walked to the station house, where a physician dressed his wound. He was afterwards bailed out by his father.

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Benevolent Society was held at Upton's Hall, May 4th. Reports from the officers were read and accepted. By the Treasurer's Report, it was shown that the sum of $587 has been expended for the relief of the poor during the past year. Votes of thanks were passed for the use of Upton's Hall, and the vestries of the churches. The Society also expressed its gratitude to all those who had assisted at the entertainments given during the winter. The following ladies were elected officers for the ensuing year:

President—Mrs. George A. Osborne.
Vice Presidents—Mrs. T. W. Fox, Mrs. A. H. Merrill, Mrs. C. H. Goulding.
Secretary—Miss L. K. Farley.
Treasurer—Miss Augusta Proctor.

COMMITTEES.

District No. 2—Miss Martha Hutchinson, Mrs. J. W. Hudson, Mrs. C. F. Winchester, Mrs. Henry A. King.
District No. 3—Mrs. James Buxton, Mrs. H. H. Proctor, Mrs. Franklin Osborn, Jr., Mrs. D. B. Lord.
District No. 4—Miss Augusta Proctor, Mrs. John Osborn, Mrs. Warren Shaw, Mrs. R. H. Brown.

At a meeting of the Selectmen last Wednesday evening, it was voted to issue licenses as follows, the Selectmen to use their own judgment as to who should receive them:

To bona fide innholders, license of first class, $400.

To bona fide common victualers (not exceeding five in number) license of first class, $400; of the second class, $250.

To druggists, license of fourth class, $100.

We think the Selectmen have acted wisely in limiting the number of licenses granted, and it is be hoped that the law will be rigidly enforced against those who violate it.

Baby Herbert C. Merrill, son of Frank C. Merrill, gave a party on Monday afternoon of this week in honor of his first birthday, and invited his baby friends between the ages of four and fifteen months to attend. The following came, bringing pretty and appropriate gifts: Rosie N. Lee, Helen L. Clark, Katie F. Wardwell, Bessie M. Worcester, Helen H. Osgood, Marion E. Elliot, Eleanor C. Harris, Harry T. Merrill, Frank L. Ferguson, Harry P. Hewitt and Philip O. Bushby. All were at home and supremely happy. May they all see many such days.

The Committee on High Service Water held a meeting at the Water Board room last Monday evening, and instructed the sub-committee to ascertain the price of the different lots proposed for pumping stations; also instructed the chairman to advertise in Boston papers for bids for pumping works and about 40,000 feet of additional cement pipe.

Bushby & Co., at the old stand, are advertising a choice assortment of Flavors, English Pickles and Preserved Meats. They also carry a fine line of groceries, which they sell as low as the lowest.

Remember the lecture to-morrow evening in the Baptist Church, by Rev. L. L. Wood, on "Jehuism." Ice cream and cake at the close.

About midnight last Saturday an alarm of fire was given. The fire was in the bark mill of Charles Harrington & Co., situated between Walnut street and the railroad track. There seems to be considerable doubt about how the fire originated. The foreman reports everything all right when he left about half past five. The building was totally destroyed, and the roof of the beam house adjoining was badly burned The building covering the leach-tubs was scorched on the outside, but not seriously damaged. The bark mill contained a large quantity of valuable machinery, including a new patent bark mill. The loss is about $2,500, and is partly insured. The department promptly rallied, and to their exertions the saving of the other buildings and preventing a serious conflagration is wholly due. It is said that at one time there were eight streams of water pouring upon the fire.

A singular accident occurred to Dr. Worcester's horse last Thursday, while standing in its stall in the stable. At the foot of the stall there was a small aperture, protected by iron work, for drainage to pass down to the cellar. The weight of the horse's leg in resting upon it, caused the supports to give way, precipitating the leg through the aperture up to the hip, wedging it in so tightly that he was unable to extricate himself, and when discovered he was completely exhausted by his efforts. By the aid of pulleys he was finally released from his uncomfortable position, and placed upright upon all fours, experiencing no serious injury from the mishap; but it was some time before he could be made to realize that everything was all right about his rear propellers, his rescuers in the meantime being obliged to use the pulleys to keep him upright. The horse is 33 years old.

Mr. George O. Peirce has been at work on the flag-staff. The ball has been gilded, the ropes tarred, and everything put in thorough order. In this connection we would like to relate a narrow escape Mr. Peirce had last evening. The old butt of the flag-staff, which was cut off when the staff was removed to its present location, was taken to Mr. Peirce's house, in the rear of Park street. When this mast was first put down the core at the base was found so badly rotted this was chiseled out, and a plug 8 by 10 inches inserted. Mr. P. had this butt charged with powder, and after "touching off" the fuse, stood a short distance off to await the explosion and the splitting of the wood. When the explosion took place the plug was blown out with great force, passing a few inches over Mr. Peirce's head into the air about fifty feet, and came down some two hundred feet off.

The estates belonging to Mr. E. W. Jabobs, insolvent debtor, and recently advertised in the PRESS, were sold at public auction by Fowler & Kendall, last Friday, as follows:

A lot of land with house in rear of Beaver street to Mr. O'Hare.

A lot of land on corner of Goldthwait Court and Washington street to George Holman.

A lot of land on Clement Court to George W. Bancroft.

House and land on Andover street, near railroad, to Margaret Flynn.

Strip of land on east side of Endicott street to George Holman.

Land on west side of Endicott street to Mr. Seastream.

Also land on westerly side of Endicott street, two lots to John M. Berry and two to George Holman.

There is no field which offers such a wide range for adventure to the average school boy as breaking windows. When there is nobody around to raise any objections the sport, it is true, is somewhat tame and uninteresting in a degree, but still there is some fun in it—for the time being. This is even so at our High School, where the boys agree to an assessment to pay for all the glass that is broken while playing ball, and he isn't much of a marksman who can't knock a ball through a window occasionally. One of them broke two panes of glass at one recess last week.

We don't want to interfere with what is none of our business, but wouldn't it be a good plan for the Water Board to put on meters for all the new takers, (and there will no doubt be a good many after we get high service) and thus introduce a system that we shall have to adopt sooner or later. By using the meters the takers will be called upon to pay only for the amount of water actually used.

A base ball nine has been formed at the High School. They challenged the Holten High School Club of Danvers, and a match game was played on Carleton's field last Saturday, which resulted in a victory for the Danvers boys, the score standing 24 to 23 in ten innings. The Danvers boys have challenged the same nine to play a game at Danvers next Saturday afternoon.

Decoration Day.

GENERAL ORDERS No. 13 ISSUED BY THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF THE GRAND ARMY.

Gen. Louis Wagner, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, has issued general orders No. 13, as follows:

In accordance with our rules and regulations, Monday, the 30th day of May, will be observed as Memorial day, and the Grand Army of the Republic is invited to make such arrangements for its severest observance as will do fitting honor to the memories and resting places of our dead comrades; and it is hoped and expected that the several posts will so apportion and prepare for the work of visiting the different cemeteries that no grave of a soldier or sailor will be on that day without a floral token of remembrance.

To this end the co-operation of citizens, of churches, of schools and of benevolent societies should be invited, and, in towns where no posts are yet organized, the nearest post should, through correspondence or personal solicitation by committees, secure a proper observance.

It is further suggested that each post attend divine service on Sunday, May 29, as a fitting preparation for the solemn duties of the dawn.

It is now 13 years since this Memorial Day was instituted, and that which seemed to many of doubtful propriety, has steadily grown in public favor, and has been more and more generally observed.

Each year we are called on to visit hundreds of new graves; the graves of comrades who have met with us in our post rooms, many of them foremost in Grand Army work, but who have gone before to the reunion of the Grand Army above, reminding us how rapidly our ranks are being thinned by death, and binding us more firmly together as comrades.

Let this day speak to us of memories which enwreath an immortal renown, of a patriotism which was measured only by the nation's necessity, of the duty laid upon us to preserve untarnished the inheritance of valor and loyalty that has been left to us, that our conduct as citizens may make more honorable our services as defenders of the Union, and that all who assemble with us in memory of our dead may learn to love our country, to respect her laws, and to reverence her flag. As when the bugle sounded and the drums beat the "long roll," we know no distinction of class, of race, or of faith, so let us know no differences, sectional, partisan or religious, as we now recall the deeds and memories of our heroes; as we salute a flag that waves over a Union preserved; as we supplicate for the widow and the orphan, for ourselves and our homes, and for our country, the blessing of Almighty God.

Worldly Trifles.

Messrs. J. R. Bennett & Co., Muskegon, Mich., thus speak: St. Jacobs Oil is the best liniment around here. We sell more of it than of any other proprietary medicine we have in our store. Our customers are continually praising its effective qualities; and we think that it is the best remedy for rheumatism, neuralgia, etc., we have ever had in stock.—Muscatine (Iowa) Daily Journal.

☞ A purely vegetable medicine containing all the virtues of calomel without any of the injurious tendencies so justly dreaded by mankind. Simmons' Liver Regulator will be found prompt to start the secretions of the liver, and give a healthy tone to the entire system, without salivation or any injurious effects. When used as a cathartic, it in no wise disorders the system, nor does it produce any nausea or sick stomach when about to purge. It is so mild in its action as not to interfere with business or pleasure.

EDITORIAL APPROVAL.—Mr. W. J. Melvin, editor Warren, Mass., Herald, was cured of severe Neuralgia by the use of St. Jacobs Oil.—Troy (N. Y.) Press.

In the death of Lord Beaconsfield England has lost one of her most remarkable men of this or any age. Born of a proscribed race, his Jewish ancestors having been driven out of Christian Spain into Venice, and thence to more tolerant England, he rose by the force of his genius and indomitable will to be the leader of the proudest aristocracy and virtual head of the greatest nation of the earth. With a literary ability that placed him in the front rank of novelists and brought him fame and fortune that might have satisfied the most ambitious, he early adopted politics as the serious business of his life, in which he attained the most remarkable success and won the highest honors. His flinging down the gauntlet to the House of Commons by boldly declaring, while they hooted and derided him, that the time would come when they would hear him, showed that consciousness of ability and power that was the key to his wonderful career.

When Prime Minister the first time he won immediately the confidence of the people and the Queen, who, on his retirement, sought to confer a peerage on him, which he refused. Called the second time in 1874 to the leadership, he did more in the six years which he held the position for the prosperity and strength of England at home and abroad than any other man would have had the boldness, if the ability to do. As a fitting closing act for his ambitious career, he made Victoria Empress of India, the prestige of which title opens the way for England's growing power and influence throughout the East. Beaconsfield deserves kindly remembrance of Americans, as he has been ever friendly to our government, and sympathized with us during the rebellion. His splendid eulogy on Lincoln will never be forgotten. Of all his novels his first, Vivian Grey, of which himself was the hero, is the most celebrated; though his last, Endymion, of which he is also the hero, and written half a century later, will have a permanent value as giving an authentic inside view of English politics.

Everybody knows that Washington is a very pious city, especially during the session of Congress, but we think few were prepared for an exhibition of such superlative and exalted goodly goodness as the Washington Presbytery has shown in its recent trial of Rev. Charles B. Ramsdel. We chanced to glance at the middle of the report, and reading the violent denunciations of him and the oft reiterated assertions that the safety of the Church and the integrity of Christ's kingdom demanded his deposition from the pastorate and his expulsion from fellowship, we looked back to discover the nature of the charges, expecting to see in great head lines, if not murder, arson and burglary, at least forgery and adultery. Though it didn't appear that he had exactly committed any of those crimes, it seems he had married a Catholic lady! She is of high standing in Washington, a graduate of Notre Dame College, a devout Christian, an attendant on her husband's morning service, and a member of his Bible class, but is so depraved that she attends mass! Though it was voted that Mr. R. "had no moral right to marry a Catholic," a vote of deposition could not be carried, and the narrow-souled, bigoted minority have taken the case up to the Synod, from which, if beaten, they will go to the General Assembly.

Portrait of FAITH WHITCOMB, the Shakeress, the most successful nurse of the age, who is now accomplishing more good through the distribution of her medicine than all the doctors in the country.

SPECIAL TO LADIES!

FAITH WHITCOMB'S Shaker Liniment is a Sure and Certain Cure for Inflammation of the Womb and for the distressing Lame Back, from which the majority of American women suffer.

A Boston gentleman, well known in business circles—in fact, one of the largest advertisers of the city whose wife has suffered for four years with inflammation of the Womb with constant lameness in the back—employing the best regular Physicians—and afterwards the best Female Electric Physicians, expending vast sums of money with but little effect, has had no occasion to employ a Physician since commencing the use of last July. She is now well. She never has the Backache from which she was hardly ever free during the previous four years.

LADIES:—Instead of filling the stomach with wishy-washy medicines for so-called "Female Complaints," apply the proper remedy—externally—and you will obtain certain relief. Every regular Physician will tell you that the only wise treatment for the Inflamation of the Womb is by the external application of the proper remedies, and if you ask your Family Physician he will advise you to use FAITH WHITCOMB'S SHAKER LINIMENT, (to whom the recipe is open for examination.

INVALID LADIES

Who will send a postal card, simply bearing their address, will receive, prepaid by mail,

"FAITH WHITCOMB'S ADVICE TO MOTHERS," which every mother should read. Address, FAITH WHITCOMB'S Agency, Boston, Mass.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S

LINIMENT.

THE GREAT SHAKER REMEDY

FOR

Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Pains in the Spine, Inflammation of the Kidneys, Enlarged Glands, Toothache, Croup, Earache, Sprains, Chronic Diseases of the Joints and Muscles, Bruises, Backache, Soreness of the Chest, Gout, Quinsy, Sore Throat, Swellings, Burns and Scalds, Headache, Frosted Feet, Chilblains, and all diseases of an inflammatory order.

FOR TOOTHACHE.

Boston Dentists use it in their practice and recommend it to their patrons.

FROM THE CELEBRATED SURGEON DENTIST, U. K MAYO.

337 TREMONT ST. BOSTON, Aug 30, 1880.

I congratulate you upon the merited and enviable renown attained by your really valuable liniment. It is the most effective remedy for toothache that has ever come to my notice and I cheerfully recommend to my patrons. U. K MAYO.

IT WORKS LIKE MAGIC IN INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM.

For proof of which please read the following:—

214 CAMBRIDGE ST., BOSTON, Sept. 20, 1880.

I am astonished at the wonderful properties of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment. Three weeks ago I was attacked with Inflammatory Rheumatism, my head was swollen to double its usual size and the Pain was intense. The first application relieved the pain. In two weeks after using two 50 cent bottles of the Liniment I was entirely cured. Those who are familiar with the Inflammatory Rheumatism and the time which it generally runs will agree with me that the Shaker Liniment is a remarkable remedy, and I advise Rheumatics to use it. J. F. SAWTELL.

The Boston Evening Traveller in referring to the above case says:—

"The cure of Mr. Sawtell, the well known grocer, of inflammatory rheumatism, is creating a decided sensation at the West End. Several gentlemen from the Revere Houte, chronic Rheumatics, called upon Mr. Sawtell for confirmation of the rumors of his astonishing recovery and found that the facts had not been exaggerated. Such cures place Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment at the head of rheumatic remedies."

CROUP.

SAVE THE LITTLE ONES.

"If Faith Whitcomb's directions are followed not one case of croup in a thousand will prove fatal.

"He will give further proof if you will call upon him.

BOSTON, Nov. 1, 1880.

This certifies that my wife who had been a sufferer from Neuralgia for twenty years, was cured by the use of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and four applications cured my back which was so lame from Rheumatism that I could not move without pain. I assure sufferers from Neuralgia and Rheumatism that this Liniment will surely cure these diseases. I know it to be a fact that Mr. Lord, one of my neighbors at Greenwood who had been on crutches for fifteen years, and had unsuccessfully tried many remedies, obtained relief from less than one bottle of Shaker Liniment and Mrs. Wheeler of the same place another neighbor, a great sufferer from Chronic Rheumatism—is praising the Shaker Liniment in the strongest terms, for it the only remedy that would help her. I shall be g to give further proof of the value of this Liniment any sufferers who will call either upon me in Boston or at my house at Greenwood. A. HANSON.

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER.

You know Physicians are proverbially shy of anything like patent medicines. Doctor Sylvester is no exception to this rule; but when he saw the formula of "Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment" he said "that is all right, that is a good remedy." He prescribed it for me when I was next assailed by my old enemy Neuralgia, or rather Neuralgic Rheumatism, from which I have suffered much, especially from Neuralgia of the Heart. It was a severe attack and I feared a long illness, but I used the Liniment freely and began to find relief very soon. In a week I was WELL. Its effects are almost magical. I will cheerfully recommend it to my friends. C. A. SYLVESTER.

SHERBURNE, MASS., Nov. 2, 1880.

Dr. Sylvester the well-known Physician of Sherborn, gives the following statement:—

SHERBORN, MASS., Sept. 20, 1880.

This certifies that I have examined the formula of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and the ingredients are such that it must be of great value in Neuralgia and Rhumatism. I use it in my family and I recommend it to all sufferers from these diseases, for it is better than any Liniment that has ever come to my notice. W. P. SYLVESTER, M. D.

When regular Physicians recommend a remedy, and use it themselves in their families you may be sure it has unusual merit.

A well-known Sunday School Worker gives his evidence.

WOBURN, Aug. 24, 1880.

The Shaker Liniment cured my wife of an enlarged joint, from which she suffered for months. A few applications cured her. I also received almost immediate relief in a case of acute inflammation and my son received great benefit in a severe attack of rheumatism. As a family liniment I think it has no equal.

E. N. CUMMINGS.

"It cannot be recommended too highly as a family liniment.

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, Mass., Oct. 20, 1880.

I have used Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment for rheumatism with the happiest results, indeed it is the best liniment that I have ever used giving me quick relief. It is not only efficacious for rheumatism, but for strains, sprains, etc. It can not be recommended too highly as a family liniment. C. H. LEWIS.

It always relieves Neuralgia and if the application is continued a cure can be dependedupon.

[From Hon. A. Maynard, the extensive manufacturer and founder of the town of Maynard.]

ASSABET MILLS,

MAYNARD, Mass., Aug 24, 1880.

I gladly add my testimony to the value of the Shaker Liniment in case of Neuralgia and Rheumatism. By its use I obtained almost immediate relief, and unhesitatingly recommend it to my friends.

The late Herr Isidor Kraft, of Berlin, a wealthy philanthropist, has left behind him a will which would have rejoiced the soul of Tom Hood. He has ordered that half of his fortune of $250,000 be expended in the foundation of a fund for the assistance of poor needle-women, without regard to sect.

Seven years ago Albert Bristol, a young Vermonter, was obliged to take shelter from a Colorado snow storm in a sheep-ranche shed. From the accidental acquaintance formed with the proprietor he entered his employ, soon became a partner and in a few years owned 10,000 sheep. His three brothers emigrated to Colorado, and are now all prosperous sheep ranchers.

Some of the members of the Baltimore Corn Exchange are in the habit of whistling to call their clerks and messengers. Each has his peculiar whistle and it is instantly recognized by his employes. The practice makes the Exchange a pandemonium and the governing committee recently passed a law forbidding it. The whistlers refuse to obey, several fines have been imposed and the matter is to be taken into court.

The man-of-war Pyramus, captured by Nelson from the Danes in 1801, was sold a long ago in Halifax, N. S. She had served for some time as a training ship and was not reported at all unseaworthy. The ship which brought General Wolfe to Canada in 1758 is said to be still in active service, and it is only a few years ago that the vessel which brought over the Prince of Orange, afterward William III., in 1688, was broken up.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles were on their bridal tour, and had reached Marietta, Ohio, when Mr. Coons, the bride's divorced husband, presented himself and demanded possession of her. The rival claimants drew pistols, but were disarmed. Mr. Coons then went to consult with a lawyer, knowing that three hours would elapse before the couple could get away on the next regular train; but they chartered a special locomotive, and continued on their journey unhindered.

Some bunko swindlers at Cincinnati put a green farmer through the usual process of meeting a forgotten acquaintance, who had drawn a prize in a lottery; of going with this "steerer" to the den of the rascals, and being there induced to invest $50 in the bunko game. But at the point when he was expected to retire a quiet loser he drew a revolver, and declared, with many rural oaths, that he would have his money back or take every life in the place. He got his money.

Sir Alexander Cockburn, the late Chief Justice of England, thought more of the spirit than of the letter of the law. When an unknown barrister he was intrusted with the defense of a man who, having been forced into an encounter by a noted duelist, killed him. "Gentlemen," he said to the jury, "my learned friend has told you that this is murder, his Lordship will tell you that it is murder; I know that it is no murder, and you know that it is no murder." After these words the jury at once returned a verdict of not guilty.

MY WIFE'S BARGAINS.

I am the husband of a buyer of bargains. My wife has somewhere heard that a good housewife has never anything to purchase when it is wanted. The maxim is often in her mouth, and always in her head. She is not one of those philosophical talkers that speculate without practice, and learn sentences of wisdom only for the purpose of repeating them. She is always making additions to her stores; she never passes by a broker's shop but she spies something that may be wanted some time, and it is impossible to make her pass the door of a house where she hears goods selling by auction.

Whatever she thinks cheap she holds it the duty of an economist to buy, and in consequence of this maxim we are encumbered on every side with useless lumber.

The servants can scarcely reach their beds on account of the boxes and chests that surround them.

The carpenter is always employed in building closets, fixing cupboards, and fastening shelves; and my house has the appearance of a ship stored for a voyage to the colonies.

I had often observed that advertisements set her on fire, and therefore, pretending to emulate her laudable frugality, I forbade the newspaper to be taken any longer; but my precaution was vain. I know not by what fatality or by what confederacy every catalogue of genuine furniture comes to her hand, every advertisement of a warehouse newly-opened in her pocket-book; and she knows before any of her neighbors when the stock of any man leaving off trade is to be sold cheap for ready money.

Such intelligence is to my dear one the siren's song.

No engagement, no duty, no interest, can withhold her from a sale, from which she always returns, congratulating herself upon her dexterity as a buyer; the porter lays down his burden in the hall; she displays her new acquisitions, and spends the rest of the day in contriving where they shall be put.

As she cannot bear to have anything incomplete, one purchase necessitates another; she has twenty feather beds more than we can use, and, lately, another sale has provided her with a proportionate number of whitney blankets, a large roll of linen for sheets, and five quilts for each bed, which she bought because the seller told her if she would clear his hands he would let her have a bargain.

Thus, by hourly encroachments, my habitation is made narrower and narrower.

The dining-room is so crowded with tables that the dinner can scarcely be served; the parlor is decorated with so many piles of china that I dare not come within the door; at every turn of the stairs I have a clock; and half the windows of the upper floors are darkened that shelves may be set before them.

This, however, might be borne if she would gratify her own inclinations without opposing mine. But I who am idle, am luxurious, and she compels me to live upon salt provisions.

She knows the loss of buying in small quantities; we have therefore whole hogs and quarters of oxen; part of our meat is tainted before it is eaten and part is thrown away because it is spoiled; but she persists in her system, and will never buy anything by single pennyworth.

The common vice of those who are still grasping at more is to neglect that which they already possess, but from this failing my wife is free.

It is the great care of her life that the pieces of beef should be boiled in the order in which they are bought; that the last bag of peas shall not be opened till the first are eaten; that every feather bed shall be lain on in its turn; that the carpets should be taken out of the chests once a month, and brushed, and the rolls of linen opened now and then before the fire.

She is daily enquiring about the best traps for mice, and keeps the rooms always scented by fumigation to destroy the moths.

She employs workmen from time to time to adjust six clocks that never go, and clean five jacks that rest in the garret; and a woman in the next alley lives by scouring the brass and pewter which, when scoured, are only laid up again to tarnish.

She is always imagining some distant time in which she shall use whatever she accumulates. She has four looking-glasses which she cannot hang up in her house, but which will be handsome in more lofty rooms; and pays rent for the place of a vast copper in some warehouse, because, when we live in the country, we shall brew our own beer.

Of this life I have become tired, but know not how to change it. All the married men whom I consult advise me to have patience; but some old bachelors are of opinion that since she loves sales so well she should have a sale of her own; and I have, I think, resolved to open her hoards and advertise an auction.

There is in London a Cinderella Dancing Club. As the name indicates, all the dances break up at the hour of midnight. But to belong to this fraternity or sisterhood—for ladies are eligible—you must first establish your character as a proficient dancer by showing your ability to waltz up the ballroom, so as to never deviate from one plank. Then you have to perform the same feat, "doing the reverse."

All despotism is bad, but the worst is that which works with the machinery of freedom.

Men who avoid female society have dull perceptions and gross tastes.

PORTRAIT OF FAITH WHITCOMB,

THE WONDERFUL SHAKER NURSE,

WHOSE COUGH BALSAM

Is effecting cures that are almost miraculous.

Price, 50 cts. and $1.00.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S BALSAM

Is effecting cures of Consumption and Bronchitis that are almost miraculous. Among the vast number of testimonies that are flooding us from all over the country are the following recent ones. The originals with the owners' signatures, are open to your inspection.

No. 37 Court St., Boston, Mch. 15, '81.
My daughter was postrated with a terrible cough. All remedies failed, and we were discouraged; yet within one month after commencing the use of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam she is well. I will cheerfully answer all inquiries. B. A. CLARK.

Nantucket, March 8, 1881.
I have been very sick; I thought I would never get about again. My cough was very bad both day and night. I had but few moments rest until I commenced to use Faith Whitcomb's Balsam. As every thing else had failed, I tried that as a last resort. I have taken one small bottle and two-thirds of a large one, and my cough is nearly cured. I sleep all night, and midnight sweats have ceased. MRS. CHAS. G. GARDNER.

HARVARD COMMUNITY OF SHAKERS,
March 7, 1881.
The herbs of which Faith Whitcomb's Remedies are composed are gathered by the Harvard Community, and the public can depend upon their purity.
JOHN H. SPRAGUE.

If you are run down and have a poor appetite, be sure and take

FAITH WHITCOMB'S

Shaker Bitters.

Composed of CELERY, CHAMOMILE, SARSAPARILLA, HOPS, and other pure Shaker roots and herbs. Is an infallible cure for DYSPEPSIA, NERVOUS PROSTRATION, LIVER AND KIDNEY DISEASES, PARALYSIS, and all diseases arising from impure blood, overwork, worry and indigestion.

THE BEST SPRING MEDICINE.

HARVARD COMMUNITY OF SHAKERS,
March 5, 1881.
We use Faith Whitcomb's remedies ourselves in our community, and heartily recommend them for the diseases for which they are recommended.
ELIJAH MYRICK,
Trustee Harvard Community of Shakers.

Overworked Business Man,

STOP!

You need a mild stimulant to tone up your system. Faith Whitcomb's Bitters will sooth your nerves, give you peaceful sleep and an appetite that will astonish you. Sold by all druggists.

HOW TO JOIN THE SHAKERS.

Three copies of the "Illustrated History of the Shakers," from the time of their leaving England in 1774 until the present time, with garden, village, church and other engravings, conditions of membership, government, etc., mailed postpaid for one 3-cent stamp; 75 copies sent to schools and societies for 50 cents in stamps. Address Faith Whitcomb's Agent, Boston, or get it of your druggist free.

It is an undisputed fact that pure Shaker goods are popular everywhere, the public only requiring proof that the goods are genuine. Ample proof is given that Faith Whitcomb's remedies are genuine, and probably no medicines ever grew so rapidly in public favor as Faith Whitcomb's Bitters, which is the best spring medicine; Faith Whitcomb's Balsam, which cures coughs, colds and consumption, and her Shaker Liniment, which surely cures neuralgia and rheumatism, as thousands will testify. FAITH WHITCOMB'S REMEDIES are sold by all dealers in medicines.

SPILKER'S TOAST.—Maj. Spilker is a little man, very fat, very genial, and with a head as devoid of hair as a porcelain doorknob. His wife, Mrs. Algitha Spilker, is scrawny, sarcastic and deaf as a saw-log. A person could kick a tin bath-tub down the back stairs all night and Mrs. Spilker would snore like a base horn, in blissful ignorance of the noise, which proves that she is rather deaf.

There are two things in the world of which Mrs. Spilker is fond—a dinner party and her husband—she never fails to accept an invitation to the one or to carry the other with her. For the last twenty years this couple have been in regular attendance at every party given by their friends, and on these occasions Maj. Spilker, when called on for a toast, would always give one to "the babies" in such a happy style that it never failed to create a good deal of mirth. His wife, although she could not hear a word, knew what her husband's toast was, and, when he sat down, supplemented it by a few appropriate remarks in which she set forth his fondness for babies. Not long since they attended a dinner given by a friend up town, and unfortunately for Maj. Spilker and the assembled guests, he changed his toast without warning his wife of the fact, who, of course, thought her husband would confine himself to his regular subject.

"Now, Major Spilker," said Mrs. Barker, the hostess, as the dinner advanced, "it is your turn to give a toast, and pray say something complimentary to our sex."

"When my charming hostess," said the Major, rising, "requests me to do a thing, it is my duty to obey. Therefore I take pleasure in drinking the health of the ladies—God's best gift to man. The ladies who cherish us in prosperity, soothe us in adversity, and by their tender ministerings lighten the burden of life—I drink to the ladies."

When the applause subsided, Mrs. Spilker, ignorant of the true subject of the toast, but glowing with pride and admiration, said:

"Oh, Mrs. Barker, you don't know how fond the Major is of them. I've seen him have two or three of them in his lap at once, and—"

"Algitha!" gasped the Major.

"Just teasing the life out of the poor dear things. He is such a favorite with 'em, and every chance he gets he is sure to have 'em in his arms, or be romping with 'em. He's got the lovingest nature of any man I ever saw, and somehow they come to him when they won't to any one else."

Major Spilker fell back in the chair with a groan, and silence fell on the party like a pile driver.

THE MEN WHO CAUSE ACCIDENTS. It sometimes happens that the telegraph brings us the intelligence of a severe railway accident, and at once a certain class of people commence berating the particular railway company. It cannot be denied that in most instances blame does attach to the company, but not in the way that the rash grumbler puts it. The facts are that the details of a road, with its in-comings and out-goings of fast and slow trains, its lightning expresses and its snail-like heavy freights, are adjusted by men with large, clear brains, and with an exactness second only to the assay department of our mints. The rules and regulations laid down by these mathematically organized beings are infallible, but unfortunately the subordinates who are to carry out these regulations are not only fallible, but oftentimes singularly reckless and wilful. The blame that attaches to the companies is in respect of the the retention of any man who violates the discipline in the slightest degree, for unless he is trained to an absolute mechanical obedience, a railroad employe is worse than useless in an organization as dependant upon the exactness of all its parts as is a watch. Disregard of positive orders, or negligence in respect of general rules, is in nearly every instance the primary cause of a railroad disaster; and a close examination of the records of the men responsible for each particular calamity would doubtless show that in many small matters previously there had been shown a negligence of the strict letter of instructions. Each such deviation should be accurately noted and promptly rebuked, while evidence of an inherent disposition toward carelessness should work instant forfeiture of position. Drill is the soul of an army whose possible work is to take life; how much more important should it be held in respect of an army of employes whose main duty it should be to preserve the lives of the patrons of the road. There are born railroad men; there are trained railroad men too numerous to mention, but there is also a legion of men who will never become railroad men of any grade. These are the men who cause accidents.

A TIMELY SUGGESTION TO ADVERTISERS.—In selecting a newspaper, its general character must be carefully taken into account. Many newspapers are read in the horse-cars and in offices, which never find their way into the family. They are not permitted to approach the real source of shopping activities, and, if by chance, find their way there, as happens now and then, the advertisements which they contain are, in a certain sense, discredited and without the weight which good character and a pure, wholesome tone always gives to even the business columns of a sheet designed for circulation among intelligent and refined people. Besides knowing that the newspapers are the best means of advertising, and to pick out the best newspapers for his purpose, the successful advertiser fully appreciates the great importance of persistent advertising.—N. Y. Evening Post.

After wasting two months in trying to carry out the terms of a bargain with Mahone, the Republicans of the United States Senate have abandoned this purpose and agreed to proceed with the business to transact which the president called the extra session. Senator Dawes made the motion to go into executive session, and in alluding to the matter, the Herald says that senator, like the virtuons minded but frail admirer of young Don Juan, vowing "'I will ne'er consent'—consented." And we imagine that his determination to "renew the fight," after having yielded, will be about as fruitful as was Donna Julia's. To call the surrender "an intermission for executive business," which is just what the Republicans have refused to consider for the past six weeks, was very good, however, as a stroke of Yankee humor. We don't wonder that the Democrats smiled, though it must haue circumscribed their grins somewhat not to be allowed to celebrate their victory.

Five hundred acres of land around Yorktown have been purchased by the committee association formed to celebrate the centennial anniversary of Lord Cornwallis's surrender. The land will be beautifully laid off as a parade and camp ground for the French and American soldiers. The new buildings will be erected near the site of the village. Virginia is anticipating a lively celebration of this anniversary.

A fashion writer says: "For dancing, the short dress is almost universally adopted." This may do for the ballet, but in the ball-room the ladies go for nothing if she has no train to step on.

HIS SISTER-IN-LAW.—A funny story is told of Belva Lockwood, the female lawyer of Washington. A witty fellow was once her opposing counsel, and when he desired to refer to the Hon. Belva, was perplexed. He couldn't say "my brother," as he did when speaking of the lawyers who wore pants. He didn't like to say "my sister," out of respect to that expression. He sent a smile over the room by referring to Belva as "my sister-in-law," but she certainly looked daggers at him.

A CARD.

I wish to correct a report which seems to be quite generally circulated around town, that I have sold out my Rendering Works and given up the business. This is not so. The buildings advertised to be let, as recently occupied by me as Rendering Works, have never been used by me for that purpose since they were built, but merely as a store house during the remainder of my lease. Headquarters Dep't of Massachusetts,
GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC,
OFFICE, NO. 53 TREMONT STREET, ROOM 3.

General Orders } BOSTON, May 4, '81.
No. 4. }

In compliance with the Rules and Regulations of our Order, establishing the 30th day of May as a day to be observed by the Grand Army of the Republic in decorating the graves of our fallen comrades and companions-in-arms, and in response to General Order No. 13, from National Headquarters, the several Posts in this Department are directed to make such arrangements for a proper observance of the day as will best accommodate their respective localities and honor the memories of those whose loyalty and devotion to the land they loved, has secured to us the blessing of a free republican government.

As the day has been made a legal holiday by the Legislature of our State, it is hoped that every comrade will regard it as a sacred duty to forsake the busy haunts of trade, to forget the cares of daily life, and join with his Post in visiting the silent camping grounds of the dead.

Let the militia companies and the people generally be invited to participate with us; extend an invitation to the clergymen in your vicinity to remember in some appropriate manner on the Sabbath preceding Memorial Day, the great sacrifices made by the loyal people of our nation for human liberty and equal rights.

And, comrades, as we lay our tribute of love a respect upon the graves of our departed associates, let us not forget the thousands who sleep in unknown graves by the roadside, on the picket-line, and in the prison pens:

'FOR WHAT THEY WERE, AND ALL THEY DARED, REMEMBER THEM TO-DAY."

Reports of the proceedings had by the several Posts will be forwarded to these Headquarters.

Post Commanders will see that the provisions of this order are complied with.

By command of
GEORGE W. CREASY,
Department Commander.

"NO LICENSE."—In a recent issue we made mention that the town of Woburn had voted to grant no licenses; but the Advertiser of that place has very little faith in the efficaciousness of the new movement, for "notwithstanding there is no place in town licensed to sell liquor—not even an apothecary's shop—yet there is as much sold and drank as ever, and the police are powerless to remedy the evil or prevent it, and why? Simply because it is sold in private houses in out-of-the-way places, where the police have no right to enter without a warrant, and, although they may watch and be morally certain that liquor is being illegally sold, they cannot get valid evidence on which to obtain a warrant. So long as there are no licensed places to obtain liquor, those who are bound to have it go to those out-of-the-way places for it."

LOBSTERS. — The Legislature has enacted that any person who takes a lobster, from June 20 to Sept. 20, in the waters of this Commonwealth shall be punished for each offence by a fine of not less than $10 nor more than $100, or by imprisonment in the House of Correction for not less than one nor more than three months, and any one who buys, sells, or has in his possession a lobster taken in this Commonwealth shall forfeit for each offence a sum not less than $10, nor more than $50. The act is not to take effect until the year 1882.

In 1872 there were eight States living under the protection of the Prohibitory law, but according to United States revenue returns nearly one-sixth of the retail liquor sales in the whole country for that year were made in these eight States, amounting to $122,000,000. — This statement was made before the Congregational Club of Portland, Me., by Mr. Theodore C. Woodbury.

Salem's veteran milliners, Reith & Co., have a fine line of plain straw, chip and French lace bonnets, together with rich fancy ribbons, flowers, etc. Remember, Reith & Co.

Double Taxation.

What is meant by this term? Some learned (?) men maintain that there is no such thing. Let us see. A working man, who, by dint of hard labor and careful saving, has accumulated the sum of $500, builds a small house which costs $1500. He puts in his own $500 and hires the other thousand by giving a mortgage for that amount on the house. He is taxed for the full value of the house, $1500. The man of whom he hires his money is also taxed for the thousand dollar mortgage which he holds. Now, these two men, who previously paid a tax on but $1500 conjointly, have by their action laid themselves liable to be taxed for $2500 conjointly. Thus the State is a gainer by the transaction to the amount of the tax on a thousand dollars, although neither of the men taxed is worth a dollar more than he was before. To put it in a different way: The man who holds the mortgage pays the same amount that he has always done, while the man who is worth $500 is compelled to pay a tax upon $1500. Thus a poor man with but $500 who wishes to live in a house worth $1500 is obliged to not only pay interest money on the additional thousand, but also pay the State a premium for the privilege of doing so. Now learned lawyers may argue and expound. They may enter into the mazes of legal erudition to depths in which one not versed in their school would be bewildered, but they cannot convince the straightforward, logical, commonsense mind that there is nothing unjust here. This is a question where the judgment of the unschooled has shot straight to the true view, regardless of the difficulties in the way, while the educated and trained thinker has allowed himself to be drawn aside from the main point at issue, and is floundering about amongst what he terms the "difficulties" of legislating upon the matter. These "difficulties" have so blinded their eyes that they have lost sight of the fact that this system of taxation is very unjust, and because they do not straightway see their way to a better system, argue that the present one is good enough. The present system does discriminate in favor of the rich to the detriment of the poor. There can be no question about it. But we must continue to suffer it because a satisfactory solution of it presents "difficulties." We believe that they are mainly imaginary ones — most of them purely technical, that, as we have said above, prove stumbling blocks to the technically trained mind, but which are really comparatively easy to be overcome. Tax every man for the property of which he holds a deed. But if that man shows that the property is mortgaged, abate his tax by that amount, whatever it may be, and lay it upon the mortgagee. In no case abate a man's tax unless he gives the name of the party who holds the mortgage. If this is unconstitutional, amend the constitution. The constitution of this State is supposed to be founded on common sense and common justice, and it is neither just nor sensible to compel one man worth five hundred dollars to pay the same amount of tax as another worth fifteen hundred dollars, merely because he wishes to live in a house of that value. — Ipswich Chronicle.

The Dover N. H. Gazette regrets to lose Rev. C. A. Towne, who closed his labors on the Sunday previous to go to Salem, Mass. He has been about six years pastor of the Franklin-street Baptist Church. The Gazette says: "Many eyes moistened as he referred more particularly to his personal relations with the church then drawing to a close. He has not failed to make his influence for good felt in the community. With a liberal education, a good sermonizer, and an earnest worker, he has wrought much good in general, and strengthened the church of which he was pastor. During his stay here the house of worship has been remodeled, nearly seventy have been added to the church, and other evidences of prosperity are manifest."

SMART. — Last Wednesday, a man living on Sewall street, now in his seventy seventh year, walked to Salem, from thence to Danvers Plains, through Danversport, and returned by the same route, a distance of 22 miles, in search of another man.—So says the Marblehead Messenger.

Poet's Corner.

Longing.

BY JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL.

Of all the myriad moods of mind
  That through the mind come thronging,
Which one was e'er so dear, so kind,
  So beautiful as longing?
The thing we long for, that we are
  For one transcendent moment,
Before the present poor and bare
  Can make its sneering comment.

Still, through our paltry stir and strife,
  Glows down the wished ideal,
And longing molds in clay what life
  Carves in the marble real.
To let the new life in, we know
  Desire must ope the portal;
Perhaps the longing to be so
  Helps make the soul immortal.

Longing is God's fresh heavenward will;
  With our poor earthward striving,
We quench it that we may be still
  Content with merely living.
But would we learn that heart's full scope
  Which we are hourly wronging,
Our lives must climb from hope to hope
  And realize our longing.

Ah! let us hope that to our praise
  Good God only reckons
The moments when we tread His ways,
  But when the spirit beckons.
That some slight good is also wrought
  Beyond self-satisfaction,
When we are simply good in thought,
  Howe'er we feel in action.

There is a land of tears and bitter wailing—
  A land most like that drear one Dante knew,

  Compared with them the virgins five were wise—
And it is writ above its gloomy portals:

Selected Story.

Jennie's Graduation Dress.

"Now go on with you studying, Jennie. It's useless to discuss the matter."

"But, mother, I don't see—"

"Of course you don't see, dear, but when your father has decided, he has decided, you know. Don't think any more about it. Come, I can't spare you but fifteen minutes more. You must help me on Johnny's jacket—just the buttonholes, my eyes are so poor."

"Why don't you get Miss Stitchson to make the buttonholes?"

"Don't ask me. What did your father say yesterday noon, and again just now at supper-time? If you will make them I can get the jacket finished to-night. He needs it enough."

"Now, mother Mayberry, it's too bad! Tom's suit is shabby, but I don't believe he cares. One day more won't make much difference, anyway; and I will help on the buttonholes to-morrow afternoon if Prudy don't come for me to practice that duet with her."

"No, no, my dear. 'Never put off till to-morrow what can be done to-day'—grandma's motto, you know. I wish you would bear it in mind more than you do. There—now you musn't say another word—keep your thoughts on your lesson. I shan't speak for fifteen minutes."

At this Jennie resumed studying, for she was as desirous as her mother was for her to be correct in recitations. She had been dreading this last review in history, which was to determine her rank in schollarship. And her father was anxious that she should stand high at graduation—only three weeks hence. He had even taken pains to go over with her all the battles of the Rebellion and the events of the Franco-German war, dates were such a trouble to her; and taught her an old method of his own for memorizing such things accurately.

She went on patiently with the words of the book. But I am sorry to say her thoughts wandered to Prudence Winn's new dress, and to a small package in her pocket which she had not as yet had the courage — opportunity, she would have said—to show her mother; yet which she must see this very evening, if her long-cherished hopes were to be fulfilled.

A pencil was needed to mark the battle of the Wilderness for her memorizing method, and in taking it from her pocket out came the package also. Her pink cheeks took on a deeper hue as she hastily snatched at it before it fell to the floor, and there was a confused droop of her quivering eyelids before her mother's questionable glance. Not a word was said, but Mrs. Mayberry extended her hand and Jennie dared not ignore the unspoken request.

"What does this mean, daughter? Jordan & Marsh's shop bill—black silk—samples!" said Mrs. Mayberry slowly, as she unfolded the little package.

"I wanted to know what it would cost," came the reluctant words, as the girl's nervous fingers turned and returned the pages of her history. "Other girls, lots of them, do."

"Do what?"

"Send for samples."

"Without consulting their parents? I hope not, Jennie. How could you?"

There was no answer, and the question was repeated. But before she had time to reply Mr. Mayberry and Tommy—who had been busy over an hour in the barn looking after the comfort of the little heifer and Nan, her mother, and seeing that Jinks, the old roan, and Daisy, the pony, were all right, and everything about the premises snug and orderly—came hurriedly in.

Mr. Mayberry, quick to read faces, saw that.someting unpleasant was under consideration. Presuming it was the same subject—graduation and its expenses—which had been talked over at tea-time, he said: "I've been thinking it all over, Jennie. I can't bear to have you feel unhappy and dissatisfied, and instead of giving money for hiring music that day and evening, I'll let the class have the use of our piano—you and Prudie Winn can play well enough for anybody who'll be there. How do you like that? I'll take it to the schoolhouse, and back, too."

Jennie did not answer. She had recovered from her confusion, and only a sickly smile showed that she had understood his suggestion.

"A good idea—don't you think so, mother?" he added, with a little chirrupy laugh, which Mrs. Mayberry answered with another — but hers was forced and hollow.

Tommy saw the samples of silk, still in his mother's hand. "Something for my new jacket trimming, is it?" he asked.

"Oh, no. Jennie, you might as well tell you father about it," was the response, in low, sad tones.

Jennie began to cry.

"Hi! hi!" said her father cheerily. "This won't do for a seventeen-year-old young lady. What's up? I don't see anything to cry about. You're getting nervous, sis. To much study, I'm afraid. I shall be glad when you get through this terrible last term. But you're coming out well—that's not the trouble, I hope? Let's run over the battles again, so as to be sure of them." And he took up the book which she had pushed aside.

Mrs. Mayberry laid the strips of silk upon the book. "What do you think of those?" she said, gently.

"Those?" he asked. "Why, what are they? How came you by them?"

"Is it best for Jennie to have a graduation dress like either of them?"

"Our Jennie? Good grandmother of Methuselah! Our little Jennie rigged out like a fifty-year-old? You're joking, wife!"

Jennie had ceased crying and now looked up anxiously.

"Never was I more in earnest, John."

"Well, I don't pretend to know about these things. But you don't really want it, do you child? Such a gloomy thing. Why, you ought to have something bright and cheerful, then, it seems to me."

"It would be very serviceable," said Jennie, meekly.

"Serviceable — how?" queried her father. "Your mother's dresses are always serviceable—and they are not silk. And then look at the cost of it. Whew! Ten--fifteen dollars, I suppose."

"More than double than," returned Mrs. Mayberry.

"That settles the question. No, it will not be serviceable for my daughter—not at that price."

"But if I get the school at Stapleton?" asked Jennie.

"Ah! if! Time enough to talk about silk dresses when you've money that you don't know what to do with. If you do teach, you shan't begin for over a year."

"More than half the girls in our class will have silks for graduation, Prudy says, and—"

"I suppose she will; she looks like that kind of girl. And, as usual, her father is going to borrow my mowing machine next summer, and the new plough that I must buy in April. No, no, daughter, no black silk for you yet. However, let me see. I have it now! One of my happy thoughts—just in the nick of time, I declare!"

He drew out his pocket-book, and from its folds took several bank-bills. "Mr. Simonds paid for his hay this afternoon. I'm right glad to get the money just now.—was intending it for a certain purpose, a plan your mother and I had a while ago. But I've changed my mind within an hour, and, Jennie, if you'll wear the same dress you have on now—this neat grey flannel with the pretty pink neck-tie—at the graduation, you shall have every cent he paid me, to spend as you choose."

Jennie looked troubled.

"I'll be there to see," he added.—"Moreover and likewise," he continued, merrily, "Tommy and I will get as many spruce trees and as much evergreen to trim the school room as you will accept. And mother'll lend all her plants, every flower-pot, I've no doubt."

"Certainly, with pleasure," responded Mrs. Mayberry.

"The graduation, or commencement, rather—for then you will really begin your life as a woman," said Mr. Mayberry, "ought to be a joyful occasion. And yet a serious and thoughtful one, as you then lay aside childish things and take the first step toward the sober realities of life. And I want you to know, Jennie, that that first step will have much to do in determining your future course. Don't begin with show and extravagance then, even if you—that is, I—can afford it; it would not be right nor becoming."

"Mike Brae hasn't any overcoat, father, because Mary has got to have a new gown to graduate in," said Tommy.

"And Mrs. Drayton told me a fortnight ago, that Hannah had left the High School on account of the expense of graduation," said his mother.

"Well, I suppose there are others 'in the same box,' as Uncle Russell expressed it. He said to me the other day that he shouldn't be able to take up his note as soon as he expected, next month, his two boys' school expenses are so great this last term."

"All the girls are telling what they shall wear, and I thought—I expected—" began Jennie, in a trembling voice.

Her father interrupted her, placing the bank-bills in her hand.

"Think of it over to-night, dear.—You have had good teachers, and you are fond of them, I know, and are attached to your mates. Have had many happy hours in the old school room; will wish to look back on the last days spent there with pleasant memories. Spend the money—it is yours now—in a way that will give you the most delightful recollection."

"Now, please, let us drop the subject," said her mother, laying the samples on the work-stand, and taking up Tommy's jacket. "Am I to have your help on the buttonholes, dear?" she added, quietly.

Jennie gave her a bright smile, gathered up the bits of silk, went directly to the stove and threw them into the fire.

"Buttonholes, buttons — anything you say," was her answer, as she seated herself on a stool at her mother's side, that both might sew at the same time.

"How about your battles? Dates all right, daughter?" asked her father. "Let me hear them."

She recited them slowly and correctly, ending with a gay laugh, and—"I was determined to have them right."

"And you have succeeded. Add another—a victory for general good sense, at Mayberry Point. What's the date?"

"Never mind. Graduation day, we will call it, perhaps," and having clasped her purse with a vigorous snap, there was a twinkle of its steel rings as she slipped it into her pocket; and then her skillful fingers ran rapidly through the mazes of buttonhole stitch. So Tommy's jacket was finished, and he was glad enough to have it ready to wear the next day.

Graduation day was remarkably fair for March. The school-room was crowded with the parents and friends of the pupils. Everybody admired the decorations of evergreen and flowering plants, which Mr. Mayberry not only provided, but assisted in arranging.

Not one of the pupils passed more creditably through the exercises than Jennie Mayberry, and certainly no one looked prettier than she in her modest grey dress, with a pink bow at her throat. More than one among the gentlemen visitors inquired who that handsome girl in grey was—"and such easy, charming manners," added some.—"And such a fine scholar," said others.

The music—"only Jennie Mayberry's piano, and singing by the pupils"—was liked so well that a persistent encore of the last song brought its repetition, during which Mr. Mayberry, bearing a large package, passed slowly up one of the crowded aisles to the teachers' platform. When the singing ceased, all eyes turned in expectation toward him as he carefully unfolded a large picture from its wrappings.

It was a fine engraving, a portrait of Abraham Lincoln, in a beautiful frame. "My daughter's gift to the school, in memory of the pleasant hours here passed," said Mr. Mayberry to the principal.

A complete surprise was this, and everybody seemed astonished at the generous gift. In a few words Mr. Mayberry told the story of its purchase. Then it was hung on the wall back of the teachers' desks.

And that is the way that the change in the graduation exercises of the High school at Mayberry Point was brought about; and why the pupils wear their every day dresses, and furnish their own music, and make the decorations themselves for that occasion. The reason, too, that there is always such a large class to graduate; and that there is less love of dress and finery among the young people of that place; and such good books in its school library; and so many nice pictures on the school-room walls; and those two Rogers' groups in corners.

Anecdotes.

Missed the Masquerade.

"Say, my dear," said Mr. Spoopendyke, as he hurried in, hot and breathless, late from his business, "did you get me a fancy dress for the masquerade to-night?"

"It's all ready," replied Mrs. Spoopendyke, beaming. "You go as—let me see—I go as a Spanish guitar girl, and you go as—as—it's either Louis Fourteenth, or Oliver Cromwell, or Sir Robert Burns, I've forgotten which the man called it."

"I do, do I?" said Mr. Spoopendyke, glaring around. "I go as one of 'em, do I? As they are all dead, and as I will do for all three, p'raps you got a coffin. Show me the coffin. Fetch out the interconvertible catafalque and help me on with it. Has it got sleeves?"

"It isn't a coffin," explained Mrs. Spoopendyke. "It is a doublet, and—"

"It's a doublet, is it? Well, that relieves me of one of 'em. I thought from the way you spoke, Mrs. Spoopendyke, it was a triplet. Is there a trousers with it? Got a shirt? I told you to get me a bandit suit, didn't I? Fetch out this Cromwell business! Show me this man Burns! Any sword go with it?"

Mrs. Spoopendyke brought forth a worn red velvet jacket, trimmed with tarnished braid, and a pair of yellow knee breeches, slashed up the side. This she supplemented with a felt hat, and a pair of jack boots, armed with spurs.

"Maybe it is a bandit's suit, after all," she suggested.

"Which is the Louis Fourteenth end of this thing?" demanded Mr. Spoopendyke. "Where does the Oliver Cromwell part begin? Show me the Burns element on this schedule! If I'm going to get into this thing chronologically, I must begin with the measly king and wind off with the dod gasted poet; which is the king part?" and Mr. Spoopendyke shot out of his business suit and drew on the velvet trousers. "Where's the rest of 'em?" he demanded, surveying an expanse of unclothed limb. "This whole thing is only one leg. Where's the pair for the other leg? Give me some more trousers," and Mr. Spoopendyke scowled about him.

"Don't the boots come up to meet them?" asked Mrs. Spoopendyke, in some trepidation.

Mr. Spoopendyke pulled on the boots, but still there was an exposed space of nearly a foot.

"I s'pose this barelegged arrangement is the Burns part," grinned Mr. Spoopendyke. "He was a Highlander, and this much of me is Burns. Show me the Cromwell part now. Is that hat it?" and Mr. Spoopendyke put on the hat and breathed hard. "Where's the rest of me? My head and legs are all right; bring out my back and stomach!"

Mrs. Spoopendyke handed him the jacket and he plunged into with a jerk.

"That what you wanted?" he howled. "Couldn't you make more than three epochs of me? Didn't the man have but three historical dates? Pull that jacket down a couple of centuries, can't ye? Don't you see the bottom of the dod gasted thing is two hundred years from reaching the waistband of the Burns breeches?" and Mr. Spoopendyke tugged at the abbreviated coat and snorted with wrath.

"Maybe that was the way it was meant to go," argued Mrs. Spoopendyke. "I saw—"

"You sawed off the coat and pants, s'pose you saw off a rod of this hat and phtch 'em out again! When did Cromwell wear that hat? What kind of a bet did he win that on? Say, where's the scaffold that goes with these measly politicians? Fetch out the headsman!" and Mr. Spoopendyke danced into the closet and out again. "Where's the louse that goes with the Burns part? Bring me some Charles I. to hide my legs! 'Praise God from whom all blessings flow,' for man was made to mourn because his head was chopped off!" shrieked Mr. Spoopendyke, combining the historical ideas he represented in one grand yell. "Fetch me three suppers for one dod gasted old idiot that trusted his wife to find a suit for him!" and Mr. Spoopendyke thrust his arm to the shoulder through the covenanter's hat, and split the coat of the lamented Louis from tail to collar band. "Look out for some Scotch romance!" and he ripped off the pants and fired them into the grate. "Here comes another page in the annals of crime'" and the boots went out the window.

"And we—can't go—go to the—mas—masquerade at all!" sobbed Mrs. Spoopendyke.

"Write an epitaph on the back of my neck, and I'll go as a tombstone!" yawped Mr. Spoopendyke. "Put three bells in my side and a torn stair carpet at my back, and I'll go as a French flat! Discharge the hired girl and get up a cold dinner, and I'll go as a boarding-house! But if you think I'm going to any measly masquerade in bare legs like a baby, and bare backed like a circus, just to advertise a hymn book, a gin mill and a broad ax factory, you're left, Mrs. Spoopendyke. You hear me? You're left!" and Mr. Spoopendyke drew on his night shirt.

"It's too awfully mean for anything," mused Mrs. Spoopendyke, as she laid away the Spanish guitar girl's costume and warmed up her crimping pins. "I tried to get something that would suit him, and he don't appear pleased with it. Another time I'll get him a sheet and a pair of socks, so he can be a Roman senator, and if he is disappointed and tears 'em up it won't cost so much." With this profound reflection Mrs. Spoopendyke said her prayers, and planting her cold feet in Mr. Spoopendyke's stomach, sank gently to rest.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Between the 20th and 25th there will probably be cloudy weather with rain, and vegetation will have advanced considerably by the 24th of the month. Between the 20th and 25th the weather probably will be cool. The arrival of shadflies in Montreal will be reported about the 27th or 28th. The month will end hot and sultry.—From his Weather Almanac.

"STAR SERVICE."—The definition of the so-called "star" service, according to the dictionary of the post office department, is—Contracts for carrying the mail, other than by railway or steamboat, without other reference to the mode of transportation than may be necessary to provide for the due celerity, certainty and security thereof—so called from the fact that the printed contract forms are headed with stars in the following manner:

* * * * * *

—the three groups of stars representing the words celerity, certainty and security. These so-called star routes are not by any means confined to the sunset territories of Arizona and Montana. They are scattered all over the country, and in no section are they more numerous than in New England.

Agnes.

Sweet Agnes, most winsome, and gentle, and fair,
With roses twined brightly amid her dark hair,
Smiled roguishly down at the clear, bubbling spring,
And, filling her pitcher, did thus sweetly sing:

"Whoever at springtime a maiden shall woo,
Where musical waters are shimmering through
The rocks where an oak tree its shadow doth fling,
The same shall be wed ere the wane o. the spring."

I stepped from the shadow and smiled on the maid:
Perhaps the light kiss of the sunset had made
The beautiful flush on her forehead and cheek
Which deepened in tint as I hastened to speak.

"Fair Agnes, I woo you with vows that are true,
To be my sweet bride ere the springtime is through.
See! waters are rippling through rocks, and the shade,
Of yonder gnarled oak o'er the sweet spot is laid."

She pouted, and roguishly answered me "Nay,"
But warm in my fingers her little hand lay,
And closely I pressed it, and named the sweet day,
When Agnes beside me should linger alway.

Essie's Fortune.

"It's that old pain in my side again," said Essie Hooper, sadly.

She was sitting at the window where she always sat and sewed—a little, cooped-up spot, with a view of tin roofs, factory chimneys and the neighbors' back yards. Just above a stack of brick flues one could catch a solitary glimpse of silver clouds floating across the ethereal blue—and this was Essie's sole dream of rest and gladness.

A pale, violet-eyed girl, with red-brown hair, gathered into a net, and fitful shadows of color upon her cheek, she seemed scarcely more than a child in years. Life, however, begins early with the poor—and Essie Hooper had been earning her own living ever since she was twelve years old.

"You have been sitting too steadily, child," said Lucy Deall, her neighbor. "Here—jump up, and run around to the trimming-store for half a dozen cards of buttons to match this sample. Mrs. Peck told me to get them, but I guess you need the exercise more than I do."

Before Essie could get on her hat, however, the door opened and Mrs. Peck herself came in, with a troubled and pre-occupied look.

"Young women," said she, in her hard, business-like way of speaking, "I desire your attention for a few minutes."

"She's going to cut down our wages ten per cent," whispered Haddie Hall.

"She's going to clap on an extra hour to the day's work," murmured Jane Simpson, apprehensively.

"I regret to say," spoke up Mrs. Peck, "that business is decreasing, and times are dull, and I find it necessary to dispense with one of my hands. Miss Hooper, as the youngest, is the one upon whose dismissal I have decided."

Essie had turned very pale.

"Must I go?" she faltered.

"I am very sorry for it, my dear," said Mrs. Peck, who was, upon the whole, not a bad-hearted woman; "but I cannot possibly afford to keep on so many girls, and one must go, you see. And it's always the custom to send away the one who has been with you the shortest period of time."

She counted out the slender sum of money which was due to the girl, and stood calmly by, while Essie tied on her hat, took down her shawl, and mechanically bade the other girls adieu.

It was an every-day affair with her, this dismissal of a superfluous hand, and she never stopped to think what might possibly become of the poor, forlorn young creature who was thus set adrift on the world.

She had never troubled herself to ask any questions of her youngest apprentice, or she might have learned that Esther Hooper was quite alone and friendless in the world, except for an old aunt down in the country.

"Of course I must go to Aunt Jocasta," said Essie, to herself. "I have just money enough to take me to Butternut Vale, and Aunt Jocasta can at least advise me, if she can do nothing else."

But when she reached the old red farm-house on the edge of the pine thickets, it had been modernized by the addition of a fine new verandah and rustic fences of twisted cedar wood, and instead of Aunt Jocasta and her knitting-work at the window, she saw the dimpled faces of little children, standing on tiptoe to peep over the sill.

"Where is old Miss Hooper?" she asked of a smart young woman who was training sweet peas upon a home-made trellis.

"Miss Hooper!" echoed the woman, with a start. "Well, only to think of that. Don't you know? She's been dead for three months."

"Dead! My Aunt Jocasta," cried poor Essie, feeling as if all the world were in a whirl around her.

"Then you are the niece in New York," said the stranger. "They wrote to you, but I suppose the letter never can have reached you. It was a paralytic stroke; she only lived six hours, poor dear! And, after she was buried and the expenses paid, there was nothing left. My husband moved into the house last month—we have a three years' lease from the landlord," rather defiantly added the young woman, as if she wished old Jocasta Hooper's niece fully to understand that she, Mrs. Morris Mills, was no usurper there.

"Yes; I understand—I know," said Essie, feebly. "But I have come all the way from New York, and I am very tired. Might I stay here to-night?"

"And welcome," said Mrs. Mills, kindly. We've a house full of boarders coming to-morrow. Mr. Mills is acquainted with a doctor in Boston, who recommends all his ailing patients here, for the pine groves and the mountain air, you know; and there are two young theologians from the seminary who have engaged the top room, and an old gentleman who is wild about trout. So we're likely to be full enough by-and-by. But just to-night we've plenty of room."

But while Mrs. Mills was chatting on, and the children were making merry tumult over their toys, and the birds were singing in the woods, Essie's mind was busy with the ever-recurring question, "What am I to do? What is going to become of me?" Aunt Jocasta had not been much of a help to her, but she was something to cling to—and now she, too was gone.

"I might sell stencil-plates," she thought dreamily, to herself, "or turn book agent, or look out for a place in the woolen factories. But I am not so very strong; and I am afraid I have not courage and enterprise enough to make my living as a genteel peddler. Oh, dear—oh, dear! I don't see what I was put into this world for."

And a quiet tear or two trickled down her cheek, and dropped noiselessly into the bowl of hot water wherewith she was assisting Mrs. Mills to wash the supper dishes.

At sunset the young farmer himself came home—a stalwart, hearty, black-bearded specimen of humanity.

"Well, Polly," he said, as he acknowledged the introduction to Essie Hooper with a kindly nod, "I've engaged a first-class cook for you—a woman that has had lots of experience in Newport hotels, and wants to come up among the mountains for change of air; but as for waitresses and chambermaids, there wasn't one would consent to leave the city limits, though I offered 'em as high as two dollars a week."

Mrs. Mills' blooming countenance fell visibly.

"Oh, Morris, what am I to do?" she cried. "The chamber-work I might manage myself, but the waiting! And with twelve people coming to-night!"

At this, Essie Hooper spoke up:

"Could I do it?" said she, wistfully. "I am in need of employment of some kind."

"You?" cried Mrs. Mills. "But you are a lady."

"But why can't I be a waitress, too?" said Essie. "I must do something to earn my living."

"You are a darling!" said Mrs. Morris Mills, with a kiss. "And I do believe Providence has sent you straight here to help me out of my dilemma. Put on that big apron, and I'll show you about the china-closets at once."

It was hard work, but, after all, as Essie confessed to herself, it was not unpleasant. Miss Earle, the Boston beauty, turned up her Grecian nose at her, and old Mrs. Hallowell was perpetually finding fault because Esther didn't come quickly enough to her call, while Mr. Miggs, the vegetarian, harangued her on the proper preparation of salads, and Mrs. Jetsam and her daughters treated her as if she were the dust beneath their dainty French-booted feet. The first-class cook, who had been imported, was found senseless beneath the wash tubs, one day, with a black bottle clasped tenderly in her arms, and Mrs. Mills was compelled, perforce, to take her place, while Essie assumed the double duties of chambermaid waitress.

"What a very remarkable specimen of the New England young person that waitress-woman is!" said Miss Earle, one day, with a giggle, to Mr. Gerald, the young theologian, whom she had incidentally discovered to be rich and of a fine old family.

"Yes," said Mr. Gerald, "I think she is rather remarkable."

"Reads Hiawatha on the back doorstep when the dishes are washed," said Miss Earle. "Has a collection of rare dried ferns on the kitchen dresser, and trimmed a hat for Mrs. Mills as if Madame Navarro herself had trimmed it. Are all the farm-house waitresses like this?"

"I don't think they are," said Mr. Gerald.

When the summer was over, Mrs. Mills counted up her gains gleefully.

"We've made a success of it, my dear," said she to Essie. "And I'm quite willing to divide the profits with you—that is, if you'll promise to stay here and help me through the winter. The Thompsons are going to stay, and old Mrs. Hallowell, and—"

"I—I am afraid I couldn't stay," said Essie, coloring and downcast.

"You are not going back to dressmaking?" said Mrs. Mills.

"No," said Essie, in a low voice.

"Have you any other place in view?" urged the farmer's wife.

"No—that is, yes," confessed Essie. "To tell you the truth, I am going to be married."

"Well, I declare!" cried Mrs. Mills, a sudden blaze of light breaking in upon her brain. "Not to old Mr. Miggs?"

"Of course not."

"Mr. Pepper, the clerk in the bank?"

"Do you think I would marry him?" almost indignantly retorted Essie.

"Then it is—it must be Mr. Gerald."

And Essie could only hide her face on her friend's shoulder, and shed a few happy tears.

"But, my dear, he's rich," said Mrs. Mills.

"Yes, I know it," said Essie.

"And he belongs to one of the best families in the State."

"Yes."

"And Miss Earle has been laying steady siege to his heart ever since he came into the house," added Mrs. Mills.

"I don't know anything about that," said Essie. "I only know that he loves me."

And so our courageous little heroine passed out of the world of trials and troubles into woman's truest element—that of a beloved wife.

And Miss Earle thought it was very strange—she believed that society was all upside down nowadays.

CATARRH,

THROAT AFFECTIONS,
INCIPIENT CONSUMPTION,
BRONCHITIS,
ASTHMA,
DEAFNESS,
—AND—
DISEASES OF THE BLOOD AND NERVOUS SYSTEM, CURED BY

DR. A. P. LIGHTHILL,
No. 115 BOYLSTON STREET,
BOSTON.

Office hours from 8 A. M. until 12 M.

TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.

Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,
Universalist Pastor.

For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.
Peabody, Mass, June 27, 1879.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,
Of Beverly, Mass.

I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, CATARRH, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him: his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.
Beverly, Mass, Oct'r 29, 1879.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,
Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence, Ms.

My dear Dr. Lighthill,—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the larynx into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted, I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.
Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.
Lawrence, Nov. 4, 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,
Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.

The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celbrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.
I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.
I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.
R. S. LAMBERT.
Boston, Nov. 26, 1880.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.

From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,
Piano Manufacturer, 185 Washington St., Boston

Dr. Lighthill,—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.
I have the honor to be very truly yours,
A. M. McPHAIL, Jr.

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.

From Mrs. M. A. Emery.

Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends, and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,
Mrs. M. A. EMERY,
359 Lowell Street,
Lawrence, Sept. 21, 1880.

HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

A REMARKABLE CURE.

From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.

Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man. G. H. ROBINSON,
Methuen, Nov. 1st, 1880.

Please Remember—Dr. LIGHTHILL'S Office is at 115 Boylston Street, Boston.

Wednesday Evening, May 18, 1881.

The Legislative Session

was brought to a close at midnight on Friday, having lasted 129 days. Precisely at midnight the Secretary of the Commonwealth appeared and communicated from the Governor the fact that the Governor had signed 305 acts and 71 resolves, and had returned without his approval the resolve in relation to dock and elevator terminal facilities in the Port of Boston. His Excellency was pleased to prorogue the Legislature to Tuesday next preceding the second Wednesday in November next.

We subjoin a few of the provisions of law which have been enacted.

The smoking of tobacco or the drinking of intoxicating liquor in a polling place while an election is in progress is to be punished by the arrest of the offender and by the imposition upon him of a fine of not more than $20.

Damages of not less than $500 or more than $5000 may be recovered by action of tort for loss of a life caused by the negligence or carelessness of a railroad corporation, or by the unfitness for their duties of its servants or employes.

The penalties for drunkenness were fixed thus: A fine of $1 and such portion of the costs as the Court may determine for a first offence, a fine of $5 and costs for a second offence, and a fine of $10 and costs for a third offence. For second and third convictions the alternative of two months and of one year's imprisonment, respectively, is provided.

The law of 1880, prohibiting at the discretion of licensing boards the maintenance of any obstruction to public view of the premises upon which intoxicating liquors are sold, was made compulsory.

It is also enacted that applications for licenses to sell liquors shall be advertised; that an objection of an owner of real estate adjoining that upon which liquor is to be sold may prevent the issue of a license therefor; that licenses to sell liquors shall be granted only in those cities and towns in which there is a direct vote therefor; that in non-license municipalities club rooms in which liquors are disposed or sold shall be deemed common nuisances.

For the purpose of obviating the evils of double taxation, it was enacted that when any person has an interest in taxable real estate as holder of a mortgage, given to secure the payment of money, the amount of which is fixed and certain, the amount of said person's interest as mortgagee shall be assessed as real estate in the city or town where the land lies, and the mortgagor shall be assessed only for the value of said real estate less the mortgagee's interest in it, and that savings banks and institutions for savings, including the Massachusetts Hospital Life Insurance Company, shall not be required to pay to the Treasurer of the Commonwealth taxes upon such portions of their deposits as is invested in loans secured by mortgages of taxable real estate.

Among other acts it was provided that Memorial Day (May 30) shall be a legal holiday; that co-operative savings fund and loan associations shall invest only in first mortgages; that the Railroad Commissioners may authorize the running of such through trains on Sunday as the public necessity and convenience may require; that the sale, as butter or cheese, of any imitations of those substances shall be punished by a fine of $100 or imprisonment for thirty days for a first violation of the law, and by a fine of $200 or imprisonment for ninety days for each subsequent similar offence.

Gen. Butler is to present to the citizens of Newburyport a massive granite fountain shaped in the form of a cross, to be located on Market square.

OPPOSERS OF LICENSE. — Property holders who are opposed to Licensing will see by the Act passed last week by the Legislature that in case a protest is filed a person whose property adjoins can be prevented from receiving a license, providing said protest is filed within ten days after the publication of the application. The law provides that the Selectmen of towns, or other board authorized to grant licenses, shall publish a notice of the applications in their respective towns in such newspapers printed therein, and published not less frequently than once a week, as they may designate; said notice shall set forth the name of the applicant in full, and the character or class of the license applied for, and shall describe particularly the premises on which the license is to be exercised, designating the building or part of the building to be used. Notice of each and every applicant for a license shall be published at least ten days before the licensing board shall take action thereon, and the cost of publishing the notices of applications as required shall be paid in advance by the applicants for licenses. If at any time before the expiration of the ten days following the publication of the notice of an application for a license to sell intoxicating liquors, the owner of any real estate adjoining the premises described, in any application for a license to be exercised by a common victualler to sell liquor to be drunk on the premises, shall notify the licensing board in writing that he objects to the granting of the license, no license to sell intoxicating liquors to be drunk on the premises shall be granted.

"DONNA JUANITA." — Last Saturday we had the pleasure of attending the performance of Von Suppe's new opera, "Donna Juanita," at the Boston Theater. It is a German comic opera, made up of impressive choruses and charming melodies. The action is laid in 1796, during the Peninsular war. The plot turns upon the escapades of a French spy, who, in woman's guise and under the name of Donna Juanita, has entered San Sebastian, a town held by the British. There he finds his brother Gaston, whom the English hold prisoner. The warm greetings between Gaston and his disguised brother awaken the jealousy of Petritia, to whom Gaston is engaged, while the Alcade of the town and Col. Douglas, commander of the English troops, both fall in love with the French spy. The complications lead to many amusing scenes, until Donna Juniata (the spy), aided by Don Riego, a notary, succeeds in admitting the French army. Miss Jeannie Winston played the title role, singing the music very charmingly and acting with a great deal of humor, while the rest of the cast, the chorus and the orchestra, were very satisfactory.

Senators Conkling and Platt resigned their seats in the United States Senate on Monday. The reasons for the step are fully set forth in their letter of resignation to Governor Cornell of New York, published in the daily papers yesterday. The action of the gentlemen, viewed in a fair and impartial manner, would indicate a spite on their part against the present administration, because the President refuses to surrender to their control the duties and privileges of his office. It should be remembered that Mr. Garfield is the President of the United States, and the country should be with the administration in a fair and reasonable exercise of its just prerogatives. The New York Legislature will vote for two United States Senators to fill out the unexpired terms of Messrs. Conkling and Platt on Tuesday, May 31st, and it may safely be expected that both will be returned. This will simply be the verdict of a Legislature, while the whole country is with the administration and must in the end prevail.

The Merrimac Valley Visitor is publishing sketches of business men, and recently it gave a brief biography of one whose name is familliar to all readers of the newspapers throughout this county—Mr. John P. Peabody of Salem—and for the benefit of all young business men, concluding the biography as follows: "The secret of Mr. Peabody's success is honesty and squareness in all his transactions; extensive and persistent advertising of everything he has for sale, and then having it when called for; adopting the plan of quick sales and small profits; and above all attending to his business."

The Ideal Opera Company is at the Boston Theatre this week. Their stay is limited to this week, owing to positive engagements elsewhere, and music-loving people will doubtless enjoy every opportunity offered for hearing them in the excellent selections which make up the Ideal repertoire. The Saturday matinee will be Chimes of Normandy.

The Eastern Yacht Club will hold a regatta off Marblehead Neck June 10, and another regatta will be sailed June 17, for which great preparations are being made.

Good carpenters can find plenty of work in Peabody this season.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

By the politeness of Mr. Samuel Southwick, a member of the company, we were recently shown the elegantly furnished room of the Eagle Hose Company at the brick engine house, and were much pleased with what we saw and with the taste displayed in selecting and arranging everything. The floor has been newly carpeted by a handsome tapestry carpet of dark color and new design, from the store of Goldthwaite & Bixby, Salem. The room is furnished with neat black walnut chairs of rustic design, the seats being covered with hair cloth; a lounge to match is placed on each side of the room. These were from the furniture emporium of Packard & Co., Salem. New curtains (nicely lettered by Mr. George Hill) have been put up by Almy, Bigelow & Webber. The tables have been upholstered, and Bushby & Co. have supplied some fancy cuspidores. The "boys" are justly proud of their fine quarters, and they deserve just what they have got—the finest furnished room belonging to the department.

A party of five Peabody gentlemen—Messrs. B. D. Hill, William F. Sawyer, D. P. Grosvenor, Jr., Chas. E. Teague and F. E. Farnham—paid a visit to Pigeon Cove yesterday, to see the waves as they dashed with great fury against the rocks at that place. They came home very enthusiastic, and declare it the grandest sight they ever saw, and felt they were well repaid for their visit. Although the hotels are not yet open, they found one accommodating landlord, who furnished them all the refreshments desired. And let us stop right here. The reputation of some of those gentlemen as eaters will leave room for a generous public to draw on its imagination.

As Mr. James Crocker, a driver of one of Munroe & Arnold's express teams, was delivering a load of extract at the tannery of Mr. Joseph Harris, yesterday, he was thrown from the foot-board, and the wheels of the wagon, which contained some three thousand pounds of extract, passed over his legs, but, remarkable to say, without breaking a bone. His limbs were badly bruised and his wrist sprained in falling.

Last Saturday evening a party of ladies and gentlemen took passage in Quint's barge "Belle of Peabody" for Danvers, and paid a visit to Mrs. West, a former resident of this place. During the evening a fine easy chair was presented to the lady. The usual enjoyments were indulged in, consisting of plays, etc., and some very fine music, after which the company returned home at an early hour, well pleased with their visit.

Last Thursday Mr. William Donnell was delivering a barrel of vinegar at Ryan & Co.'s, on Foster street, when, as the barrel was rolled to the rear part of the wagon, the weight tipped up the front, the bolt having pulled out, and Mr. D. and the vinegar were thrown violently out. No serious damage was done however, except to the tail board; but it was a narrow escape.

Having added the past week to our already complete office a new Gordon Job Press, with the latest improvements, including steam attachments, we are better than ever prepared to do first-class job work of all description. As our presses are run by steam power, it will be seen that we can fill with promptness all orders entrusted to us.

The Spiritualists for Sunday evening, May 22d, have secured the services of Mrs. F. Dillingham, of Lynn, test medium, commencing at 7 1-2 o'clock, at their hall, corner of Washington and Mason streets. On Thursday evening, May 19th, there will be a meeting at the same hall. Addresses will be made by Dr. George Burdett, and other test mediums of Lynn.

On Wednesday evening last, May 11, Messrs. J. B. Reith, of Peabody, and Herbert Luscomb, of Salem, entertained a few of their gentleman friends at the Lafayette House, Salem. The above named gentlemen being soon to enter the matrimonial state, we hope and trust their whole lives will be years of as much happiness and joy as those few hours spent at the social board.

Mr. Cole, teacher of the Center School, will give an address in South Peabody Chapel, Sunday evening, May 22d, at 7.30, upon the "Work among the Freedmen." He speaks from his own experience, having been a laborer there, under the American Missionary Association. We are sure that all who attend will feel well repaid.

Nature looks greatly refreshed by the recent rains.

The return of the Ideal Colored Musical Combination on Saturday night, May 21st, at Peabody Institute, will be an occasion of much pleasure to the citizens of Peabody. This troupe comprises the following renowned artists: Mme. Marie Selika, Prima Donna Soprano, Isabella Miles Taylor, Alice J. Mink, Wallace King, Sampson Williams, J. M. Waddy, Fred P. White, Joseph R. Brindis, Violin Virtuoso, and Sam Lucas, the great colored comedian, and sketch artist. The programme consists of operatic selections and ballads, also gems of jubilee melodies and camp meeting hymns. Mr. Lucas will introduce an arrangement of refined humorous selections, including original character dialect, eccentricities and motto songs. None should fail to attend this entertainment, as it deserves a full house, and rarely does Peabody enjoy the opportunity of a visit from such eminent artists. Tickets for sale at B. F. Stevens', at 35 and 50 cents.

Packard's furniture team of Salem ran away on Holten street last Friday, and frightened the horse attached to Mr. James E. Trask's delivery wagon, which collided with a ladder placed against a house belonging to the Proctor estate, on which Mr. J. H. Hall, of Salem, was at work painting. He was thrown to the ground, receiving several severe injuries, and was conveyed to his home. At last accounts he was doing well, and it is hoped he is not injured internally.

Those who can and wish to contribute flowers for Decoration Day will confer a favor upon the committee by leaving the same at Sutton Hall, on Monday morning, May 30, between 7 and 10 o'clock A. M. All are earnestly requested (especially the ladies) to be present and assist in arranging wreaths, bouquets, etc., on Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings and Monday morning.

The lecture by Rev. Mr. Wood in the Baptist Vestry last Thursday evening was well attended, and the social at the close was a very pleasant affair, and netted about thirty dollars. This sum was presented to Mr. Eri Littlefield as a slight consideration for his kindness in leading the singing in the choir and Sunday-school, and other services which have always been willingly rendered by him.

Invitations were received in town to attend the wedding reception of Mr. Benj. S. Andrews and Miss Emma A. Farrington, both of Boston, which took place last evening, 17th inst. The groom is a son of Hon. I. W. Andrews, of Danvers. Invitations have also been received to attend the nuptials of Mr. Ralph Shaw, son of Mr. Benj F. Shaw, formerly of Peabody.

During the past two weeks open horse cars have been flickering like the ignus fatuus—now you see them, now you don't; and it has been better not to see them. But their full boom will soon be upon us, and the young sentimentalists of both sexes especially will rejoice on pleasant evenings.

Mrs. Martha Nador, a well-known professional nurse of Peabody, 63 years of age, fell on the stairs at a house on Essex street, Salem, where she was employed, causing a fracture of the ankle. She was conveyed to her home in Peabody.

The regular weekly meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union will commence until further notice at half past two o'clock. A full attendance of the members of the Union is especially requested for the next meeting, on Friday afternoon, May 20th.

The members of Truth Juvenile Temple, which formerly met in Temperance Hall, are requested to gather in the W. C. T. U. head-quarters, on Thursday (to-morrow) evening, at 7 1-2 o'clock. It is hoped all will be present.

Some one at our elbow suggests that it wouldn't be a bad idea to put seats around the flag-staff, he being reminded of it by the boxes placed there to keep pedestrians away from the paint.

It has been remarked that the devil could quote scripture. He must read up the improved text to quote correctly.

Mrs. Adam Grubb, 231 Walnut St., has been a great sufferer for a number of years from extreme pain in the feet, something like rheumatism. She was also very much troubled with corns and bunions. It was with great difficulty that she could walk, and sometimes when she would visit her husband's shoe store or any of her children's, she could not get home again without assistance, and often when she was walking along the streets she would be compelled to stop in at the neighbors' on the way until she got better. Some two weeks ago she heard of the wonderful cures St. Jacobs Oil was effecting and she at once commenced to use it and experienced great relief immediately. The pains have left her feet and ankles and the inflammation has left the corns and bunions. She is now tripping up to her husband's shoe store and out to see her children without experiencing any pain. — Wilmington (Del.) Daily Republican.

A Deadwood miner expired last week after a brief illness. He had had an argument in a barroom, and never rallied from the effects of it. His last words addressed to his wife were: "I ain't got nothin' agin no man, so don't you be foolin' around after another pard when I'm planted."

☞ Palpitation of the heart, tremblings, nervous headache, cold hands and feet, pain in the back, and other forms of weakness are relieved by Carter's Iron Pills, made specially for the blood, nerves and complexion.

The girl Tom Hancock wanted to marry at Indianapolis was only 15, and she said that he must wait at least two years. Then he asked her to kiss him, and she declared that he would have to wait for that, too. The second disappointment crushed him, and he committed suicide.

☞ A purely vegetable medicine containing all the virtues of calomel without any of the injurious tendencies so justly dreaded by mankind. Simmons' Liver Regulator will be found prompt to start the secretions of the liver, and give a healthy tone to the entire system, without salivation or any injurious effects. When used as a cathartic, it in no wise disorders the system, nor does it produce any nausea or sick stomach when about to purge. It is so mild in its action as not to interfere with business or pleasure.

HOW TO MAKE HOME HAPPY.—Don't live in the back end of your house. The boys will prefer the saloon to the kitchen. Don't be afraid of the coal bill or wood pile. It is cheaper to have a warm parlor than to pay liquor bills. Put books and papers on your tables instead of wine and cider. Clear brains will honor the family record more than drunkards. Marry into the Cheeryble family and keep clear of the Grumblers. Pull the latch string in for gossip, and hang it out for the poor, that yours may be a house of mercy.—In a dying world, don't spend too much time on ruffles and killing flies. Your children's bodies are of more value than fine clothes, lace curtains or Brussels carpets, and their minds and souls are of eternal worth. Don't starve to-day to riot to-morrow; don't hoard and scrimp for years that you may be generous in your graves. Be your own almoner, and see your children's happiness while they are still under the paternal roof. Better have a Sunday home service, than break up your own and your neighbor's Sabbath by visiting and dining that day. Money laid out in song books, organs, music teachers and tuners, pays compound interest; bringing health to body, quiet minds, balm to hearts, and make the home an ante-chamber to the choir above. Put your homes into close communication with the church, the school, and keep open house for every good and noble cause. Call to your aid every good agency that will make home life sweeter, and give the good control of your children's characters. The great things you are going to do for them in the future you had better swap off for the daily little attentions which feed the affections, and mould the character, and bind them to you by heart-cords that never break.

A lady friend of ours called the other day and stated that her husband had seen St. Jacob's Oil advertised in our paper; he used it for rheumatism and was convinced of its merits. — Cambridgeport (Mass.) American Protestant.

Courting by telephone does not sound well.

☞ If there ever was a specific for any one complaint, then Carter's Little Liver Pills are a specific for sick headache, and every woman should know this. Only one pill a dose.

One of the most exasperatingly humiliating moments of a man's life comes at about 2 a. m., when he gets on his front door stoop and finds that his night key is in his other vest.—Newark Sunday Call.

A Galveston colored servant, on her way home with a basket of pilfered groceries, meets a friend. "How is you comin' on wid dem white folks?" "I's gwine to leab 'em. Dey hasn't paid dar groceryman in sich a long time I's ashamed to meet him on de street."

The young milkman and his girl stood before the justice of the peace. "You take this milk—ahem!—this man for butter or for worse?" the mighty man of law inquired. The girl said it never a-curd to her before, but she supposed she would if that was the only whey.—Rockland Courier.

Carving isn't fun. A young man was invited to carve a turkey at dinner, recently, and before the knife was finally taken from him he had upset a glass of water, wrenched his shoulder, shot the bird across the table into a lady's lap, and nearly jabbed a man's eye out, and it wasn't a tough bird, either.

"Did you slip?" they asked the old gentleman as they picked him up. "Oh, no," he growled, "of course not. I was trying to see if I could sit down on that coal-hole top hard enough to break it. Did it just for the fun of the thing." And he glared at them savagely, and they somehow felt mighty foolish.—Boston Post.

Slightly sarcastic was the clergyman who paused and addressed a man coming into church after the sermon had begun, with the remark: "Glad to see you, sir; come in; always glad to see those here late who can't come early." And decidedly self-possessed was the man thus addressed in the presence of an astonished congregation, as he responded: "Thank you; would you favor me with the text?"

Fitznoodle was out again worrying the life out of the ducks with his shotgun. He blazed away at some ducks, and an unseen man on the other side of the pond rose up, threateningly, with a long gun, and called out, "Did you shoot at me?" "Did any of the shot hit you?" inquired Fitznoodle. "Yes, they did," said the man, rubbing his legs. "Then you may be certain I didn't shoot at you. I never hit anything I shoot at."

Sandy Lake, in Mercer county, covers about two acres of ground, but is as pretty as a young girl's fresh face in a pink hood. Its smallness, however, excited the contempt of a sailor who visited it last summer. When taking a boat ride one of his companions spoke of the probabilites of drowning in it, when the sailor said: "Drown? Hump! If I fell in here and couldn't swim I'd drink the lake up and walk to shore on the dry bottom."—Oil City Derrick.

There is a Judge in Galveston whose head is as bald as that of an American eagle. A little boy living next door has got it into his head that lack of hair is inseparably connected with the title of Judge. Consequently, when a lawyer, whose head is densely covered with hair, called and was addressed as "Judge," little Tommy shook his head and said: "You ain't no Judge; can't fool me." "Why am I no Judge?" "'Cos yer hair ain't parted wide enough," was the guileless reply.—Galveston News.

A noise was heard on deck, the dog-watch sprang from his caboose, seized the gig-whip, and, laying it over the dead eyes of the buoy, made him shin up the bowsprit, catch hold of the sky-scraper, which he used so freely on the keelson that he rubbed off the shoe of the anchor, which was caught by the cat harpings, who commenced to spanker with the boom, till she burst through the stays, cutting the topsail ties, grabbed the monkey's tail, which knocked the Jew's eye out of the Turk's head, caught the ship round the waist with one hand, boxed the compass with the other, till the cook cued and the captain applied the leaches of the foresail to the inflamed eye of the astonished needle.

Portrait of FAITH WHITCOMB, the Shakeress, the most successful nurse of the age, who is now accomplishing more good through the distribution of her medicine than all the doctors in the country.

SPECIAL TO LADIES!

FAITH WHITCOMB'S Shaker Liniment is a Sure and Certain Cure for Inflammation of the Womb and for the distressing Lame Back, from which the majority of American women suffer.

A Boston gentleman, well known in business circles—in fact, one of the largest advertisers of the city whose wife has suffered for four years with inflammation of the Womb with constant lameness in the back—employing the best regular Physicians—and afterwards the best Female Electric Physicians, expending vast sums of money with but little effect, has had no occasion to employ a Physician since commencing the use of last July. She is now well. She never has the Backache from which she was hardly ever free during the previous four years.

LADIES:—Instead of filling the stomach with wishy-washy medicines for so-called "Female Complaints," apply the proper remedy—externally—and you will obtain certain relief. Every regular Physician will tell you that the only wise treatment for the Inflamation of the Womb is by the external application of the proper remedies, and if you ask your Family Physician he will advise you to use FAITH WHITCOMB'S SHAKER LINIMENT, (to whom the recipe is open for examination.

INVALID LADIES

Who will send a postal card, simply bearing their address, will receive, prepaid by mail,

"FAITH WHITCOMB'S ADVICE TO MOTHERS,"

which every mother should read. Address, FAITH WHITCOMB'S Agency, Boston, Mass.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S
LINIMENT.

THE GREAT SHAKER REMEDY
FOR
Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Pains in the Spine, Inflammation of the Kidneys, Enlarged Glands, Toothache, Croup, Earache, Sprains, Chronic Diseases of the Joints and Muscles, Bruises, Backache, Soreness of the Chest, Gout, Quinsy, Sore Throat, Swellings, Burns and Scalds, Headache, Frosted Feet, Chilblains, and all diseases of an inflammatory order.

FOR TOOTHACHE.

Boston Dentists use it in their practice and recommend it to their patrons.

FROM THE CELEBRATED SURGEON DENTIST, U. K. MAYO.

337 TREMONT ST. BOSTON, Aug 30, 1880.

I congratulate you upon the merited and enviable renown attained by your really valuable liniment. It is the most effective remedy for toothache that has ever come to my notice and I cheerfully recommend to my patrons. U. K. MAYO.

IT WORKS LIKE MAGIC IN INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM.

For proof of which please read the following:—

214 CAMBRIDGE ST., BOSTON, Sept. 20, 1880.

I am astonished at the wonderful properties of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment. Three weeks ago I was attacked with Inflammatory Rheumatism, my head was swollen to double its usual size and the Pain was intense. The first application relieved the pain. In two weeks after using two 50 cent bottles of the Liniment I was entirely cured. Those who are familiar with the Inflammatory Rheumatism and the time which it generally runs will agree with me that the Shaker Liniment is a remarkable remedy and I advise Rheumatics to use it. J. F. SAWTELL.

The Boston Evening Traveller in referring to the above case says:—

"The cure of Mr. Sawtell, the well known grocer, of inflammatory rheumatism, is creating a decided sensation at the West End. Several gentlemen from the Revere House, chronic Rheumatics, called upon Mr. Sawtell for confirmation of the rumors of his astonishing recovery and found that the facts had not been exaggerated. Such cures place Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment at the head of rheumatic remedies."

CROUP.

SAVE THE LITTLE ONES.

"If Faith Whitcomb's directions are followed not one case of croup in a thousand will prove fatal.

"He will give further proof if you will call upon him

BOSTON, Nov. 1, 1880.

This certifies that my wife who had been a sufferer from Neuralgia for twenty years, was cured by the use of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and four applications cured my back which was so lame from Rheumatism that I could not move without pain. I assure sufferers from Neuralgia and Rheumatism that this Liniment will surely cure these diseases. I know it to be a fact that Mr. Lord, one of my neighbors at Greenwood who had been on crutches for fifteen years, and had unsuccessfully tried many remedies, obtained relief from less than one bottle of Shaker Liniment; and Mrs. Wheeler of the same place another neighbor, a great sufferer from Chronic Rheumatism—is praising the Shaker Liniment in the strongest terms, for it is the only remedy that would help her. I shall be glad to give further proof of the value of this Liniment to any sufferers who will call either upon me in Boston or at my house at Greenwood. A. HANSON.

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER.

You know Physicians are proverbially shy of anything like patent medicines. Doctor Sylvester is no exception to this rule; but when he saw the formula of "Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment" he said "that is all right, that is a good remedy." He prescribed it for me when I was next assailed by my old enemy Neuralgia, or rather Neuralgic Rheumatism, from which I have suffered much, especially from Neuralgia of the Heart. It was a severe attack and I feared a long illness, but I used the Liniment freely and began to find relief very soon. In a week I was WELL. Its effects are almost magical. I will cheerfully recommend it to my friends. C. A. SYLVESTER.

SHERBURNE, MASS., Nov. 2, 1880.

Dr. Sylvester the well-known Physician of Sherborn, gives the following statement:—

SHERBORN, MASS., Sept. 20, 1880.

This certifies that I have examined the formula of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and the ingredients are such that it must be of great value in Neuralgia and Rhumatism. I use it in my family and I recommend it to all sufferers from these diseases, for it is better than any Liniment that has ever come to my notice. W. P. SYLVESTER, M. D.

When regular Physicians recommend a remedy, and use it themselves in their families you may be sure it has unusual merit.

A well-known Sunday School Worker gives his evidence.

WOBURN, Aug. 24, 1880.

The Shaker Liniment cured my wife of an enlarged joint, from which she suffered for months. A few applications cured her. I also received almost immediate relief in a case of acute inflammation and my son received great benefit in a severe attack of rheumatism. As a family liniment I think it has no equal.

E. N. CUMMINGS.

"It cannot be recommended too highly as a family liniment.

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, Mass., Oct. 20, 1880.

I have used Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment for rheumatism with the happiest results, indeed it is the best liniment that I have ever used giving me quick relief. It is not only efficac

HOW A MEAN MEN GOT BEATEN.

Yesterday morning a poor man, who had just arrived in Little Rock, and who didn't have enough money to buy a cheese sandwich at half price, borrowed a shovel, and stopping in front of a wealthy man's house, shoveled the snow from the sidewalk. Then he rang the door bell. Colonel Slippery, the owner of the mansion, came to the door.

"If you please," said the poor man, "I have shoveled the snow from your sidewalk."

"If I please?"

"Yes, sir, if you please."

"Well, what are you going to do about it?"

"Being very hungry, I thought that you would give me 25 cents."

The colonel is the stingiest man in Arkansas, and the idea of surrendering 25 cents was a desperate one.

"See here," said the colonel, "I wanted that snow to stay where it was. If I hadn't wanted it on the sidewalk I should have put up a shed. I wish, sir, that all the snow in town had fallen there, for I was raised in the North, and this snow is the only Northern idea I have ever seen introduced here. I am half inclined to have you arrested for trespass. Put that snow back where you found it. Put every flake of it back."

The poor man turned around, and scooped up a shovel of snow, when the colonel exclaimed:

"Go ahead, I'll let you off."

The poor man went away, and the colonel chuckled over his breakfast.

"I saved twenty-five cents," he mused, as he passed through the gate and started uptown. "I was just thinking about hiring some one to clean it off."

The poor man went away, and after a time returned with a lot of tramps and shovels. When the colonel came home to dinner he found a bank of snow ten feet high in front of his door. He paid three dollars and a half to have it removed.—Little Rock Gazette.

COREAN TOYS.

The Corean aude, or boy, is very fond of playing with little dogs. He puts a coat on Master Puppy, teaching him to sit with his fore paws on his knees. When the dog grows up he may be trained to hunt the tiger. Tigers are very large and numerous in Corea. If you were to step into the parlor of a fine Corean house, you would see a tiger-skin spread out as a rug. On this the little boy plays, rollicking with his companions, or beats the drum, on which a dragon is painted. For a rattle, the Corean baby plays with the dried skin of a round-bodied fish, filled with beans. When the Corean boys wish to "play soldiers," or imitate the King's procession, they can beat the drum, blow the trumpet, and march with their spear-headed flags. These are made of silk, embroidered with flowers, and tipped with white horse hair. In the middle there will be the royal chariot with a top like a fringed umbrella, silken hangings on brass-bound wheels. In this the King rides. The big hats are as large as parasols, and have plumes of red horse hair. One has a flap around the edge to keep off the sun. The state umbrella, which is only held over men of high rank, is also tasseled with horse hair, dyed red. The Coreans are very fond of ornament, and all their flags, banners, and fine articles of use are decorated with horse hair, pheasant and peacock feathers, or tiger-tails.—St. Nicholas.

TIT FOR TAT.

An old lady of his flock once called upon Dr. Gill with a grievance. The doctor's neckbands were too long for her ideas of ministerial humility, and after a long harangue on the sin of pride, she intimated that she had brought her scissors with her, and would be pleased if her dear pastor would permit her to cut them down to her notions of propriety. The doctor not only listened patiently to her lecture, but handed over the offending white bands to operate upon. When she cut them to her satisfaction and returned the bibs, it was the doctor's turn. "Now," said he, "my good sister, you must do me a good turn also." "Yes, that I will, doctor; what can it be?" "Well, you have something about you which is a deal too long, and which causes me no end of trouble, and I should like to see it shorter." "Indeed, dear sir, I will not hesitate; what is it? Here are the scissors—use them as you please." "Come, then," said the sturdy divine, "good sister, put out your tongue."

GETTING EVEN WITH HIS TORMENTOR.

A friend of mine has a rough-haired collie, wise and exquisitely modeled. One evening a lady of the household, with whom he was a special favorite, stooped quietly, as he lay half asleep on the rug, and placing her face close to his head, blew sharply with a slight shout in one of his ears. Tickled and startled. he jumped up and moved off, seemingly somewhat offended. In the course of the evening the lady happened to be reclining in an easy-chair, when the collie was observed by some of the inmates to rise, and making a circuit, to move stealthily toward the chair, put his fore paws on one of the arms, and, placing his nose close to the lady's ear, to give a sharp bark and instantly bound off.—The Spectator.

No man or woman however humble can really be strong, gentle, pure and good, without the world being helped and comforted by the very existence of that goodness.

Thought is the father to the action.

AERIAL NAVIGATION.

It is hardly necessary to say that the introduction of a locomotive machine which would transport a large number of people through the air in any direction required, at the rate of thirty miles an hour, would be a startling novelty in our traveling arrangements. Let us glance at the advantages it would offer. Comparing it first with aquatic locomotion, it would be far quicker than any both hitherto made, vastly less expensive in first outlay and cost of working, would require no harbors, would produce no sea-sickness, and would escape the greatest dangers inherent in water navigation.

Viewing it, secondly, as a means of land transport, it would be quicker than common road traveling, and would compare favorably with the ordinary speed on railways, while it would entirely dispense with the enormous and costly provisions requisite for both these modes of getting over the ground, and be free from the multitude of liabilities to accident attending them. But it may naturally be objected that such a mode of locomotion would have peculiar dangers of its own.

No doubt balloons have hitherto been very subject to accidents, and the bare idea of anything going wrong at a height of thousands of feet above the earth, has in it something very appalling. But much of this impression will vanish before common sense reasoning. It must always be borne in mind that, for the purposes of locomotion there would be no reason for ascending high into the air; it would only be necessary to keep at a sufficient altitude to clear terrestrial impediments, and this would not only do away with much of the terror of the idea, but would greatly increase the probability of a safe escape from accidents of whatever kind.

Let us see in what direction danger might, in extreme cases, lie. The loss of gas, by rupture of the envelope or otherwise, is a remote possibility, but the experience of many actual cases has proved that the resistance of the air to the large surface exposed has sufficed to prevent any rapid fall; special measures might be easily provided, and at low elevations over land no serious catastrophe need be feared on this ground. In crossing over water precautions would still be possible, and the case would not be so hopeless as in many marine casualties. The danger of fire, if properly guarded against, need not be greater than in a ship at sea. Indeed, if we believe M. Giffard, who has tried the experiment, the idea of such a danger is quite an illusion.

The accidents that arise to ordinary balloons almost always occur in the descent, which, if the wind is high, requires great care and skillful management. In this case the propelling power would be most especially useful; the aeronaut could choose his place of landing with precision, and, by turning his head to the wind, he could avoid the dragging which is so dangerous, and which has so often brought a fatal termination to balloon voyages. The worst conjecture conceivable would be a break-down of the propelling machinery at a time when it was wanted to aid the descent in a gale. But the risk of such a break-down could be made very slight by ordinary mechanical precautions.

On the whole, there can be no good reason to believe that the dangers would be more formidable with this than with other kinds of locomotion, and when we remember the frightful casualties that so frequently now occur in land, river and sea traffic, and consider how many of their causes would be absent in the free paths of the air, we may probably even venture to assert that balloons would be the safest as well as the pleasantest mode of traveling.

As a set-off against all this, however, there is one great objection to aerial locomotion, namely, the uncertainty it must always be liable to in consequence of the effect of the wind. We must not ignore this; on the contrary, we will endeavor to estimate its exact value. We will assume that we can steam through the air in any direction at the rate of thirty miles an hour; but this will only count for useful locomotion in a dead calm; if there is any wind, by carrying the balloon along with it it will clearly influence both the effective direction and the effective speed.—Dr. William Pole, in Fortnightly Review.

STUDIES OF AFRICAN COSTUME.

Our second day's march from Pangani ended at sunset in the village of Kwamakumba, which, like Madanga, is situated in the heart of an impenetrable forest. In this place clothes are manifestly at a discount, especially among the ladies, who have nothing but a small piece of cloth hanging from their waists. This they never wash, nor do they ever sew rents. Hence their "dress" is generally one of simple shreds and tatters, kept together no one knows how. They prefer, moreover, the very thinnest of materials. Even gauze is not considered too airy a fabric. One young damsel sported as the sole apology for a garment the remnant of an old fishing net.—Good Words.

The sweetest life is to be ever making sacrifices; the hardest life a man can lead on earth, the most full of misery, is to be always doing his own will and seeking to please himself.

Virtue is the universal charm. Even its shadow is courted when the substance is wanting.

No man ever preaches his sermon well to others if he does not first preach it to his own heart.

A Naughty but Nice Church Choir.

You may organize a church choir and think you may have got it down fine, and that every member of it is pious and full of true goodness, and in such a moment as you think not you will find that one or more of them are full of the old Harry, and it will break out when you least expect it. There is no more beautiful sight to the student of nature than a church choir. To see the members sitting together, demure, devoted, and pious looking, you think that there is never a thought enters their mind that is not connected with singing anthems, but sometimes you get left.—There is one church choir in Milwaukee that is about as near perfect as a church choir can be. It has been organized for a long time, and never has quarreled, and the congregation swears by it. When the choir strikes a devotional attitute it is enough to make an ordinary Christian think of the angel band above, only the male singers wear whiskers, and the females wear fashionable clothes.

You would not think that this choir played tricks on each other during the sermon, but sometimes they do. The choir is furnished with the numbers of the hymns that are to be sung, by the minister, and they put a book mark in the book at the proper place. One morning they all got up to sing, when the soprano turned pale as an ace of spades dropped out of her hymn book, the alto nearly fainted when a queen of hearts dropped at her feet, and the rest of the pack was distributed around in the other books. They laid it upon the tenor, but he swore, while the minister was preaching, that he didn't know one card from another.

One morning last summer, after the tenor had been playing tricks all the spring on the rest of the choir, the soprano brought a chunk of shoemakers' wax to church. The tenor was arrayed like Solomon, in all his glory, with white pants and a Seymour coat. The tenor got up to see who the girl was who came in with the old lady, and while he was up the soprano put the shoemakers' wax on the chair, and the tenor sat down on it. They all saw it and they waited for the result. It was an awful long prayer, and the church was hot, the tenor was no iceberg himself, and shoemakers' wax melts at ninety-eight degrees Fahrenheit. The minister finally got to the amen, and read a hymn, the choir coughed and all rose up. The chair that the tenor was in stuck to him like a brother, and came right along and nearly broke his suspenders. It was the tenor to bat, and as the great organ struck up he pushed the chair off of his person, looked around to see if he had saved his pants, and began to sing, and the rest of the choir came near bursting. The tenor was called out on three strikes by the umpire, and the alto had to sail in, and while she was singing the tenor began to feel of first base to see what was the matter. When he got his hand on the shoemakers' warm wax his heart smote him and he looked daggers at the soprano, but she put on a pious look and got her mouth ready to sing "Hold the Fort." Well, the tenor sat down on a white handkerchief, before he went home, and he got home without anybody seeing him, and he has been, as the saying is, "laying for" the soprano ever since, to get even.

It is customary in all first class choirs for the male singers to furnish candy for the lady singers, and the other day the tenor went to a candy factory and had a peppermint lozenge made with about half a teaspoonful of cayenne pepper in the centre of it. On Christmas he took his lozenge to church and concluded to get even with the soprano if he died for it. Candy had been passed around, and just before the hymn was given out in which the soprano was to sing a solo, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," the wicked wretch gave her the loaded lozenge. She put it in her mouth and nibbled off the edges, and was rolling it as a sweet morsel under her tongue, when the organ struck up, and they all arose. While the choir was skirmishing on the first part of the verse and getting scored up for the solo, she chewed what was left of the candy and swallowed it. Well, if a Democratic torchlight procession had marched unbidden down her throat she couldn't have been any more astonished. She leaned over to pick up her handkerchief and spit the candy out, but there was enough pepper left around the selvage of her mouth to have pickled a peck of chow-chow. It was her turn to sing, and she rose and took the book; her eyes filled with tears, her voice trembled, her face was as red as a spankled lobster, and the way she sung that old hymn was a caution.—With a sweet tremolo she sung, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and the congregation was almost melted to tears. As she stopped, while the organist got in a little work, she turned her head, opened her mouth and blew out her breath with a "whoosh," to cool her mouth. The audience saw her wipe a tear away, but did not hear the sound of her voice as she "whooshed." She wiped out some of the pepper with her handkerchief, and sang the other verses with a good deal of fervor, and the choir sat down, all of the members looking at the soprano. She called for water. The noble tenor went and got it for her, and, after she had drank a couple of quarts, she whispered to him, "Young man, I will get even with you for that peppermint candy if I have to live a thousand years, and don't you forget it," and then they all sat down and looked pious, while the minister preached a most beautiful sermon on "Faith." We expect that tenor will be blown through the roof some Sunday morning, and the congregation will wonder what he is in such a hurry for.—Peck's Sun.

THE EXPLOSION OF THE DOTTEREL.—On the 26th of April an English man-of-war, the Dotterel, was blown up in the Straits of Magellan. She was a steamer of 1,137 tons, and had a crew of 156 men. The Admiralty in London learned on Tuesday of the disaster by way of Montevideo; and the London Times says that all but eleven persons of the crew perished.

The suddenness and the annihilating character of a catastrophe like this invest it with a peculiar terror; and the feeling is heightened in a case like that now made known to us by its absolute unexpectedness. Such things have happened in battle, as at the Nile, "when huge L'Orient blew up at once in the thickest of the fight." But every sailor knows that he goes into action with his life in his hand; and when Nelson led the way his men were not used to look for little peril. Among the chances of action that of explosion has, of course, to be reckoned on; and against explosion with other risks the warriors of the sea have a chance to prepare. Yet taking all things into account, and supposing every man engaged to have made such provision for sudden and violent death as conscience and training prescribe, there is something unspeakably awful in this special form of death. John Wilson in his strong poem was literally accurate, we may be sure, when he wrote of those present on the tremendous occasion we have named that "There was not one, they say, but paused and held his breath the while,

Though brave were they who fought that day
with Nelson at the Nile."

The facts sent by cable about the Dotterel are meagre, but, such as they are, further details can be gathered from them. If the explosion, as we surmise, was that of the ship's powder magazine it seems that the eleven men who were saved must have been absent from the vessel when she blew up. She is described as having been at a place call Sandy Point at the time of her destruction, and it is inferrable, from these connected circumstances, that she paused to effect some repairs, or that she needed wood or water; in which case the absence of the survivors was manifestly related to their ship's necessity. It will give slender comfort to the friends of the dead that some of their companions were saved; but it entails the melancholy advantage of supplying an explanation that otherwise would have remained forever unknown. The fact that of these eleven survivors four were officers—namely, the commander, the paymaster, an engineer and the carpenter—betters the chances that the explanation may be complete.

It is probable that, of the large number of vessels which, having sailed, are never again heard of, a few have been overtaken by a casualty such as destroyed the Dotterel. To the dangers of ordinary fire, of icebergs, and, through various causes, of foundering, men who sail in war ships have to add the further dismal chance that has now found example. The death in such cases must be as instantaneous as it is painless furnishes the sole compensation for an otherwise unmitigated horror.

THE TRUSTEE PROCESS. — The troubles of a trustee process and the iniquity of the law, as practiced by certain legal shysters in this city, may be well studied in the following case which has recently cropped out.

A doctor makes a claim for $1.50 for professional services against an operative.

$38 in wages were trusteed to secure the amount. A respectable (?) lawyer is the medium by which a man who only wants $1.50 can stop a poor fellow from getting $38 in wages.

A second trustee is put in, thus covering $58 to secure $1.50. The lawyers evidently wanted some plunder besides the petty little debt and legitimate costs.

Was it legal to issue two trustees for the same debt—and it such a trifling one and so well secured by the first dose?

The man lost his time, lost his work and couldn't get any of his money, because somebody wanted $1.50 out of it and the lawyers wanted to skin the remainder.

What sort of folks must they have been?

Anyhow, the victim of the conspiracy wasn't going to be plundered quietly. He engaged a shrewd lawyer from Gloucester, who brought him out clear.

He wasn't a lawyer practicing here and having an understanding with his brother practitioners as to the assisting one another in skinning both parties to a suit. He hadn't studied division, subtraction, and silence in legal matters, and, by some mistake, hurt the feelings of his brethren—and won the case.

His client got off by paying $1.50, and the lawyers had to whistle for their costs.

Madder men there were not in this city. They were surprised and indignant at the Gloucester chap—"which his name was Donahoe"—acting so meanly. If he had only kept quiet and not been so confounded fussy, that $58 would have been nicely melted down; adjournment after adjournment would have been had; costs would have been piled up, the plaintiff would have got his needs, all the lawyers would have got theirs, and the defendant would have learned that it is easier for a bobtailed mule to set up a revivalist than it is for a man to save a cent when a shyster lawyer is on the scent of it.

Even when he had won his case and got his discharge another avaricious deputy sub-assistant lawyer made another grab at the game. He tried to take from him the writ and to gouge him out of a dollar. They fought each other about it. The young man had got mad and waltzed the shyster around, and, rather than let him take the writ, put it in his mouth and stifled his own cuss-words with legal cap.

And then that Gloucester lawyer came upon the scene and waded into his unfledged brother, and shook him up, and told him that he'd ought to be ashamed of himself, and generally disorganized that embryo vulture until the young man wished he had never been born.

And at last the leeches had to let go, the legal coyotes had to vamoose, and, thanks to the Gloucester lawyer, the young man got his wages, the doctor got the $1.50 which he ought never to have gone to law for, and the lawyers got neither honor nor glory out of the case, and certainly didn't make much profit.—Fall River Advance.

What about that Fourth of July movement? It is time now to agitate. Peabody should celebrate so extensively that every four corners in the county can not afford to run opposition. Poet's Corner.

The Mistress of the House.

The guests have come, all silently they have waited,
Entering the noiseless hush with silent bows;
They linger for her coming, sore belated—
Where is the little mistress of the house?

She is not wont to leave her friends so lonely,
That come too seldom as she gaily vows;
Yet they are here, and wait her pleasure only:
Where is the little mistress of the house?

She cannot be far off—perhaps but sleeping;
Doubtless at their low call she would arouse;
Why do they summon her alone with weeping?
Where is the little mistress of the house?

The portraits stare behind their veiling covers;
The dust is in the melancholy room;
Upon the air a ghastly silence hovers;
Within the threshold loneliness and gloom.

Cold, dark and desolate the place without her,
Wanting her gentle smile, as each allows;
She bears a sunbeam light and warmth about her;
Where is the little mistress of the house?

The curtains fall, undraped by her slight fingers;
Behind the wainscot knaws a secret mouse;
Her treasures need her care, but still she lingers—
Where is the little mistress of the house?

Alas! there was a rumor and a whisper
Treading the busy town these many days;
The youngest baby here, a tiny lisper,
Can falter forth the reason why she stays.

Why care and love, the tenderest and sincerest,
Have failed to shield and guard her fair young head;
Why she has fled from all she loved the dearest;
For there has been a rumor she is dead.

Throw wide the door! Within the gloomy portal,
Where her small feet fell light as falling snow,
They bear her in, the mortal made immortal!
She comes again, but heavily and slow!

O empty shell! O beautiful frail prison!
Cold, white and vacant, tenantless and dumb,
From such poor clay as this Christ has arisen;
For such as this He shall in glory come.

But in the calm indifference to our sorrow,
In the sharp anguish of her parting breath,
In the dark gulf that hides her form tomorrow,
Thou hast thy victory, Grave! thy sting, O Death!

Yet shall she walk so fair that we who knew her
Would pale before the glory of her brows,
Nor in the radiant beauty dare to woo her
To be again the mistress of the house.

Selected Story.

MARRYING FOR HATE.

I was making my way through a crowd in a by-street, which I supposed had collected for the contemplation and enjoyment of some trifling and contemptible disturbance, but into which at the time I was in no mood to inquire, when my course was arrested by a pair of beautiful large black eyes under a lady's veil, which met mine with a mute appeal that I could not for a moment, resist.

"What is the matter?" I demanded at once, of the possessor of the bright black eyes.

"A remarkably sweet voice replied:

"I have ventured to interfere in behalf of a child I saw the people abusing, and I fear that, without some assistance, my efforts will be unavailing."

"We wasn't abusing it," cried several rough voices together. "She was only fighting with little Mike, and she'd a got the best of him, too, if ye'd let her alone."

"It is quite enough," said the lady with spirit, her splendid eyes flashing as she spoke, "that your sex should disgrace itself in this way. I shall not allow mine, especially such a little creature as this, to make a savage brute of itself; not if I can help it."

"You are right, madam," I said. "The man who would see your sex dragged into the prize-ring must have little respect for his own mother. You are Quixotic, however, to assume the duties of this child's natural protector. Where are its parents?"

"Dead," cried three other little children in chorus.

"Where—how does this little girl live, then?"

"She lives with Miss Fanny Flint, and does errands for her."

"What sort of person is she?" inquired the dark-eyed lady.

"She dresses finer than you do, ma'am," replied one of the female bystanders, "but she is not exactly the person to bring up a child in the way it should go, as she has strayed a long way out herself."

The pointed truthfulness of this remark raised a laugh among the acquaintances of Miss Fanny Flint.

The lady, in the meantime, had not let go her hold on the half-clad, sturdy little girl, whose face was flushed with passion and discolored with blood, dirt and tears. She stooped down to her now, raising her veil, and said:

"Little one, if you will go with me I will find you a good home. You shall have nice clothes, enough to eat, and be taught to read and write. What do you say?"

The sweetness and beauty of the lady's face surprised me: the child seemed quite overpowered by her gentle influence, and replied:

"Yes, ma'am, I will go with you anywhere."

At this conjuncture a policeman arrived on the spot, and the lady at once addressed herself to him, explaining the case, and shortly afterwards she walked away, leading her little charge, escorted by a guardian of the peace. Although much pressed for time I lingered to look after her till she turned the corner, for never had I seen a face that seemed half so lovely as hers, and it haunted me ever after.

I had, however, at the time, too many troubles of my own to afford time to look after those of others.—

A very long and most expensive lawsuit had exhausted the once handsome fortune that had long kept my family in so enviable position, and left nothing but fallacious hope and illusive expectations. My father had died during the slow progress of the litigation; the lawyer, who had commenced and so long conducted it, also deceased before its conclusion was reached, and it appeared too probable that my mother, too, would pass away without the satisfaction of knowing that so much money, thought, anxiety and suspense had not been entirely thrown away. She was very ill, and I foresaw with certainty that the slender thread which held her to this life would snap, if the final decision in our case, which it was believed would soon be rendered, should be against us; for it would necessitate the sale of all that remained to us and leave us little better than beggars. It was our last stake, upon which all our hopes and confidence had gradually concentrated, and if that were lost we had nothing else to lose—nothing but blank despair to encounter, which we durst not anticipate.

The lawyer who, at the first time, conducted our suit, was an old friend of my father's, successful, rich, independent and surly; and, as he had taken the case more from friendly than pecuniary motives, did not attempt to disguise the truth and probabilities from me; but I could not, would not, look forward to anything but triumph, and chose rather to regard his discouraging tone as one of the means he employed to enhance the value of his service in achieving success. He was a good man at heart, that old lawyer, and his penetration was wonderful; but he was not apt to spoil his medicine by oversweetening it, and my pampered palate rebelled not a little against its disgusting but wholesome bitterness.

I had a long hunt after an important female witness, whom I found at last in a garret, dying of consumption. And whom should I find, sitting like a ministering angel at her bedside, but the beautiful black-eyed lady whom I had lately met, the champion of the little abandoned orphan girl.

"It is in such places at this, where a good angel is more needed, and not in the circles of gayety and fashion, and I must seek you, I see," exclaimed I, gazing upon her with irrepressible admiration.

The lady blushed deeply; and, as soon as she had recovered from her momentary confusion, observed quietly, that she was simply performing a duty to which an old friend of her mother's was entitled.

While obtaining the deposition of her parent, I had several opportunities of conversing with this excellent beauty, and her modest elegance and graceful ease captivated my soul.

One evening I was permitted to accompany her in her search for an omnibus, and, as I had resolved to express my sentiments freely to her on the first available occasion, I was, as is usual in such cases, much embarassed when it presented itself.

"Your patient is dying, I fear."

"She is conscious of the approach of her deliverance; and as such she regards it."

"It is an angel's office you fill in soothing her path to the grave."

"Do not flatter me, sir. It is but little I can do, and flattery seems to me to make that little less than nothing."

"I assure you I express my admiration in most stinted terms; were I to tell you all I think and feel I might indeed surprise you."

"Then let me entreat your forbearance."

"It is unkind, not to say harsh, in you to forbid the utterance of a heart so sincere and full as mine."

"It is my kindness and my consideration for you that induce me to check this excessive laudation, because I know you will repent it."

"Impossible! I not only admire you more than any being I ever saw, but feel that you are worthy of my worship, and that I love you."

"Say no more, I entreat. If you knew who and what I am you would repent the folly of which you are guilty. You tell me you are unfortunate and unhappy; I pity you—but there is a gulf between us, and you would only render yourself more wretched by attempting, blindly and rashly, to cross it."

"Are you married?"

"Do not ask. Here let our acquaintance cease. You have no more occasion to visit my patient, and you surely would not deprive her of the presence of her last remaining friend, as you will do, if you persist in intruding upon her. Here then let us part, and forever."

She stopped a stage, allowed me to help her into it, and left me in misery and gloom. She had crossed my dark path, like a heavenly apparition, and her disappearance rendered everything about me hopeless and dreary as despair.

CHAPTER II.

The treacherous law, after having lured us on to ruin, decided against our claims, and extorted the last remnant of our property to pay its costs. To communicate this fact to my mother would have been like inflicting her death-blow, and, after meditating long upon the subject, found myself unequal to the painful task, and went once more to our old lawyer, to ascertain whether there was no possibility of compromising the matter so as to postpone the evil day and leave my mother awhile in possession of her home and comforts. I met a lady descending the stairs who had just come out of his office, whose physiognomy was of that unusually repulsive character which imprints itself indelibly on the memory, and even after, in dreams and reveries in sleep and in wakefulness, rises from time to time to our mental vision with horrible distinctness, shocking us with the fullest sense of the infernal ugliness of human malformation. I thought of the wonderful contrast between this unfortunate and the delicate beauty I loved in vain, and it seemed almost impossible that both could be the work of the same hands and Creator. Yet such were they; and why so contrasted he that made them alone can tell.

The old lawyer was in, and grasped my hand with sympathetic cordialty. I stated the object of my visit.

"Well, my young friend," said he, "I have anticipated your wishes, and have just been talking with the successful party. She is by no means inexorable; but, to tell the truth, there are no grounds of compromise left. You have lost all—the widow has won all. If she accords you anything, it will be simply a donation—nothing more nor less."

"Is there no resource left by which I can, for the time, ward off this final, and to my mother, I fear, fatal blow?"

"None in law."

"In what, then?"

"In yourself."

"How in myself?"

"In your person. You are young and handsome. I don't say so to flatter you, but to make my meaning clear."

"Well?"

"Well, marry the widow."

"That horrid creature!"

"Horrid? I see your taste and mine differ; but they say there is no disputing on such matters, and so we will not enter into a discussion upon the subject. As I apprehend, you came to me for some possible resource in your extremity, and not with the view of obtaining a matchless beauty."

"True, but—"

"Allow me, I mention this as the only resource left you. Be reasonable. If the lady be not perfection, so much the better, as it improves your chance. If you insist upon being saved from ruin and beggary by no one but a Venus, you are much too nice a gentleman for me to counsel, and had better address yourself for advice to Apollo and the nine Muses, instead of a blunt, matter-of-fact old lawyer like myself."

"Marry her! I would rather hang myself at once."

"You should know best how fit you are to die. I am afraid your education and habits have totally unfitted you for business and usefulness."

"But this marriage is absurd, impossible."

"I am not in the habit of proposing absurdities and impossibilities. If you will authorize me to act, you will find it no such thing. Will you do so?"

"Not for the world!"

"Understand that I have not urged this matter on your behalf, but for the sake of your mother and sister, especially on account of your mother, for whose life you pretended a moment ago to feel an amount of solicitude that would enable you to make any sacrifice."

"For the moment I did not think of them."

"It is time you did. Since my counsel is so very unpalatable, perhaps you will condescend to inform me what you propose to do."

"Anything else; but this is too horrible."

The old lawyer turned his chair round, and commenced writing at the desk as coolly, rapidly and correctly as if he had been an ingenious machine invented for no other purpose. I thought on his proposition till I grew sick and faint. The recollection of the consummate charms of her I loved added a horror to the aspect of hate, such as she wore whom I was invited to make my own, and I could not bring my heart or lips to say yes to such a destiny. At last I rose and said:

"I will call to-morrow and give you my decision."

"Very well," replied the old man, without turning his head or ceasing to write.

CHAPTER III.

I went home and attempted to prepare my mother for the ruin that had befallen us, but in approaching the subject found that it was more than she could endure, and relinquished the effort in despair. To my sister I ventured to tell the truth and she wept bitterly, not for herself, but for our only parent, whom she assured me would inevitably expire on hearing the news.

"Is there nothing on earth that you can do, Edward, to prevent it?"

"Yes."

"And won't you do it?"

"I cannot bring my mind to it."

"Is it dishonest?"

"N—o; I don't know that it is, but very repugnant to my feelings."

"I am sure I would do anything for mother."

"Would you marry the man you abhor?"

"To save mother's life—yes."

"Well, then, I will not be outdone by you in filial affection,"

"What do you mean, Edward?"

"I will tell you to-morrow. In the meantime, cheer up. I will save mother and you, but at a great sacrifice — heaven only knows how great."

My sister flung her arms about my neck, and kissed me affectionately, called me by many endearing names, and I felt as if I almost deserved them, exaggerated though they were.

I communicated my decision to my lawyer the next day, telling him that, since I could not marry for love, I would marry for hate. He uttered a sort of grunt, and replied:

"Few marriages begin in that way; but in too many love is merged in antipathy as soon as the honeymoon is well over. Your prospect of connubial happiness is the brighter, as it cannot change but for the better. If you knew the lady as well as I do you would entertain no misgivings on the subject."

On the second day after this interview I received Mrs. Barrington's card, and a written request from my lawyer that I would call upon her without delay, as he had settled the preliminaries in the most satisfactory manner. I did not fly on the wings of love to the stately mansion of my bride elect, but stalked thither like a man who had volunteered to be hung. On my arrival I was ushered into a handsome drawing-room, in which I was kept waiting for about a quarter of an hour, when, at last, the lady appeared. She did not look handsomer than when I had met her on the stairs leading to my lawyer's office. On the contrary the relation she now stood in with respect to myself, and the finery she had piled upon her person rendered her, in my eyes, more hideous than ever, I responded to her salutation, and remained silent for a few moments. She appeared desirous of manifesting a certain measure of maidenly coyness, and I was not indisposed to allow her all the leisure she required for the performance of the part.—When she had enacted the role to her satisfaction, and lost a little patience, she opened upon me with the voice of a dying screech-owl, that made me shudder:

"Well, Mr. Ingleton, the object of your visit is, I presume—"

"Yes, madam, it is as you say, to propose for hand and heart; they are conventionally supposed to go together—"

"My hand and heart!" she exclaimed, laughing.

Momus, god of mirth, what a laugh that was! A ruined hurdy-gurdy, a maniac's scream, and the serenade of a starving cat combined, were music to it.

"Yes, madam; and does this appear so absurd to you?"

"Extravagantly so."

"My lawyer has been authorized by me to make a formal proposition which he has given me to understand has been favorably received. Has he deceived me?"

"Not at all; but you have made a slight mistake in the person."

"Are you not Mrs. Barrington?"

"That is my name, but I presume you refer to my niece."

"This is very ridiculous. Shall I have the pleasure of seeing the right lady?"

"In a moment. She sent me to prepare you for her coming."

"I do not see the necessity."

"I presume not. I will explain, although the subject is a delicate one to handle. A better hearted girl than my niece Clara never lived, but she has some personal defects which, perhaps, only the eye of affection can overlook. I mean to say, for instance, she doesn't enjoy the same personal advantages as myself."

I looked at the speaker a moment in amazement, and an involuntary groan escaped my lips.

"It cannot be possible! Is she deformed?"

"Oh, no; she is as perfectly shaped as myself."

"Indeed! What is it, then?"

"A slight obliquity of vision, which adds a puzzling and peculiar expression to her eyes. Her hair is of that color against which there is a very unmerited popular prejudice, but, for myself, I think I never saw a finer or more brilliant red. With these exceptions, there exists a strong family likeness between us, especially as respects the width of the mouth, the roundness and heighth of the shoulders and the size of the feet."

What an image of horror was conjured up before me!

"Say no more!" I exclaimed wildly. "This suspense is too dreadful. Let me see the women herself, though the sight of her kill me."

Rupture

ITS RELIEF AND CURE AS CERTAIN AS DAY FOLLOWS DAY, WITHOUT ANY OPERATION OR HINDRANCE FROM LABOR.

Since the reduction of Dr. Sherman's terms, thousands are crowding upon him for treatment, gladly throwing away their griping, irksome, dispiriting and life-punishing trusses. His treatment for this affliction makes the patient comfortable and safe in the performance of every kind of exercise or labor. It is a grand thing, and those who are ruptured and do not provide themselves with it, must endure the dangers of the precarious affliction and the use of trusses all through life. Thousands of those cured give the most flattering testimonials of gratitude to Dr. Sherman. He is the author and inventor of his popular system; he imparts his secret to no one; it is applicable to all classes, and, under his reduced rate within the reach of almost every one.

Patients can receive treatment and leave for home the same day. Dr. Sherman's Book on Rupture gives convincing proofs from professional gentlemen and others of his successful treatment. It is illustrated with photograph pictures of bad cases before and after cure, and is sent to those who send 10 cents. Principal office, 251 Broadway, New York. Branch office, 43 Milk street, Boston. "Then turn and look upon thy death?" cried a sweet voice behind me, in a mock tragic tone, followed by a silvery ring of laughter.

I turned, and, to my inexpressible delight, beheld my adored black-eyed beauty!

"And you—you are—"

"Not Miss Eastburn, that was my maiden name, but Clara Barrington, widow."

I fell at her feet, half disposed to worship her, covered her hand with kisses, and, finding no resistance offered, sprang to my feet and clasped her in my arms.

"Clara Barrington, will you become Clara Ingleton?"

"In what excellent practice yo are! We shall have you proposing to the entire family. You have begun bravely; first to the aunt and then to the niece within five minutes. Aunt has fled, as well she may, from so dangerous a creature. What would have become of herhad I not rushed to the rescue, heaven only knows! I promise you I shall be dreadfully jealous of her and the superior personal advantages she enjoys."

"Oh, you have been playing a rare game with me."

"A fair one. I won your love fairly, and learned at the same time that there was right on your side as well as on mine; and I will be my own court of equity, and do justice more even-handed than the law."

"May I not praise you now?"

"No, but you may—"

"Do what?"

"Love me just as much as you please."

It does not necessarily follow because President Garfield has not conciliated Conkling, that therefore his administration is a failure. In Milton's Paradise Lost, there is a character who was not conciliated, and who preferred rather to rule in hell than serve in heaven. —Newburyport Herald.

Mayor Means is rigidly enforcing the Sunday law in Cincinnati. All theaters and saloons are now closed on the Lord's day. The Mayor has the Police Court with him.

The Rev. Edward Everett Hale is now mentioned in connection with the chaplaincy of Harvard. Two persons could hardly have been selected in succession for the post who differ so widely as Mr. Hale and the Rev. Phillips Brooks.

Some people ,says the Sunday Herald, have what may be called a disinterested malevolence. They hate merit and success instinctively in whomsoever they see an instance of either or both. The strong, the enthusiastic, the proud, are not envious or jealous. They have a self-consciousness of power and resource, which makes them laugh at temporary failure, certain that sooner or later, they shall or can win, if they choose to regard the game as worth the powder and effort to bag it.

Ss.—The meaning of the "ss." that occurs in all legal documents and advertising is not generally known. Many have inquired the use of the cabilistic device until the questions have gotten into the newspapers. A correspondent of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, after much research, has decided that the symbol is derived from the Latin phrase suos salutans—i. e., greeting or addressing its own, those within its jurisdiction.

The Salem Board of Aldermen have granted the barbers leave to withdraw upon their petition for the closing of barber's shops on Sunday, on the ground that the Board knew of no power it possessed to enforce the Sunday law, and there were proper officers to enforce it.

A new corporation has been recently organized in Boston with a capital of $1,000,000, to finish the bottoms of boots and shoes by a new invention. It is claimed that by the aid of the machine 600 to 800 boots can be finished by one operator in a single day, where 150 to 200 are now done by hand.

Does a man ever go into a grocery store and say, "I'll give you five cents a pound for sugar," and expect to be treated with respect? Not at all. He asks the price of sugar and pays what is asked or goes without. But the same man will offer a price twenty per cent. below rates for a given space in the advertising columns of a newspaper, and feel offended because it is not taken.—New Haven Register.

A San Francisco gentleman, while recently hunting in the marshes in Newark and Alvardo, discovered an enormous bed of oysters near the mouth of the Alvardo river, fully equal in quality to Eastern bivalves. That the Russian soldiers can be animated by something more than solid bravery is shown by the interesting fact which General Skobeleff recently mentioned, that twenty-six men of the Iver regiment of dragoons, selected for the much-coveted St. George's Cross, offered to forego these, that the gratuities secured thereby might be devoted to their wounded comrades.

A Bristol (Va.) dispatch to the St. Louis Post says: A remarkable story is told here by James M. The shower came down in slow and fine drizzle, plainly covering the objects on the field and the clothes of those who stood under the cloud. The Media (Pa.) American says: One day, a short time since, there was entered for recording at Recorder Blaine's office, in Media, by A. Lewis Smith, a deed of historic interest. The deed conveys four hundred acres of land in "Springtown township" to Mr. Hallowell at the price at one English shilling for every one hundred acres. Springtown is supposed to be Springfield township, as John Hallowell formerly held property in that and Darby township.

TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.

Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,

Universalist Pastor.

For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.
Peabody, Mass, June 27, 1879.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,

Of Beverly, Mass.

I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, CATARRH, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him; his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.
Beverly, Mass, Oct'r 29, 1879.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,

Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence, Ms.

My dear Dr. Lighthill,—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the larynx into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted, I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.
Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.
Lawrence, Nov. 4, 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,

Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.

The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celbrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.

I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.

I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.
R. S. LAMBERT.
Boston, Nov. 26, 1880.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.

From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,

Piano Manufacturer, 185 Washington St., Boston

Dr. Lighthill,—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.
I have the honor to be very truly yours,
A. M. McPHAIL, JR.

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.

From Mrs. M. A. Emery.

Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends, and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,
Mrs. M. A. EMERY,
339 Lowell Street,
Lawrence, Sept. 21, 1880.

HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

A REMARKABLE CURE.

From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.

Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man. G. H. ROBINSON,
Methuen, Nov. 1st, 1880.

Please Remember—Dr. LIGHTHILL'S Office is at 115 Boylston Street, Boston.

Our Fallen Heroes.

On Monday next the annual Memorial service will be observed in this town. The near approach of that day calls to mind the events of war, and we remember the anxious feeling that was then felt for those brave men who had gone forth to answer their country's call. They were our neighbors and our friends, those gallant soldiers who fought so well in the famous battles for the Union. The dead to whom the G. A. R. all over the country will do honor on that day are only the companions and comrades of those who survive. The deeds they performed are only deeds which those living performed with them. How they must remember those bloody fields of Antietam, Spottsylvania, Malvern Hill, the Wilderness, and Gettysburg! Their comrades fell in the fierce storm of battle, as a last sacrifice for the Union; many returned leaving a limb upon the battle field. They knew that their country and the perpetuity of her institutions were in those memorable conflicts, and they came out dearer to loyal freemen and more glorious with each victory won. When we look over our country and see its magnificent resources on land and sea, on lake and river; when we witness the grand march of progress and civilization in our great domain; when we see the magnitude of American industry, and manly courage to go higher and better in all things that make a people great, prosperous and independent—all grand results of the mighty struggle for National life—we cannot but think that the gallant men are not yet repaid and never can be by a grateful people. And those fallen heroes for a great cause, a self-sacrifice for all who live after them in this beautiful land, should be kindly remembered by the friends of liberty. We can do nothing for them but unite with the G. A. R. in this their tribute to their comrades and our friends, and thus on Memorial Day the whole country will show its devotion to their fidelity, suffering and death. But the maimed and crippled heroes living among us, we can care for them. A few years and the G. A. R. will be numbered with the past, as each year adds new names to the long list who have already gone. But let us always cherish their memory for their country's sake and their brave conduct in war.

Our serene neighbor, the Salem Gazette, indulges in the following innocent newspaper gossip:

A local newspaper deluge has set in, and the waters are still rising. Besides the News, last Saturday evening, "The Echo," of about the same size appeared, from the office of the Post, and it is to be published every Tuesday and Saturday evening. The Lynn City Item was "cried" in Salem on the same night. Another daily is announced to be devoted to affairs at the Willows, and the Lynn Item "hears" that Mr. Howard of the Press is going to start a daily.

DR. LORING has been appointed and confirmed Commissioner of Agriculture—a position he is eminently qualified to fill; even his most virulent enemies will admit this. No doubt, many of his zealous friends hereabouts would prefer to see him Governor of the old Bay State, yet at the same time, are highly pleased with the action of the President in selecting him to his present honorable position.

In the PRESS of Oct. 6th, 1880, giving the proceedings of the Sixth District Congressional Convention, the following headline, in bold type, appears, "Loring to have all his time for Agriculture." Once in a while we guess rightly.

It was not until Wednesday morning that the President sent for Gen. Le Duc, and requested his resignation, which was given with great reluctance. The "Patrons of Husbandry" had poured in petitions from their Western granges urging Le Duc's retention, while leading agriculturists in all sections not in that order had urged the appointment of Dr. Loring. Probably a letter from John G. Whittier had decisive weight in finally turning the scale. Le Duc is to remain in possession until the last day of June, and he will meanwhile visit California. Dr. Loring will go home next week, and return here before the 1st of July. He was thrown from his carriage a few days since, and sprained one of his ankles, but fortunately received no other injury. I shall not be surprised if President Garfield invites him, in time, to take a seat in his Cabinet, as President Jackson invited Postmaster General Barry, on the 29th of March, 1829. No legislation is necessary to authorize this. Nor shall I be surprised should the Doctor reappoint as his chief clerk, Mr. E. A. Carman, who was so unceremoniously "bounced" from that position by Gen. Le Duc a few weeks since.—Perley, in Boston Journal.

It is currently reported:

That it don't answer to be too certain of anything, unless you have the facts to back it up.

That it is one thing to make an assertion, and quite another to prove it.

That some people never intend to tell the truth.

That they don't seem to be built for that purpose.

That the presentation of a suitable spot of land for a site for a new Town Hall, would prove a very handsome gift

That it would be fully appreciated.

That the time to do this handsome thing is during the present year.

That the people would rejoice and the name of the donor would go down to posterity freighted with kindly remembrances.

That the people are just anxious to know who the man or woman is who will make this gift.

That many would walk several miles to have a chat with the said individual.

That they have the faith to believe their anticipations will be realized.

MR. EDITOR,—We learn with pleasure that Dr. George B. Loring has been appointed Commissioner of Agriculture; the farmers of Essex County, irrespective of party, believe him to be eminently fitted for the position, and feel that the scope of the department will be much enlarged under the Doctor's administration. It is well for the Agricultural as well as the Manufacturing interest of the country, that our President was so well able to judge of his fitness for the position. The farmers of Essex County will take the first opportunity of congratulating Dr. Loring upon his election to so high an office, and hope it will make him a member of the Cabinet. J. P. K.

STATE TAX.—The entire state tax for the year 1881 is $1,500,000. Of this $5475 is to be levied upon the town of Peabody, $3219 upon Danvers, $22,035 upon Salem. The smallest tax assessed upon any town in Essex County is that upon Middleton, $405; the largest that upon Lynn, $22,380. The smallest amount assessed upon any town in the state is $15, that upon Gay Head. Nahant, with scarcely a winter resident, pays nearly as much as the populous city of Newburyport; the tax upon the former being $6210, and that upon the latter, $6500.

LYNNFIELD.—The young ladies connected with the South Congregational Church have recently formed a sewing circle; its object is for social relations, and the proceeds, or profits, it is understood, is to be appropriated to the society's fund. It is hoped that the efforts made by the young ladies in this direction will have the hearty co-operation of the older people connected with this society, and be the means of drawing in many to associate and help them, that have no interest in the Church at the present time.

Redmond, the noted Salem artist, has painted a splendid sign for Mr. John P. Peabody, containing the comprehensive word, "Peabody's." It is 29 inches wide, and 36 feet in length. The ground-work is blue, the letters are in gold, each covering nearly four square feet. Essex street bears many fine specimens of Mr. Redmond's work, all attesting to superior skill in his profession. His studio is in Creamer Block, Salem.

It is reported that the G. A. R. of Marblehead, have hired the Salem Brass Band for Decoration Day.—Lynn Bee.

We can report, officially, that the Salem Brass Band will play for Union Post 50, G. A. R., of Peabody, on Decoration Day.

DECORATION DAY.—By the Statute Law of the State of Massachusetts the 30th day of May is now a legal holiday. The sentiment of the people, as expressed by the enactment, calls for a pause, a rest from the interminable rush of business, to contemplate for a moment the sacrifices of those whose lives and valor have made this nation possible; to recall the scenes and trials of the past in order that the lessons of patriotism and devotion may not be lost, but be transmitted to posterity, that they may realize the full cost of the blessings which they enjoy.

There are times in the history of every nation when to be anything but a patriot is to be a traitor; when compromise is treason and defeat death. Then it is that the grand elements of humanity stand out in almost divine radiance, and from humble homes and hearthstones come up the heroes of the hour. It is to these sublime moments that history points with redeeming pride, and without these great heart-throbs of patience, endurance and sacrifice, no nation can attain eminence or fame.

On us peculiarly rests the exercise of these qualities, for, as a nation "of the people, for the people and by the people," there is an individual responsibility, limited by neither party, sect, nor creed. Every soldier or sailor who died for the country was the child of the Republic and the brother of us all. Let the simple memorial service go on. Let prayer and praise, song, eulogy and flowers, tell each in their fitting place the story of the sacrifice of our brothers, that the children may learn that duty is the highest patriotism that memory may consecrate. — Gloucester Advertiser.

At the close of the services the line will be reformed, and proceed down Main street to the Old and Friends' Cemeteries, and decorate four graves; then countermarch, up Main, Holten, Aborn, down Washington, stopping to pay the customary salute at the Monument; then up Main, Central, Elm, to Monumental Cemetery on Wallis street, and decorate the forty-three graves; then pass through Elm and Stevens streets to the Town Hall, and decorate the tablets; then countermarch, Stevens, Central, Main, to head-quarters, and dismiss.

It is requested that all flowers be sent to Sutton Hall, on Monday morning, May 30th, before 9 o'clock, if possible. Or they will be sent for if notice is given by postal card to either of the committee.

The following committee will be found at the hall after 7 A. M. to receive flowers:

Mrs. W. H. Hildreth, Mrs. C. T. Batchelder, Mrs. E. C. Spofford, Mrs. G. O. Peirce, Mrs. T. I. Noyes, Mrs. W. M. Ward, Mrs. N. M. Quint, Mrs. D. Lowd, Mrs. O. F. Adams, Mrs. C. H. Goulding, Mrs. W. W. Reed, Mrs. T. T. Robson, Miss Minnie A. Osborne, Miss Lizzie Chute.

SOUTH PEABODY.—A goodly audience gathered at the South Peabody Chapel last Sunday evening, and listened with great interest to the address of Mr. Cole, who for two years was connected with Straight University at New Orleans, and for one year was at Savannah. He believes heartily in the influence of education as the only hope for the Freedmen. While only 4 per cent. at the North are not enrolled for education, 57 per cent. at the South are not enrolled. Letters were read from graduates of Straight University, which showed the advancement and progress possible to the race that for two centuries and a half were in debasing slavery. "Tell them, sir, that we are rising," was the word sent to the North by a colored boy, who had since become editor of a paper. Thirty newspapers in the South are managed by colored people. God bless the American Missionary Association, which was formed more than thirty years ago, with this for its motto—"Righteous dealing with the despised races," and which gives a Christian education to the Freedmen, the Chinese and the Indians.

WEST PEABODY.—We regret to learn that the R. R. Station Agent is soon to remove from here, it is presumed to take charge of some other larger station on the B. & M. R. R. He and his family leave many warm friends in this vicinity.

We see the summer residences of Mr. H. Saltonstall and Mr. F. H. Appleton are occupied by them for the season. We also see a fine looking white pony drawing an appropriate vehicle, making a team which any young man or miss might feel proud to ride in. In is understood that the pony team belongs at Mr. A.'s residence.

The postponed meeting of the Lynn test mediums will take place on Thursday evening, May 26th, at hall corner of Washington and Mason streets, commencing at eight o'clock. Regular Sunday evening meeting at 7 1-2 o'clock. Good mediums in attendance.

At nine o'clock last Saturday the case of Ronan for the larceny of a velocipede from, and assault upon, Mr. N. M. Quint, and the case of Officer Parker for shooting him, (Ronan) came before Justice Merrill for trial. The court room was crowded, mostly by our adopted citizens, who appeared to have great sympathy for Ronan. It would seem by the evidence that our account at the time was correct. Additional testimony was offered by the attending physician, who stated that the wound was not dangerous, and that it had been some ten days since he had attended the young man. In the case of larceny and assault, Messrs. Moulton and Benjamin of Salem appeared for Ronan, and Henry Wardwell, Esq., for the Commonwealth. The counsel on both sides quoted from authorities and decisions in similar cases, and considerable time was spent in discussing the point whether the law covering larceny and felony was the same. After hearing all the evidence, the Justice said he would take more time before deciding either case.

In the case of the Commonwealth versus Parker, the young man (Ronan) testified that he thought the officer had let go of him, so he broke and run; that he did not hear the officer tell him to stop, and that he stopped when he was shot. Officer Parker testified that he had the young man by the arm when he pulled away from him and run; that he called for him to stop, and after chasing him some forty yards or more, he drew his revolver and fired; that Ronan continued running, and the officer called again and cocked his revolver, when the prisoner stopped. The officer on cross examination testified that he considered it his duty to stop the young man, and as he could not overtake him, and he was unknown to himself or Mr. Quint, he took the only means in his power to stop him. Mr. Quint testified to hearing the officer call on the prisoner to stop, and to his continuing to run after he was shot. There were several other witnesses whose evidence was of very little importance. Mr. Wardwell appeared for Parker, and Messrs. Moulton and Benjamin for the Commonwealth,

In these days of sweltering heat the word refrigerator, as one looks at it in print, lingers pleasantly on the retina of the reader. Well, speaking of refrigerators, reminds us that at Bushby & Co.'s they have a model in that line, used almost exclusively for butter, in which article they have a very large trade. At F. Porter's provision market on Washington street, Salem, there is to be seen one of the finest refrigerators in this section, the proprietor of which, through our columns, invites the public to call and see it.

Several runaways were reported last Saturday, although there was not much damage done. The horses attached to the ice team of Mr. H. N. Batchelder became frightened by the cars on Foster street. Mr. Benj. Beckett's horse struck a lively gait, but was stopped. Bushby & Co.'s delivery wagon was overturned on Railroad Avenue, by a horse which was hitched to the rear becoming frightened at the cars. The driver, Mr. George Bushby, jumped and saved himself; the ground was well covered with groceries, eggs, etc. No damage was done to the team.

If one might judge from appearances they would naturally suppose that some of our young ladies had organized themselves into a military company and were trying to learn street parade. We noticed several of these young ladies form a line across the sidewalk the other day and march in unbroken column for some distance. In the meantime a poor woman with a large basket was obliged to take the gutter to avoid this petticoat brigade. Don't do it, girls; it don't look well.

Mr. Mark Marston's new house on Lowell Street is nearly completed. It contains fifteen finished rooms, and is designed for two tenements. Mr. Fred W. Shumway occupies the upper tenement, and Mr. Marston, the owner, is to occupy the lower one. The house is very pleasantly situated, and adds much to the attractiveness of the "Avenue."

Mr. Calvin Pierce, the carpenter, is building an annex, 19 x 24, one story, to the Episcopal Church (St. Paul), to be used for a study room and also for the organ. The main building has been raised eighteen inches, and will rest up on a stone underpinning.

At the Art Exhibition in Plummer Hall, Salem, the "Picture Seller," oak branch, blossoms, panels, etc., by Miss H. F. Osborne, attract great attraction. C. C. Redmond, the Salem artist, exhibits some fine oil paintings. Miss Amy S. Wardwell exhibits plaques and ornaments.

Dr. Steele will preach next Sunday, at 2.15 P. M., on the Revised New Testament in its bearing on disputed doctrines.

The young clerk who desires to pass himself off as a wealthy son of a retired manufacturer or lord of the soil, should see that the heighth of the counter is not too plainly marked on the binding of his vest.

☞ Palpitation of the heart, tremblings, nervous headache, cold hands and feet, pain in the back, and other forms of weakness are relieved by Carter's Iron Pills, made specially for the blood, nerves and complexion.

"Annie," said a fond husband to his wife, "what were the current expenses for last month?" "Oh," she answered, "only twenty-eight cents." "Why, how was that?" "Well, you see I only baked cake twice, and therefore used very few."

☞ A purely vegetable medicine containing all the virtues of calomel without any of the injurious tendencies so justly dreaded by mankind. Simmons' Liver Regulator will be found prompt to start the secretions of the liver, and give a healthy tone to the entire system, without salivation or any injurious effects. When used as a cathartic, it in no wise disorders the system, nor does it produce any nausea or sick stomach when about to purge. It is so mild in its action as not to interfere with business or pleasure.

It is about as hard to find a girl whose marriage is announced in the newspapers who isn't "beautiful and accomplished," as it is to find a man who has just died who wasn't "honored and respected by all who knew him."

Speaking of Mr. Forbes' lecture on "Kings I have met," a western newspaper says that some day he will come across three kings and a pair of sevens, and then he will learn something about the really great resources of this country.

☞ If there ever was a specific for any one complaint, then Carter's Little Liver Pills are a specific for sick headache, and every woman should know this. Only one pill a dose.

He knew if he was editing a newspaper he would give the public the "ins and outs" of the goings on of public men. He would open the eyes of the people till they cried long and loud for "reform." He tried it three days.—Result: Five libel suits, two arrests for defamation of character, seven times called liar by a contemporary, challenged to a duel once, horsewhipped three times, a daily reception of sore heads with murder in their hearts, fire in their eyes and mouths reeling with profanity, and the last we saw of that man he was trying to trade a puff in the paper for a bit of rope long enough to reach from the clothes hook around his neck.—New Haven Register.

The spirit of mortal may not be very proud, but we notice that it waxes overly profane in some cases where rheumatism is the moving cause. We use St. Jacob's Oil for ours and are happy.—Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin.

"How do you like the Episcopalian service?" asked Jones. "Never heard it," replied Fogg; "I dropped in at one of the church last Sunday. It was quite early and so I began reading the service. I didn't read far though before I found that it would never do for me. So I came out." "Why, what was the trouble?" "Too many collections." "Too many collections?" "Yes, on almost every page it said 'collect.' One collection is all I can afford to respond to.—Must be awfully expensive to be an Episcopalian."—Boston Transcript.

The Boston Traveller says: "We believe we may justly say that, considering the timeliness of its articles, its high literary merit, and its artistic features, the May number of Scribner's Monthly is probably the finest of any illustrated magazine ever published."

HIS ANSWER.—They tell it on one of our citizens who was ambling toward his place of business, that he was approached by a lady acquaintance of the family, who said: "Mr. ——, I hear you are suffering from rheumatism, is it so?" "Rumor 'tis m'm," said our citizen of few words, as he proceeded on his way. Over in Chicopee our neighbors and friends have been having quite a time with rheumatism; but, according to reports received by our representative, the flurry is over, as the sure antidote has been used and thus commented upon: Mr. C. N. Manchester, Cutler street, says relative to his experience: I have used St. Jacob's Oil, and esteem it the best remedy for rheumatism I have ever tried. It acts like magic, and I cannot over estimate its value, when I pronounce it the greatest rheumatic remedy of the age.

"Touch it off lightly," said Patrick of a cannon for the Fourth of July, that had been placed rather dangerously near too many glass windows; and such seems to have been the doctrine of the recent lecture in Tremont Temple arguing for moderation against total abstinence.

A Tanner club, to be composed entirely of fast young men, is to be established in Cheyenne.

Portrait of FAITH WHITCOMB, the Shakeress, the most successful nurse of the age, who is now accomplishing more good through the distribution of her medicine than all the doctors in the country.

SPECIAL TO LADIES!

FAITH WHITCOMB'S Shaker Liniment is a Sure and Certain Cure for Inflammation of the Womb and for the distressing Lame Back, from which the majority of American women suffer.

A Boston gentleman, well known in business circles—in fact, one of the largest advertisers of the city whose wife has suffered for four years with inflammation of the Womb with constant lameness in the back—employing the best regular Physicians—and afterwards the best Female Electric Physicians, expending vast sums of money with but little effect, has had no occasion to employ a Physician since commencing the use of last July. She is now well. She never has the Back ache from which she was hardly ever free during the previous four years.

LADIES:—Instead of filling the stomach with wishy-washy medicines for so-called "Female Complaints," apply the proper remedy—externally—and you will obtain certain relief. Every regular Physician will tell you that the only wise treatment for the Inflamation of the Womb is by the external application of the proper remedies, and if you ask your Family Physician he will advise you to use FAITH WHITCOMB'S SHAKER LINIMENT, (to whom the recipe is open for examination.

INVALID LADIES

Who will send a postal card, simply bearing their address, will receive, prepaid by mail,

"FAITH WHITCOMB'S ADVICE TO MOTHERS,"

which every mother should read. Address, FAITH WHITCOMB'S Agency, Boston, Mass.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S

LINIMENT.

THE GREAT SHAKER REMEDY

FOR

Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Pains in the Spine, Inflammation of the Kidneys, Enlarged Glands, Toothache, Croup, Earache, Sprains, Chronic Diseases of the Joints and Muscles, Bruises, Backache, Soreness of the Chest, Gout, Quincy, Sore Throat, Swellings, Burns and Scalds, Headache, Frosted Feet, Chilblains, and all diseases of an inflammatory order.

FOR TOOTHACHE.

Boston Dentists use it in their practice and recommend it to their patrons.

FROM THE CELEBRATED SURGEON DENTIST, U. K MAYO.

337 TREMONT ST. BOSTON, Aug 30, 1880.

I congratulate you upon the merited and enviable renown attained by your really valuable liniment. It is the most effective remedy for toothache that has ever come to my notice and I cheerfully recommend to my patrons. U. K. MAYO.

IT WORKS LIKE MAGIC IN INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM.

For proof of which please read the following:—

214 CAMBRIDGE ST., BOSTON, Sept. 20, 1880.

I am astonished at the wonderful properties of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment. Three weeks ago I was attacked with Inflammatory Rheumatism, my head was swollen to double its usual size and the Pain was intense. The first application relieved the pain. In two weeks after using two 50 cent bottles of the Liniment I was entirely cured. Those who are familiar with the Inflammatory Rheumatism and the time which it generally runs will agree with me that the Shaker Liniment is a remarkable remedy, and I advise Rheumatics to use it. J. F. SAWTELL.

The Boston Evening Traveller in referring to the above case says:—

"The cure of Mr. Sawtell, the well known grocer, of inflammatory rheumatism, is creating a decided sensation at the West End. Several gentlemen from the Revere House, chronic Rheumatics, called upon Mr. Sawtell for confirmation of the rumors of his astonishing recovery and found that the facts had not been exaggerated. Such cures place Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment at the head of rheumatic remedies."

CROUP.

SAVE THE LITTLE ONES.

"If Faith Whitcomb's directions are followed not one case of croup in a thousand will prove fatal.

"He will give further pooof if you will call upon him

BOSTON, Nov. 1, 1880.

This certifies that my wife who had been a sufferer from Neuralgia for twenty years, was cured by the use of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and four applications cured my back which was so lame from Rheumatism that I could not move without pain. I assure sufferers from Neuralgia and Rheumatism that this Liniment will surely cure these diseases. I know it to be a fact that Mr. Lord, one of my neighbors at Greenwood who had been on crutches for fifteen years, and had unsuccessfully tried many remedies, obtained relief from less than one bottle of Shaker Liniment; and Mrs. Wheeler of the same place another neighbor, a great sufferer from Chronic Rheumatism—is praising the Shaker Liniment in the strongest terms, for it is the only remedy that would help her. I shall be glad to give further proof of the value of this Liniment to any sufferers who will call either upon me in Boston or at my house ac Greenwood. A. HANSON.

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER.

You know Physicians are proverbially shy of anything like patent medicines. Doctor Sylvester is no exception to this rule; but when he saw the formula of "Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment" he said "that is all right, that is a good remedy." He prescribed it for me when I was next assailed by my old enemy Neuralgia, or rather Neuralgic Rheumatism, from which I have suffered much, especially from Neuralgia of the Heart. It was a severe attack and I feared a long illness, but I used the Liniment freely and began to find relief very soon. In a week I was WELL. Its effects are almost magical. I will cheerfully recommend it to my friends. C. A. SYLVESTER.

SHERBURNE, MASS., Nov. 2, 1880.

Dr. Sylvester the well-known Physician of Sherborn, gives the following statement:—

SHERBORN, MASS., Sept. 20, 1880.

This certifies that I have examined the formula of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and the ingredients are such that it must be of great value in Neuralgia and Rhumatism. I use it in my family and I recommend it to all sufferers from these diseases, for it is better than any Liniment that has ever come to my notice. W. P. SYLVESTER, M. D.

When regular Physicians recommend a remedy, and use it themselves in their families you may be sure it has unusual merit.

A well-known Sunday School Worker gives his evidence.

WOBURN, Aug. 24, 1880.

The Shaker Liniment cured my wife of an enlarged joint, from which she suffered for months. A few applications cured her. I also received almost immediate relief in a case of acute inflammation and my son received great benefit in a severe attack of rheumatism. As a family liniment I think it has no equal. E. N. CUMMINGS.

"It cannot be recommended too highly as a family liniment.

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, Mass., Oct. 20, 1880.

I have used Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment for rheumatism with the happiest results, indeed it is the best liniment that I have ever used giving me quick relief. It is not only efficacious for rheumatism, but for strains, sprains, etc. It can not be recommended too highly as a family liniment. C. H. LEWIS.

It always relieves Neuralgia and if the application is continued a cure can be dependedupon.

[From Hon. A. Maynard, the extensive manufacturer and founder of the town of Maynard.]

ASSABET MILLS,
MAYNARD, Mass., Aug 24, 1880.

I gladly add my testimony to the value of the Shaker Liniment in case of Neuralgia and Rheumatism. By its use I obtained almost immediate relief, and unhesitatingly recommend it to my friends.

Book Notices.

Mr. Howells, in resigning the editorship of "The Atlantic," evidently means to carry out his plan of devoting himself assiduously to authorship. He has just put the last touches to "A Fearful Responsibility," which will be given complete in two numbers of the magazine, namely, those for June and July. The scene of this story is laid in Venice. Mr. Howells is now busily employed upon a longer serial story for Scribner's Monthly, and has in contemplation other literary enterprises whose scope has not yet been announced.

Colonel Waring's second paper on "The Sanitary Condition of New York," will appear in the June number of Scribner. His recommendations, if carried out in their integrity, would, he believes, constitute "a complete remedy for all the remediable sanitary evils of the city of New York, so far as they relate to its soil, its streets, its houses, or its water supply. They involve nothing that is impracticable, of improbable value, of uncertain effect, or of undue cost."

Barnes' International Review for June. This number contains eight articles which will be found most entertaining and instructive. W. Fraser Rae concludes his estimate of "George Eliot's Life and Writings;" John M. Gregory writes concerning the government of the students in the Illinois State University—an article full of suggestive interest. An article upon "The Pioneers of the Sierra Madre" is from the pen of A. A. Hayes, Jr., which fact sufficiently ensures its interest and value. J. Brander Matthews writes of a great son of a great father—"Alexandre Dumas, fils." Eugene L. Didier has an article upon one of the celebrated characters of the reign of George 1.—Lady Mary Wortley Montagu, the famous and beautiful woman whom the poor, ill-formed poet, Pope, so passionately, though rather ridiculously, loved. A most interesting account of the Zulu Kaffrs is given by Elie Reclus. Edward S. Holden revives the memory of a young astronomer. Edward S. Holden revives the memory of a young astronomer, Ebenezer Porter Mason—who has for a long time been forgotten, except among those of the profession. The number closes with a short article upon "The Assassination of the Tsar," by Ivan Panin, a Russian who, though not a "nihilist," found it necessary to seek an asylum in America, because of his discontent under Russian oppression. A. S. Barnes & Co., Publishers, New York.

Scribner's Monthly has been arranging, during more than a year past, for an illustrated article on Saint-Gauden's Farragut Monument, which was to have been unveiled in Madison Square, New York, on May 20th. The postponement of the unveiling till the 25th inst. gives the magazine five days' start! The article will be accompanied by a full-page engraving, by Cole, of the statue.

Prof. Fisher's article reviewing the "Revised New Testament" will appear in Scribner's Monthly on the same day that the book is issued in America—May 20th.

Scribner's Monthly will, in the June number, pay an unprecedented compliment to Miss Edith Thomas, of Geneva, Ohio, by reprinting from the newspapers nine of her poems.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for June abounds as usual in attractive features. The leading article, "Russia's New Emperor, Alexander III.," by Alfred H. Guernsey, is highly interesting, and its ten illustrations are admirable. Among the other noteworthy contributions are: "Beggars in Italy," by Junius Lorraine; "The Empress of Austria," "A Week in Hamburg," by Alfreton Hervey. Bret Harte contributes a poem, finely illustrated, entitled, "What the Chimney Sang." The number contains 128 quarto pages and more than a hundred engravings. The price of a single copy is only 25 cts.; yearly subscription, $3. Address Frank Leslie's Publishing House, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

We have received a roll of attractive music from O. Ditson & Co., and notice in it, among others, a song for Decoration Day, entitled, "Lay the Flowers Lovingly" (30 cts.); a powerful ballad by Edward Oxenford, called "The King's Champion" (35 cts.; and one of Stephen Adams' inimitable sea-songs, by the name of "Ben Lee" (35 cts.) With the music we also received a copy of Ditson & Co.'s Musical Record, which costs $2 per year.

We have received from L. H. Rogers, 75 Maiden Lane, New York, a mammoth sheet containing rules for spelling, punctuation, the use of capital letters, etc., and giving the correct spelling of 25,000 words. There is also a list of 20,000 synonyms, besides other valuable features on the sheet. Every word is in plain sight and easily found by a system of indexing which is wonderfully complete.

The Art Amateur for May has for frontispiece a fine view of the alcove dining room in the new Union League Clubhouse. An engraving of the Sarcophagus of Athieno, in the Metropolitan Museum, with an article by Gaston L. Feuardent, affords new and striking evidence of the peculiar "restoration" of the Di Cesnola Cypriote antiquities. Admirable illustrations of furniture, Japanese decoration, painted windows, and Rouin faïence are given, together with valuable letter-press on ceramics, needlework, and other decorative art topics. The supplement contains numerous designs for embroidery and wood carving, and two large plaque designs—beautiful female figures, one "in the greenwood," and the other playing a harp. The May number completes the second year of The Art Amateur, which has fairly deserved success. For the new volume special attractions are promised. Price $4 a year; 35 cents a number.—Montague Marks, Publisher, 23 Union Square, N. Y.

The American Revised New Testament: The Literary Revolution is prompt with its edition of the Revised Testament.—The British monopolists "unchained" their edition on the morning of May 20th, and at 8.30 P.M., the same day, the American edition was all in type, and of the various editions of the entire Testament and the Gospels published separately, as many as 50,000 copies a day will be manufactured till the demand is met. The prices for the very handsome editions, in type nearly double the size of the British edition, are as follows: The New Testament complete for 10 cents; the Gospels complete for 7 cents; the Gospels separately, each for 2 cents; and in various forms and styles, up to full Turkey Morocco, gilt edges, for the new and old versions on pages facing for $1.50. This edition is for sale by the leading booksellers of the United States, or they will be sent by mail on receipt of price. Liberal terms are allowed to clubs. Address American Book Exchange, 764 Broadway, New York.

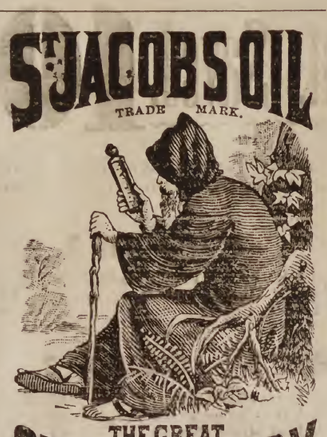
Ballou's Monthly Illustrated Magazine: The June number of Ballou's Illustrated Magazine, is issued, and contains a seasonable and well-written illustrated article on Ireland, past and present. It should have an extensive reading. The thrilling Indian story of "The Crimson Trail" is finished, after killing off all the bad redskins and the white scout. The magazine has a piece of music that is worth more than the price, and has such an assortment of stories and sketches as no other publication in this country can produce, and its amusing department is just immense. Now it the time to subscribe for this popular and cheap magazine. Published by Thomes & Talbot, 23 Hawley street, Boston, Mass., and for sale at all news depots.

That reader must be hard to please indeed who in the diversified contents of the North American Review for June should find nothing to win his attention. First we have an article by the Hon. Hugh McCulloch on "Our Future Fiscal Policy." George B. Loring writes of "The Patrician Element in American Society," but the reader need apprehend no glorification of artificial rank, for in the author's estimation the patrician element here is simply the strongest popular element. Desire Charnay writes of "The Ruins of Central America;" Dr. Austin Flint discusses the benefits of vaccination; J. M. Mason asserts the lawful power of the government to regulate railway charges; and finally, Prof. E. S. Morse sets forth the evidences of the existence of man upon this continent in prehistoric times.

The Sunday Magazine for June is peculiarly attractive in its literary and artistic departments, and brilliantly closes the ninth semi-annual volume. It is a publication which should be found in every household, for its literature is pure and healthy. The 128 quarto pages are crowded with good things. "Out of the World," a charming serial, is continued, and there are admirable short shories, sketches, essays, etc., and poems of great merit. The engravings are excellent and very numerous. The annual subscription is $3, a single copy 25 cents, sent post-free. Address Frank Leslie's Publishing House, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

"Miss Slimmen's Window," by the author of "A Bad Boy's Diary," has just been received by us, and contains more real wit and humor than is often found within the covers of a more pretentious volume. It relates Miss Slimmen's experiences in her efforts to become Mrs. ——, and will be enjoyed by everyone, old and young. It will be sent on receipt of ten cents, by J. S. Ogilvie & Co., Publishers, 25 Rose Street, New York.

Our Little Ones, as its title implies, is intended for the use of children everywhere—in school, in the nursery, or at the seaside. It is a very attractive little magazine, and children are always delighted with it. It is very finely illustrated, and we hardly see how it could be made more attractive. Russell Publishing Company, Boston.



Every baby in the land should have the Nursery. As soon as they are old enough to enjoy pretty pictures, it will do more to amuse and instruct them than anything we know of, and—we speak from experience—the parents will derive no small amount of pleasure from its perusal. The June number is full of nice illustrations, among which are "The Careless Muse," "Feeding the Fowls," "Master Baby," a nice drawing lesson, etc., etc. Nursery Publishing Company, Boston.

A Handsome Paper: The Illustrated Scientific News for May is before us, looking handsomer, if possible, than any of the preceding issues. Since its change of publishers last January, this magazine has improved with each succeeding number. The present issue of the Illustrated Scientific News is overflowing with handsome engravings and interesting and instructive matter.

No. 37 Court St., Boston, Mch. 15, '81.
My daughter was postrated with a terrible cough. All remedies failed, and we were discouraged; yet within one month after commencing the use of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam she is well. I will cheerfully answer all inquiries. B. A. CLARK.

Nantucket, March 8, 1881.
I have been very sick; I thought I would never get about again. My cough was very bad both day and night. I had but few moments rest until I commenced to use Faith Whitcomb's Balsam. As every thing else had failed, I tried that as a last resort. I have taken one small bottle and two-thirds of a large one, and my cough is nearly cured. I sleep all night, and midnight sweats have ceased. MRS. CHAS. G. GARDNER.

HARVARD COMMUNITY OF SHAKERS, March 7, 1881.
The herbs of which Faith Whitcomb's Remedies are composed are gathered by the Harvard Community, and the public can depend upon their purity.
JOHN H. SPRAGUE.

A Cattle Dealer's Visit to Peabody.

Last Friday one of the most prominent millionaires of Brighton, a distinguished cattle dealer, left his home in company with his accomplished wife, and an intimate friend of theirs, a native of Groton, but now a resident of Peabody, for the purpose of enjoying a week of pleasure and social intercourse with their friends in this town. On the evening of his arrival in town, he revealed to his friends his programme for the week of recreation, which was as follows: First, fishing every suitable day; second, "Sancho Pedro" or "Auction Pitch" every evening, Sundays excepted; third, a few familiar lessons in grape vine pruning. Perhaps it would be well to state before proceeding any further with our narrative, that our worthy friend had read and thoroughly digested every work Isaac Walton had ever published upon the subject of Angling, in order to strengthen his own natural qualifications as a piscatorial adventurer. Thus fortified, he felt himself eminently qualified to teach his unsophisticated friends in Peabody how to catch fish. Saturday morning, bright and early, he gets together his little band, and they start upon their first excursion. They procure a boat of a gentleman residing near the Danvers Iron Works, where they embark for their voyage. A professional oarsman soon lands them upon the fishing grounds. They bait their hooks, (which, by the way, are of the most approved kind, especially those used by our friend from Brighton) lower their lines, and get their soundings. A few moments of quiet comes over the scene, which is broken by a gentle, rustling movement, in the stern of the boat where our guest is seated. Our eyes were instantly turned in that direction. Our friend had secured a "flounder." Then up went the cry from all hands on board, "first blood for Brighton." Encouraged by this success, he again lowers his line with well baited hooks, to gull another captive. He is not kept long in suspense. A jerk from the bottom tells him that something is there. He pulls up his line, and lands a beautiful little "gudgeon" on board. He was a little nonplused at the appearance of this fish, for he had never met with one of this variety in his travels before. We do not wish to have it understood that no other member of the boat's crew caught any fish; they all caught more or less, even the native from Groton catching some, a thing he was never known to do before. The professional in the stern of the boat beat the crowd. We take our leave of fishing by saying:

"Hail, Monroe! honored friend of mine,
Mighty master of the line!"

We have been told that the Brighton cattle dealers, when not engaged in buying or selling cattle, occasionally take a hand at "Sancho Pedro" or "Auction Pitch." From what we have seen of them we have no doubt of the assertion. They are most excellent players. What they don't know about the game is not worth knowing. If they find themselves going behind in the game hey will commence to haze the marker, charge him with not keeping the game correctly; even going so far as to put him under oath at the beginning of the play. When they have taken their seats at the table, it is impossible to get them away; you cannot Swett them out of it. There is no end to their hanging on. Nothing short of a drove of Kentucky or Texas steers can break the spell. They seem to be very suspicious of a person if he ever lived in Groton. We don't know the reason for this singular conduct. They do declare that if an honest, truthful man can be found that came from Groton, he should be preserved for seed.

Their lessons respecting the culture and pruning of grape vines have not been so highly appreciated. They do not seem to practice what they preach. Upon examination of some of the vines in the gardens on Lincoln street, Brighton, we find a large amount of superfluous and dead wood. It looks to us, a verdant observer, that they do not trim close enough. We would advise them to look at the vines in a gentleman's garden on Central street, near the junction of Andover street, Peabody, if they want to see vines as near perfection as vines can possibly be. We would recommend to some Brighton grape growers, that they employ pruners from Peabody this fall to fix up their vines as they properly should be.

An old man in Lewiston, Me., refused to ride at his wife's funeral, saying that he wanted to take his last walk with her. And so, in a pouring rain, unprotected by umbrella or overcoat, he followed the hearse with bowed head a distance of more than a mile to the cemetery.

President Garfield, speaking of the shabby conduct of the hotel-keepers at Springfield, Ill., in refusing entertainment to colored jubilee singers, says if they go to Washington and cannot secure rooms in the hotels he will welcome them to the White House.

A New Invoice of Oranges, 20 cts. a dozen and upwards, at Geo. Stevens'.—Adv.

How?—A party of Sioux Indians were guests at a leading Milwaukee hotel, and the ladies had a great deal of amusement with them, studying their costumes. That is, they all did except one lady. The ladies called upon the Indians, and the savages returned the calls almost before the ladies got to their rooms. One lady called upon a chief, and then went to her room and retired. Pretty soon there was a knock at her door, and she found it was the chief. She told him to come in the morning. The lady unlocks her door in the morning so the porter can come in and build a fire before she gets up. She heard a knocking in the morning, and supposing it was the porter, said:

"Come in."

The door opened, and in walked Mr. Indian. She took one look at him and pulled the bed clothes over her head. He sat down on the side of the bed and said:

"How?"

Well, she was so scared that she didn't know how from Adam. She said to him in the best Sioux she could command:

"Please, good Mr. Indian, go away until I get up."

But he didn't seem to be in a hurry. He picked up pieces of her wearing apparel from the floor, different articles that he didn't seem to know anything about where they were worn, and made comments on them in the Sioux tongue. The stockings seemed to paralyze his untutored mind the most. They were those 90 degrees in the shade stockings, they were too much for his feeble intellect. He held them up by the toes and said "Ugh!" The lady trembled and wished he would go away. He seemed to take great delight in examining the hair on the bureau, and looked at the lady as much as to say, "Poor girl, some hostile tribe has made war on the pale face, and taken many scalps." Finally she happened to think of the bell, and she rung it as though the house was on fire, and pretty soon the porter came and invited the Indian to go down stairs and take a drink. The lady locked that door too quick, and she will never leave it open when there are Indians in town. She says her hair—on the bureau—fairly turned gray from fright.—Milwaukee Sun.

BABY IS DEAD.—"Baby is dead!" Three little words passing along the line, copied somewhere and soon forgotten. But after all was quiet again I leaned my head upon my hand and fell into a deep reverie of all that those words may mean.

Somewhere—a dainty form, still and cold, unclasped by mother's arms tonight. Eyes that yesterday were bright and blue as skies of June dropped tonight beneath white lids that no voice can ever raise.

Two soft hands, whose rose leaf fingers were wont to wander lovingly around mother's neck and face, loosely holding white buds, quietly folded in coffined rest.

Soft lips, yesterday rippling with laughter, sweet as woodland brook falls, gay as trill of forest bird, to-night unresponsive to kiss or call of love.

A silent home—the patter of baby feet forever hushed—a cradle bed unpressed. Little shoes half-worn—dainty garments — shoulder-knots of blue to match those eyes of yesterday, folded with aching heart away.

A tiny mound, snow-covered in some quiet graveyard.

A mother's groping touch in uneasy slumber, for the fair head that shall never rest upon her bosom. The low sob, the bitter tear, as broken dreams awake to sad reality. The hopes of future years wrecked, like fair ships that suddenly go down in sight of land.

The watching of other babies, dimpled, laughing, strong, and this one gone. The present agony of grief, the future emptiness of heart, all held in those three little words, "Baby is dead."

Indeed, it is well that we can copy and soon forget the words so freighted with woe to those who receive and send them. And yet it cannot harm us now and then to give a tender thought to those for whom our careless pen stroke is preparing such a weight of grief.—Telegraph Operator.

"The Bivouac of the Dead"

VISITED AND DECORATED BY THE G. A. R.

ELOQUENT ADDRESS BY REV. E. W. WHITNEY, IN PEABODY INSTITUTE.

There certainly is no manifestation of a national character more worthy the consideration of the American people—none that appeals more earnestly to their sympathies or draws more forcibly upon their patriotism, than that conferred upon the martyred soldiers of the late war. The exercises were well carried out by Union Post 50, G. A. R. of this town. The weather was clear and excessively hot. In the forenoon the Post visited the cemeteries in the southern part of the town. In the afternoon services at the Institute were held, after which, the graves at the Old and Monumental Cemeteries were decorated. The Institute was well filled by an attentive audience. The desk was draped with flags with a wreath in the center, while on one side was a vase of flowers, and on the other an elegant basket of hot house flowers, and on the front of the platform was a large number of pot plants in full bloom. Here the exercises were pleasantly carried out, according to programme published in last week's PRESS. Mr. E. Herbert Davis read Gov. Long's Proclamation, and Rev. Geo. Walker introduced the orator, Rev. E. W. Whitney, of Brattleboro', Vt., who spoke as follows:

Members of the Grand Army and Friends:

More than twenty years have passed since the rebel cannons were fired at Fort Sumpter, and the civil war began.—Great was the excitement caused by the news of battle, yet no one dreamed how long and terrible the struggle would be. The Southern people had no idea that their fields would be deserted, their homes left desolate, and the land filled with widows and orphans; nor did the North, with its larger resources and numbers, realize the terrible sacrifice of life and property that would ensue. There are some who think the war might have been avoided by compromise, but this resource had been tried again and again, and the Southern people, confident of speedy victory, were in no mood to make or listen to concessions. The crisis had come and must be met. God wisely veiled the future from both sections of the land, for by the bloody strife He was to solve problems, and bring about results, which could not have been gained in any other way. The South was prepared and eager for war; relying on a large measure of Northern sympathy, and the cowardice of their enemies, they looked for sure and speedy success. But they had wrongly read the signs of the times, for when the North was aroused from its dreams of peace, her people were ready and anxious to vindicate the flag. It is not needful to review the four years of bloody strife, for it is stamped upon your memory, and written in letters of glory upon the enduring pages of history. But it is well to set apart a day in memory of our fallen heroes, well to recall the courage and devotion of our soldiers and sailors, and to kindle in our hearts the fires of patriotism. To-day, I wish to call your attention to some of the results of the civil strife, and some of the ways to best honor the memory of our hero-dead.

What did the war accomplish? It saved the Nation! No minor issue like taxation, or some slight, fancied or real, caused the war. Nor was it a conflict between the two political parties which swayed the land, for had this been the case, the parties being so nearly equal in strength, and so widely spread, conflict must have taken place in nearly every state and town, and the issue been both bloody and doubtful. Beyond dispute it was a sectional war—a war between the South, who wished to destroy the Union, and the North, who strove to save it. The question at issue was, whether the separate states or the entire nation was sovereign, whether any state had a right to secede from the Union when it so wished, or must remain a part of the common country. I wish you to notice that the issue was by no means new. It can be traced in the political strife of the nation for many years. In 1829 John C. Calhoun began to teach his famous doctrine of nullification, which led South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama and Virginia to declare that "any state in the Union might annul an act of the federal government," and threaten to secede. In 1832 the nullifiers of South Carolina tried to prevent the collection of duties in Southern ports, and prepared to support their cause by arms, but the brave and determined Gen. Jackson was then president, and his prompt measures saved the shedding of blood. The doctrines of state sovereignty and secession were, however, widely advocated by Calhoun and other Southern leaders, and steadily gained ground with the people. In 1860 the Southerners had come to feel that they had a right to secede from the Union, of which they had grown weary.

When Sumpter's flag was fired upon, the question was, "shall the nation live or die." The South wished it to perish, the North resolved to preserve its life. When the Northern people saw that war could not be avoided, they arose like a strong man from his sleep. Differences of party and opinion were forgotten, Democrats and Republicans alike rallied around the flag, and marched shoulder to shoulder in many an hour of peril. For the safety of the nation, men left their business and ambitions, their homes and families, and by their heroism in many a deadly battle, the foemen were driven back, and at last forced to surrender. The struggles of the war gain wonderful sublimity when we remember that by them a free government was vindicated, and the very life of the nation saved. By the war real unity was made possible. For more than eighty years there had been a union of the states, but during this time there had not always been unity of feeling and purpose. When the nation was engaged in some great war, there seemed to be a common interest, but when peace was declared, issues were brought forward which once more aroused sectional feeling. In truth there were two orders of civilization, the slave-holding and the free, and the stand-point of the one differed widely from the other. In the South, labor was held in dishonor, in the North, it was thought praiseworthy; the South hated business and trade, the North was devoted to them; the South was full of the spirit of caste, in the North, all men were regarded by the law as free and equal. Between people who differed so widely in manner of life and ideas, there were sure to be opposing interests, and fruitful sources of strife. Their views in regard to tariffs, the extension of slavery, the acquisition of new states, always clashed, and hatred must needs arise. From these causes, events often occurred, such as vain attempts to recover escaped slaves, mob violence, the fierce rivalries of Kansas, and many issues which aroused deeper jealousy between the North and South, and drove the two sections still wider apart in sympathy. The Union of states was hardly more than mechanical, for between two peoples differing so widely, real unity was impossible. In the fiery furnace of war these differences melted away, and the nation was fused into a full and enduring oneness. By the war the white people of the South were called from a life of idleness and self-indulgence to the stern realities of the camp and battle field. Here they became familiar with toil and hardship, and after peace was declared they were still forced to labor for daily bread, and to repair their wasted fortunes.—Honest toil has largely modified pride and exclusiveness, till now the best men in the South are anxious to develop her resources, to invite industries and people from every part of the earth. Already we see the dawn of a better era, for the two sections are linked more and more firmly together by railroads and telegraphs, by commerce and manufactures, and thus, as the old barriers are removed, and there is a growth of common interests and aims, the lasting unity of the nation seemed assured.

The civil strife also secured freedom for all classes of the people. Thoughtful men know that slavery was the real cause of the war. This was called "a free nation," but three millions of the black race were held in bondage. Slavery, permitted by the general government, was sanctioned and practiced throughout the South, but was prohibited and condemned by almost the entire North. By the wisest and best people of all sections it was felt that slavery was opposed to the Declaration of Independence, which states that "all men are created equal," and have a right to "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness." It was alike contrary to justice and the great principle of Christian brotherhood. No fair minded man could deny that slavery was a degrading system.—The slaves were kept in ignorance, were deprived of the fruits of their honest toil, and severely whipped for real or fancied wrongs. Their families were rudely separated from each other with small hope of ever meeting again, in short, cruelty, suffering and vice were the constant fruits of the system. And yet the Southern politicians not only clung to the system, but wished to extend it. No wonder the moral sentiment of the North was arrayed against it, and strove to keep it within the appointed limits, but with the exception of a small band of abolitionists, the people of the North did not wish to do away with slavery by sudden or violent means. Where it was, they had no thought of disturbing it, they only wished to keep it from spreading into new territories and states. The South was jealous of its peculiar institution, and this jealousy gave rise to the civil war. At the beginning of the Rebellion the North looked upon the war as of short duration, and did not wish to disturb the relations of masters and slaves. If the Rebellion had ended in a year, slavery would have been undisturbed, but the strife grew fiercer and more threatening, till at last as a measure of war, abolition became necessary. It was the greatest and best result of the Rebellion. Thoughtful people in all parts of the land, and of all parties, are glad that the days of bondage are ended. A great wrong has ceased, a heavy burden been lifted which long prevented the progress and civilization of the South. Now, this is indeed a free nation; all races and ranks have liberty of person and conscience. It is sad that the price of liberty was so great, but all must be thankful that freedom has been secured, a lasting heritage to the nation.

Notice, too, that greater liberty for all nations grew out of our own freedom—for the results of the war extended far beyond our borders, and were felt in every part of the earth. Other forces were no doubt at work, but the cause of freedom, triumphant here, received a wonderful stimulus everywhere. Arbitrary rulers were obliged to modify their burdens, and given a larger share of rights. The common people, too, have taken fresh courage to assert their claims, and have not ceased to agitate, till their voice was heard and answered. Never has the cause of freedom made such rapid progress as in the last twenty years. In 1863 the Russian serfs were granted freedom of person, and a perpetual right to certain parts of the land; and although anarchy seems to reign in that broad empire, I believe the result will be that abuses will be reformed, and the people will gain the rights long denied to them. France, after her disastrous war with Germany, became a Republic, and if grave dangers still threaten, the heart of the people is right, and they will have a happy issue out of all their troubles. The barbarous Turk has been humbled, and millions of people are freed wholly or in part from his cruel sway. England, under a liberal ministry, is moving steadily towards greater freedom for the people, and there are signs that down-trodden Ireland shall not always strive against its wrongs in vain. Indeed the people of every realm have caught the spirit of liberty, and no man can tell how largely this has grown out of the success of our civil strife. Certainly for a hundred years our nation has stood in the front of the battle-ranks of progress, and our success gave courage to the friends of liberty everywhere.

Thus the problem of free government has been solved. Many people said: "The Republic does well in times of peace, when business is prosperous, and the country is growing. It seems strong when there is no strain upon it, but a great Rebellion will put it to the test and show its weakness. When the people are divided, it will be found that a government by the people is no government at all. Then some stronger authority, like a king or emperor, will be needed, to strike the people with awe and command obedience." Vain was the fear, false the prophesy! The result showed that the Americans prized liberty, and were willing to defend it with their lives. By their loyalty and self-sacrifice perhaps the greatest Rebellion of modern times was resisted and crushed. It was a season of great peril, for issues of the highest importance were at stake, and the result seemed to hang trembling in the balances. With great anxiety the oppressed of all nations watched the conflict, and prayed most fervently that the cause of freedom should not fail. It did not fail! To our troops God granted the victory. It was shown that no sacrifice was too great for a free people to make. Indeed, the loyalty, devotion and sacrifice of the American people astonished the world. What a terrible calamity the death of the Republic would have been! The States must have been left divided, weak, jealous of one another, liable to constant wars, and in case of foreign invasion well nigh powerless. The cause of progress would have been put back a hundred years. Autocrats all over the earth would have taken fresh courage to oppress their peoples, while the poor and humble would have lost all heart to resist their demands. Thank God the strength of free institutions has been proved! It has been shown that no government is so strong as that in which the people feel a personal interest and responsibility, and are willing to defend it with their lives. Well, then, may we celebrate this day, for the triumph of liberty in America will yet lead to the freedom of the entire world.

What remains to be done? It is certainly our duty to honor the heroic men who saved the nation. It is a plain duty to render to all their dues, and who have deserved so well or so much, as those who left all the endearments of home to suffer the privations of camp, hospital or prison pen, and the dangers of the battle-field? For us the brave soldiers endured tortures the most acute, and met death in its most frightful forms. Consider the many benefits which have flowed from their sufferings and sacrifices, and say if the debt of gratitude owed to them is not beyond our power to repay? Surely it is right to raise in their memory monuments of enduring granite and bronze, and to inscribe upon them in imperishable letters the names of those who died for their country! It is a duty we owe the dead, it is the best means of keeping their memory fresh in the minds of the living, and of leading them to imitate the patriotism of the departed. It is right to set apart a day in grateful memory of their heroic deeds, to decorate their graves with the fairest flowers, and to pronounce words in glowing eulogy of their loyalty and devotion. But some of the men who fought for the flag are still living—they are with us to-day—let us show them that their heroism is appreciated and honored! Many surviving soldiers now suffering from the exposures of camps and wounds of battles, deserve our kindest care, our most generous help. Many, alas! are the widows and orphans of the heroic dead. God grant they may never be neglected, or allowed to lack any of the necessities of life! When the soldiers enlisted, ample promises were made that their wives and children should be cared for, and want never be allowed to cross the threshold of their homes. For a time these pledges were faithfully kept, but as the perils of war are past, there is danger lest they fade from our memory. To be sure the State and general government were most generous in giving bounties and pensions, but there is much which no government can do. One of the noble objects of the Grand Army of the Republic is to watch over the families of the dead, and shield them from every form of want. This Order has done and is doing a most worthy work, and deserves your generous sympathy and support—for surely the best way to honor the dead is to help the needy families who depended upon them.

It is our duty, also, to honor the patriotism which preserved our liberties. No doubt there were soldiers who enlisted for large bounties, and in the time of danger deserted; but the great majority were moved by sincere love of country, and sacrificed every worldly ambition to secure the life of the nation. Even when wounded their interest in the cause led them to forget their own sufferings, and think only of the success of the battle. At Lookout Mountain, while going up Missionary Ridge, a color Sergeant was wounded, and borne to the rear. A comrade went to him and asked: "Where did it hit you?" He replied: "Most up the Ridge, sir." "But I mean where did the bullet strike you?" "Within twenty yards of the top, almost up," was the answer. "No, no," said the man, "think of yourself a moment, and tell me where you were wounded?" As the blanket was turned back the arm and shoulder were found terribly mangled by a shell; yet the Sergeant could not think of himself, but said: "I had the standard in my hands and was making for the top. In two minutes more I should have placed the colors on the top;" and so with thoughts on the flag and the fight, his eyes grew dim, and his ears heavy in death. Many soldiers were as self-forgetful as this—their first and last thought was of the flag, and if that prospered, they were content to suffer and die. That is the spirit to be honored to-day. How such devotion to the country rebukes the disgraceful struggles of the Senate for petty offices; the corruptions of the Star Postal Line; and the criminal folly which imperils the health of our greatest city by filth, for fear that men of the opposite party might clean the streets. Far be it from me to condemn the politicians of America by wholesale. There are too many in office who are corrupt, but all are not dishonest. There are public men who are worthy of the mantle of Washington, Hamilton, and Jefferson; men who love the nation and labor to secure its best interests. Would there were more of such in both parties! These are the men to nominate and to support. Let every American remember those noble words of Mr. Hayes: "He serves his party best who serves his country best," and resolve that at every election he will vote for honest and patriotic men, and firmly refuse to support the corrupt of any name or party.

"The Bivouac of the Dead"

VISITED AND DECORATED BY THE G. A. R.

ELOQUENT ADDRESS BY REV. E. W. WHITNEY, IN PEABODY INSTITUTE.

There certainly is no manifestation of a national character more worthy the consideration of the American people—none that appeals more earnestly to their sympathies or draws more forcibly upon their patriotism, than that conferred upon the martyred soldiers of the late war. The exercises were well carried out by Union Post 50, G. A. R. of this town. The weather was clear and excessively hot. In the forenoon the Post visited the cemeteries in the southern part of the town. In the afternoon services at the Institute were held, after which, the graves at the Old and Monumental Cemeteries were decorated. The Institute was well filled by an attentive audience. The desk was draped with flags with a wreath in the center, while on one side was a vase of flowers, and on the other an elegant basket of hot house flowers, and on the front of the platform was a large number of pot plants in full bloom. Here the exercises were pleasantly carried out, according to programme published in last week's PRESS. Mr. E. Herbert Davis read Gov. Long's Proclamation, and Rev. Geo. Walker introduced the orator, Rev. E. W. Whitney, of Brattleboro', Vt., who spoke as follows:

Members of the Grand Army and Friends:

More than twenty years have passed since the rebel cannons were fired at Fort Sumpter, and the civil war began.—Great was the excitement caused by the news of battle, yet no one dreamed how long and terrible the struggle would be. The Southern people had no idea that their fields would be deserted, their homes left desolate, and the land filled with widows and orphans; nor did the North, with its larger resources and numbers, realize the terrible sacrifice of life and property that would ensue. There are some who think the war might have been avoided by compromise, but this resource had been tried again and again, and the Southern people, confident of speedy victory, were in no mood to make or listen to concessions. The crisis had come and must be met. God wisely veiled the future from both sections of the land, for by the bloody strife He was to solve problems, and bring about results, which could not have been gained in any other way. The South was prepared and eager for war; relying on a large measure of Northern sympathy, and the cowardice of their enemies, they looked for sure and speedy success. But they had wrongly read the signs of the times, for when the North was aroused from its dreams of peace, her people were ready and anxious to vindicate the flag. It is not needful to review the four years of bloody strife, for it is stamped upon your memory, and written in letters of glory upon the enduring pages of history. But it is well to set apart a day in memory of our fallen heroes, well to recall the courage and devotion of our soldiers and sailors, and to kindle in our hearts the fires of patriotism. To-day, I wish to call your attention to some of the results of the civil strife, and some of the ways to best honor the memory of our hero-dead.

What did the war accomplish? It saved the Nation! No minor issue like taxation, or some slight, fancied or real, caused the war. Nor was it a conflict between the two political parties which swayed the land, for had this been the case, the parties being so nearly equal in strength, and so widely spread, conflict must have taken place in nearly every state and town, and the issue been both bloody and doubtful. Beyond dispute it was a sectional war—a war between the South, who wished to destroy the Union, and the North, who strove to save it. The question at issue was, whether the separate states or the entire nation was sovereign, whether any state had a right to secede from the Union when it so wished, or must remain a part of the common country. I wish you to notice that the issue was by no means new. It can be traced in the political strife of the nation for many years. In 1829 John C. Calhoun began to teach his famous doctrine of nullification, which led South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama and Virginia to declare that "any state in the Union might annul an act of the federal government," and threaten to secede. In 1832 the nullifiers of South Carolina tried to prevent the collection of duties in Southern ports, and prepared to support their cause by arms, but the brave and determined Gen. Jackson was then president, and his prompt measures saved the shedding of blood. The doctrines of state sovereignty and secession were, however, widely advocated by Calhoun and other Southern leaders, and steadily gained ground with the people. In 1860 the Southerners had come to feel that they had a right to secede from the Union, of which they had grown weary.

When Sumpter's flag was fired upon, the question was, "shall the nation live or die." The South wished it to perish, the North resolved to preserve its life. When the Northern people saw that war could not be avoided, they arose like a strong man from his sleep. Differences of party and opinion were forgotten, Democrats and Republicans alike rallied around the flag, and marched shoulder to shoulder in many an hour of peril. For the safety of the nation, men left their business and ambitions, their homes and families, and by their heroism in many a deadly battle, the foemen were driven back, and at last forced to surrender. The struggles of the war gain wonderful sublimity when we remember that by them a free government was vindicated, and the very life of the nation saved. By the war real unity was made possible. For more than eighty years there had been a union of the states, but during this time there had not always been unity of feeling and purpose. When the nation was engaged in some great war, there seemed to be a common interest, but when peace was declared, issues were brought forward which once more aroused sectional feeling. In truth there were two orders of civilization, the slave-holding and the free, and the stand-point of the one differed widely from the other. In the South, labor was held in dishonor, in the North, it was thought praiseworthy; the South hated business and trade, the North was devoted to them; the South was full of the spirit of caste, in the North, all men were regarded by the law as free and equal. Between people who differed so widely in manner of life and ideas, there were sure to be opposing interests, and fruitful sources of strife. Their views in regard to tariffs, the extension of slavery, the acquisition of new states, always clashed, and hatred must needs arise. From these causes, events often occurred, such as vain attempts to recover escaped slaves, mob violence, the fierce rivalries of Kansas, and many issues which aroused deeper jealousy between the North and South, and drove the two sections still wider apart in sympathy. The Union of states was hardly more than mechanical, for between two peoples differing so widely, real unity was impossible. In the fiery furnace of war these differences melted away, and the nation was fused into a full and enduring oneness. By the war the white people of the South were called from a life of idleness and self-indulgence to the stern realities of the camp and battle field. Here they became familiar with toil and hardship, and after peace was declared they were still forced to labor for daily bread, and to repair their wasted fortunes.—Honest toil has largely modified pride and exclusiveness, till now the best men in the South are anxious to develop her resources, to invite industries and people from every part of the earth. Already we see the dawn of a better era, for the two sections are linked more and more firmly together by railroads and telegraphs, by commerce and manufactures, and thus, as the old barriers are removed, and there is a growth of common interests and aims, the lasting unity of the nation seemed assured.

The civil strife also secured freedom for all classes of the people. Thoughtful men know that slavery was the real cause of the war. This was called "a free nation," but three millions of the black race were held in bondage. Slavery, permitted by the general government, was sanctioned and practiced throughout the South, but was prohibited and condemned by almost the entire North. By the wisest and best people of all sections it was felt that slavery was opposed to the Declaration of Independence, which states that "all men are created equal," and have a right to "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness." It was alike contrary to justice and the great principle of Christian brotherhood. No fair minded man could deny that slavery was a degrading system.—The slaves were kept in ignorance, were deprived of the fruits of their honest toil, and severely whipped for real or fancied wrongs. Their families were rudely separated from each other with small hope of ever meeting again, in short, cruelty, suffering and vice were the constant fruits of the system. And yet the Southern politicians not only clung to the system, but wished to extend it. No wonder the moral sentiment of the North was arrayed against it, and strove to keep it within the appointed limits, but with the exception of a small band of abolitionists, the people of the North did not wish to do away with slavery by sudden or violent means. Where it was, they had no thought of disturbing it, they only wished to keep it from spreading into new territories and states. The South was jealous of its peculiar institution, and this jealousy gave rise to the civil war. At the beginning of the Rebellion the North looked upon the war as of short duration, and did not wish to disturb the relations of masters and slaves. If the Rebellion had ended in a year, slavery would have been undisturbed, but the strife grew fiercer and more threatening, till at last as a measure of war, abolition became necessary. It was the greatest and best result of the Rebellion. Thoughtful people in all parts of the land, and of all parties, are glad that the days of bondage are ended. A great wrong has ceased, a heavy burden been lifted which long prevented the progress and civilization of the South. Now, this is indeed a free nation; all races and ranks have liberty of person and conscience. It is sad that the price of liberty was so great, but all must be thankful that freedom has been secured, a lasting heritage to the nation.

Notice, too, that greater liberty for all nations grew out of our own freedom—for the results of the war extended far beyond our borders, and were felt in every part of the earth. Other forces were no doubt at work, but the cause of freedom, triumphant here, received a wonderful stimulus everywhere. Arbitrary rulers were obliged to modify their burdens, and given a larger share of rights. The common people, too, have taken fresh courage to assert their claims, and have not ceased to agitate, till their voice was heard and answered. Never has the cause of freedom made such rapid progress as in the last twenty years. In 1863 the Russian serfs were granted freedom of person, and a perpetual right to certain parts of the land; and although anarchy seems to reign in that broad empire, I believe the result will be that abuses will be reformed, and the people will gain the rights long denied to them. France, after her disastrous war with Germany, became a Republic, and if grave dangers still threaten, the heart of the people is right, and they will have a happy issue out of all their troubles. The barbarous Turk has been humbled, and millions of people are freed wholly or in part from his cruel sway. England, under a liberal ministry, is moving steadily towards greater freedom for the people, and there are signs that down-trodden Ireland shall not always strive against its wrongs in vain. Indeed the people of every realm have caught the spirit of liberty, and no man can tell how largely this has grown out of the success of our civil strife. Certainly for a hundred years our nation has stood in the front of the battle-ranks of progress, and our success gave courage to the friends of liberty everywhere.

Thus the problem of free government has been solved. Many people said: "The Republic does well in times of peace, when business is prosperous, and the country is growing. It seems strong when there is no strain upon it, but a great Rebellion will put it to the test and show its weakness. When the people are divided, it will be found that a government by the people is no government at all. Then some stronger authority, like a king or emperor, will be needed, to strike the people with awe and command obedience." Vain was the fear, false the prophesy! The result showed that the Americans prized liberty, and were willing to defend it with their lives. By their loyalty and self-sacrifice perhaps the greatest Rebellion of modern times was resisted and crushed. It was a season of great peril, for issues of the highest importance were at stake, and the result seemed to hang trembling in the balances. With great anxiety the oppressed of all nations watched the conflict, and prayed most fervently that the cause of freedom should not fail. It did not fail! To our troops God granted the victory. It was shown that no sacrifice was too great for a free people to make. Indeed, the loyalty, devotion and sacrifice of the American people astonished the world. What a terrible calamity the death of the Republic would have been! The States must have been left divided, weak, jealous of one another, liable to constant wars, and in case of foreign invasion well nigh powerless. The cause of progress would have been put back a hundred years. Autocrats all over the earth would have taken fresh courage to oppress their peoples, while the poor and humble would have lost all heart to resist their demands. Thank God the strength of free institutions has been proved! It has been shown that no government is so strong as that in which the people feel a personal interest and responsibility, and are willing to defend it with their lives. Well, then, may we celebrate this day, for the triumph of liberty in America will yet lead to the freedom of the entire world.

What remains to be done? It is certainly our duty to honor the heroic men who saved the nation. It is a plain duty to render to all their dues, and who have deserved so well or so much, as those who left all the endearments of home to suffer the privations of camp, hospital or prison pen, and the dangers of the battle-field? For us the brave soldiers endured tortures the most acute, and met death in its most frightful forms. Consider the many benefits which have flowed from their sufferings and sacrifices, and say if the debt of gratitude owed to them is not beyond our power to repay? Surely it is right to raise in their memory monuments of enduring granite and bronze, and to inscribe upon them in imperishable letters the names of those who died for their country! It is a duty we owe the dead, it is the best means of keeping their memory fresh in the minds of the living, and of leading them to imitate the patriotism of the departed. It is right to set apart a day in grateful memory of their heroic deeds, to decorate their graves with the fairest flowers, and to pronounce words in glowing eulogy of their loyalty and devotion. But some of the men who fought for the flag are still living—they are with us to-day—let us show them that their heroism is appreciated and honored! Many surviving soldiers now suffering from the exposures of camps and wounds of battles, deserve our kindest care, our most generous help. Many, alas! are the widows and orphans of the heroic dead. God grant they may never be neglected, or allowed to lack any of the necessities of life! When the soldiers enlisted, ample promises were made that their wives and children should be cared for, and want never be allowed to cross the threshold of their homes. For a time these pledges were faithfully kept, but as the perils of war are past, there is danger lest they fade from our memory. To be sure the State and general government were most generous in giving bounties and pensions, but there is much which no government can do. One of the noble objects of the Grand Army of the Republic is to watch over the families of the dead, and shield them from every form of want. This Order has done and is doing a most worthy work, and deserves your generous sympathy and support — for surely the best way to honor the dead is to help the needy families who depended upon them.

It is our duty, also, to honor the patriotism which preserved our liberties. No doubt there were soldiers who enlisted for large bounties, and in the time of danger deserted; but the great majority were moved by sincere love of country, and sacrificed every worldly ambition to secure the life of the nation. Even when wounded their interest in the cause led them to forget their own sufferings, and think only of the success of the battle. At Lookout Mountain, while going up Missionary Ridge, a color Sergeant was wounded, and borne to the rear. A comrade went to him and asked: "Where did it hit you?" He replied: "Most up the Ridge, sir." "But I mean where did the bullet strike you?" "Within twenty yards of the top, almost up," was the answer. "No, no," said the man, "think of yourself a moment, and tell me where you were wounded?" As the blanket was turned back the arm and shoulder were found terribly mangled by a shell; yet the Sergeant could not think of himself, but said: "I had the standard in my hands and was making for the top. In two minutes more I should have placed the colors on the top;" and so with thoughts on the flag and the fight, his eyes grew dim, and his ears heavy in death. Many soldiers were as self-forgetful as this—their first and last thought was of the flag, and if that prospered, they were content to suffer and die. That is the spirit to be honored to-day. How such devotion to the country rebukes the disgraceful struggles of the Senate for petty offices; the corruptions of the Star Postal Line; and the criminal folly which imperils the health of our greatest city by filth, for fear that men of the opposite party might clean the streets. Far be it from me to condemn the politicians of America by wholesale. There are too many in office who are corrupt, but all are not dishonest. There are public men who are worthy of the mantle of Washington, Hamilton, and Jefferson; men who love the nation and labor to secure its best interests. Would there were more of such in both parties! These are the men to nominate and to support. Let every American remember those noble words of Mr. Hayes: "He serves his party best who serves his country best," and resolve that at every election he will vote for honest and patriotic men, and firmly refuse to support the corrupt of any name or party.

Poet's Corner.

Mother.

BY AUGUSTUS M. LORD.

Year by year I move away
From the morning of my day,
Boyhood's work and boyhood's play
  But a dream within a dream.

I have walked the world of men,
Deepened soul and broadened brain,
Learned and unlearned, learned again,
  Broken many a cherished scheme.

Still "I would" yields to "I ought;"
All the shrewd-eyed world has taught
Is but ashes, and is naught
  To the lessons learned of thee.

Fades the poet's light and bloom,
Sage's wisdom turns to gloom;
Oh, the twilight-darkened room,
  And the talks beside thy knee!

Friends are mine, well tried and true;
Heart and head, we loved and grew;
But we have our tasks to do,
  Tasks we may not reconcile.

And I feel that one alone
Lives a life within my own;
Praise or blame upon me thrown
  Fades before a mother's smile.

Pleasant tribute others claim,
Hand and lip it went and came—
Here I owe to much to name,
  Gifts with which each day is rife.

But whatever gained or lost,
I would give though often crossed,
What I know thou wishes most—
  Guerdon of a manly life.

Life's Labor.

BY LYDIA DAVIS THOMSON.

Our earthly house is what we build ourselves;
  'Tis ours to make it firm and true and grand,
That when the winds and waves against it dash,
  It may be found not builded on the sand.

This life is ours, to mould it as we will,
  'Tis ours to follow good, or ill pursue,
To grope in darkness here, or walk in light,—
  And what we are depends on what we do.

We grow in grace by virtue of pure thought;
  We grow in strength by clean, unselfish deeds;
We grow in love as oft we willing lend
  The smile, or word, or hand to human needs.

Then earnest work should be our earnest prayer,
  That when our being's end below is gained,
And this our earthly structure is dissolved,
  We may arise to heights not here attained.

Selected Story.

Doctor Latham's Wooing.

Dr. Clay Latham sat alone in his office, looking idly through an open window on to the village street beyond, when suddenly some one flitted by, deigning him as she passed a slight bend of the haughty head, as though surprised into the recognition.

Six weeks ago, Bell Thornton had left her city home for a few months' rest and quiet, (so she had declared) begging her aunt, who had welcomed her so gladly, to let her, if possible, feel herself a child again. She was an heiress, this young lady, in her own right.

Doctor Clay smiled when her aunt told him how Bell had learned to almost hate her money—how sweet and unselfish she was at heart—contrasting the tale with her manner toward the young physician, who had his own way to carve in the world, or recalling the dainty, exquisite toilets which seemed so thoroughly to belong by right to her beauty.

He had found it necessary very often to tell himself these things in the past six weeks, yet the color suddenly left his face now, and he savagely bit his lips.

"Yesterday," he murmured, "I saw her caress a stray dog. Ah, poor brute! he was not likely to forget the gulf that yawns between them. The man, more ambitious, might strive to bridge it. So she reasons. She forgets that pride and manhood first must trail in the dust; and without these the bridge would have but poor foundation. And yet—and yet, fool that I am, to stand once, just once, on equal ground with her, I would feel that I had not lived in vain!"

* * * * * *

"Did you say you expected Doctor Latham, aunt?" questioned Miss Thornton, a few days later.

"Yes," was the reply. "I sent for him. Harry is not well, and I thought it best he should see him. How is it, Bell, you do not like Doctor Clay, as the children call him? I had prophesied you would be such friends."

The young lady shrugged her shoulders, but an impatient look crept into her eyes.

"He gives me no opportunity to like him," she answered. "He is so cold, so reserved, so proud—I—I hate him! He may be a very good physician, dear aunt, and I hope little Harry may find him so, but I should be very sorry to place myself at his tender mercy. So, that he shall not find me here, I will run away until his visit is over."

And, with a laughing "good-by" nod, snatching up her jaunty hat from the chair at her side, Bell turned to fly.

But, alas for human foresight! at the moment that carriage-wheels sounded on the graveled path, in her haste to avoid the enemy her foot slipped, and, as Doctor Latham entered, he found two patients instead of one. In her fall, Miss Thornton's foot had twisted under her, and she had fainted from the pain.

A great wave of pity swept over the man's face as he saw how white she had grown, and, with tender, careful skill, he brought her back to consciousness.

A low moan testified to her suffering. Then she saw who had her, and though to have the boot cut from the swollen foot was agony, no further sigh betrayed it.

Nor, when the doctor raised his head, after having carefully affixed the bandages, was there other than professional courtesy in his expressed hope that she might now be enabled to gain a little rest, but that it would be some weeks before she could hope again to use her foot.

She could no longer run away to avoid his coming. Was it possible she grew rather to look forward to the hour when she might expect him, as, when passing to and from Harry's room, where he was still confined an invalid, he would stop in the library, where she was held a prisoner, and ask a few grave, professional questions, which she would answer with equal gravity?

"He hates to do it," she would say to herself. "How hateful I must be to him!"

But, as Harry grew better, and the visits ceased, she learned how much she missed them.

The foot had grown strong again, when July gave place to the hot, glaring days of August.

Doctor Latham had little time for idle musings in his office now. Every day his number of patients were increasing, especially in one part outlying the village, where the land was low, and where the hot sun rested the long day, only to give place to a dank mist at night.

The cottages here were poorly drained, too—mostly belonging to the factory people. If a breeze did not spring up soon— The doctor shook his head. He feared trouble.

And, in those first August days, the trouble came. The villagers fled like sheep before it, or stayed only to be struck down by the enemy in their midst.

Each day the fever gained in power and malignity; each day the nurses grew fewer, their need of help greater, when, one afternoon, at the door of one of the cottages where three of the inmates had been stricken, Doctor Latham and Miss Thornton met face to face.

"Are you mad?" he questioned. "Do you not know that this is almost certain death?"

"I do not fear it," she answered; and, for the first time, her eyes smiled into his.

But the frown only deepened on his brow.

"I forbid it!" he commanded; "not only for yourself—my power there is of no avail—but for your aunt and the children. You may carry the contagion to them, even if you escape yourself."

She smiled again.

"I would hardly be willing to risk that. Aunt has gone away with the children. She insisted upon my accompanying them. I love her dearly, and was sorry to disobey her, but my natural obstinacy would have its way; therefore you see me here. But do not let me longer detain you, doctor. You are sorely needed within."

For the first time an awful fear fell upon the man beside her, who had pursued his way with such unflinching calmness in this awful time.

"I cannot consent to this, Miss Thornton," he said. "I beg—I implore you to hesitate ere you go further!"

"My mind is made up," she answered, firmly. "Do you not complain of the dearth of nurses? Would not careful attention save many a life now sacrificed? Yet, when one offers for the duty, you would not accept. We stand on equal footing, Doctor Latham. My right is as great as yours. Do not oppose me; help me."

And, laying for one instant her little hand within his, she passed on.

But as he entered the cottage, where the poor mother sat weeping by the bedside of the three little stricken children, only one sentence rang in his ear:

"We stand on equal footing!"

Had he not once said, to attain this he would consider life had not been lived in vain? But how little had he foreseen the future! Was it thus his hope was to be realized?

"Oh, God!" The groan burst from him as, his duties over, he turned again into the hot, heavy air. "On equal footing to-day! Perhaps to-morrow to look on her dead face!"

But to-morrow followed to-morrow, and he grew to look for her where the pestilence raged the most greedily, and where to the poor sufferers her face and form were of an angel, her very touch healing. "On equal ground," she had said. Ah, but had she not risen far, far beyond him? No longer pride and haughtiness the bar between them, but her own unstained and noble womanhood. Was this the heiress he had deemed so haughty, so cold, so proud, who ministered to the sick, the suffering, with only a quiet pity on the pale but beautiful face?

Sometimes, through the long night-watches, they would spend hours together; but the man only wrapped himself closer in his mantle of reserve, while his very heart lay at her feet.

But there came a day when the mists scattered, and a cooling breeze brought healing on its wings. At its close, as she toiled wearily homeward, to snatch a few hours' rest, a sudden faintness overcame her. She staggered; all grew dark.

In another she would have fallen, but that the driver of the carriage, rapidly following her footsteps, had watched them totter, and springing from his seat he caught her in his own strong arms.

No time for words. One moment his pulses thrilled as he held her thus; the next he had lifted her to his side, and putting all speed to the horse, bore her to her home.

"Drink this!" he commanded, holding a glass of wine to her lips, when he had placed her upon a lounge; and with all her strength, her independence gone, like a tired child she obeyed. "Now sleep!" he said, and, as though her will at last had bowed to his, the long lashes swept the cheeks, the red lips parted, the breath just stirring the lace at her throat, while a blessed unconsciousness wrapped her in its embraee.

For hours he sat motionless, watching her, knowing that each moment gained tended toward victory. Twice, thrice, the old housekeeper had stolen to the door, but he had waved her back.

No sound must break the stillness. Full well he knew, had she not slept, she would have died.

Morning had dawned in the heavens ere the blue eyes opened, to meet the watcher's gaze. A rosy blush mantled her cheek.

"I am well, strong now," she said. "Oh, doctor, why did you stay?"

"Do not begrudge it to me!" he answered, hotly, madly. "It could do you no harm; it has been food for my future happiness. I have a confession to make to you, Miss Thornton. When you came among us, I thought you cold, proud, haughty. I was a poor man, you an heiress. Do not start! I never have forgotten the gulf yawning between us; I would not bridge it if I could. But even in that time I learned to love you. Then I found how greatly I had erred. The coldness, the haughtiness, fell away from you, and I knew that I worshiped at a shrine. Will you forgive me the injustice I once did you? You will soon go away from here, soon forget us; but sometimes—sometimes I wish I had fallen at my post."

"Clay," she whispered, and the word stole like music to his ear, "you have saved my life. Will you make it worthless? You say you would not bridge the gulf if you could. Will you destroy the bridge I build across the chasm which exists only in your own foolish pride? You call me rich—will you make me poor? Answer me. Oh, Clay, have you not long ago read my secret, that you force me to make it so plain?"

But her outstretched hands are now clasped close in his, her burning face hidden in his breast, as thus, in the early dawn, he knows only his pride, not hers, has been the bar between them, while at last the mist falls from his eyes, the weight from the heart on which his precious burden rested. And when she lifts her head and he looks into her eyes, he knows, with a great gush of thanksgiving, that after all it is he who has given her the only riches which she craves, without which her woman-heart would be poor indeed.

Anecdotes.

FEMALE DOCTORS. — A St. Louis doctor factory recently turned out a dozen female doctors. As long as the female doctors were confined to one or two in the whole country, and those were only experimental, the Sun held its peace, and did not complain; but now that the colleges are engaged in producing female doctors as a business, we must protest, and in so doing will give a few reasons why female doctors will not prove a paying branch of industry. In the first place, if they doctor anybody it must be women, and three-fourths of the women had rather have a male doctor. Suppose these colleges turn out female doctors until there are as many of them as there male doctors, what have they got to practice on? A man, if there was nothing the matter with him, might call in a female doctor, but if he was sick as a horse (if a man is sick he is sick as a horse), the last thing he would have around would be a female doctor. And why? Because, when a man wants a female fumbling around him, he wants to be well. He don't want to be bilious, or feverish, with his mouth tasting like cheese, and his eyes bloodshot, when a female is looking over him and taking an account of stock. Of course these female doctors are all young and good-looking, and if one of them came into a sick room where a man was in bed, and he had chills, and was as cold as a wedge, and she should sit up close to the side of the bed and take hold of his hand, his pulse would run up to 150, and she would prescribe for a fever when he had chilblains. Then if he died, she would be arrested for malpractice. O, you can't fool us on female doctors. A man who has been sick and had male doctors, knows just how he would feel to have a female doctor come tripping in and throw her fur-lined cloak over a chair, take off her hat and gloves and throw them on a lounge, and come up to the bed with a pair of marine blue eyes, with a twinkle in the corner, and look him in the wild, changeable eyes, and ask him to run out his tongue.—Suppose he knew his tongue was coated so it looked like a yellow Turkish towel, do you suppose he would like to run out five or six inches of the lower part of it, and let that female doctor put her finger on it to see how fur it was? Not much. He would put that tongue up into his cheek, and wouldn't let her see it for twenty-five cents admission. We have all seen doctors put their hands under the bed-clothes and feel of a man's feet to see if they were cold. If a female doctor should do that it would give him the cramps in the legs. A male doctor can put his hands on a man's stomach, and liver and lungs, and ask him if he feels any pain there; but if a female doctor should do the same thing it would make a man sick, and he would want to get up and kick himself for employing a female doctor. O, there is no use talking, it would kill a man. Now, suppose a man has heart disease, and a female doctor should want to listen to the beating of his heart. She would lay her left ear on his left breast, so her eyes and rosebud mouth would be looking right in his face, and her wavy hair would be scattered all around there, getting tangled in buttons of the night shirt. Don't you suppose his heart would get in about twenty extra beats to the minute? You bet! And she would smile—we will bet $10 she would smile—and show her pearly teeth, and the ripe lips would be working as though she were counting the beats, and he would think she was trying to whisper to him, and —Well, what would he be doing all this time? If he was not dead yet, which would be a wonder, his left hand would brush the hair away from her temple and kind of stay there to keep the hair away, and his right hand would get a sort of nervous and move around to the back of her head, and when she had counted the beats a few minutes and was raising her head he would draw the head up to him and kiss her once for luck, if he was as bilious as a Jersey swamp angel, and have her charge it in the bill. And then a reaction would set in, and he would be as weak as a a cat, and she would have to fan him and rub his head till he got over being nervous, and then make out his prescription after he got asleep. No; all of a man's symptoms change when a female doctor is practicing on him, and she would kill him dead.

The Sun is a woman's rights paper, and believes in allowing women to do anything that they can do as well as men, and is in favor of paying them as well as men are paid for the same work, taking all things into consideration; but it is opposed to their trifling with human life by doctoring a total stranger. These colleges are doing a great wrong in preparing these female doctors for the warpath, and we desire to enter a protest in behalf of 20,000,000 men who could not stand the pressure. —Peck's Sun.

THE TRIALS OF EDITORSHIP. — Three years ago Detroit had about fifty amateur weeklies in full blast. One by one they have succumbed to the chicken-pox, measles, whooping-cough, and hard times, and the number yet alive can be counted on the fingers of the left hand. The latest failure occurred yesterday just after the bells had struck twelve o'clock. An ambitious, persevering boy of twelve had established the Twilight, in a little second floor back room, beyond the parks on Woodward avenue. In his issue of twenty-three copies in the forenoon occurred the following item:

Notiss—tHere is a Red headed WOman in this Sitty who LickS her Children witH the StOve handle. LEt her be Wair or We SHall puBlisH Her naiM.

The editor of the Twilight was seated in his sanctum at the hour named, when a female entered. She hadn't come to subscribe. She wasn't there to have a funeral notice published. She didn't look like the president of a female sewing society. No one could read her errand until she had locked the door.—Then she kicked the press over, upset the standing galley, knocked the legs from under the editorial table, and laid hands on the editor. Being taken by surprise, he did not realize what was going on until he had been shaken out of his boots and jammed into the woodbox head first, and ere he had recovered his editorial composure the assailant had fled. Ruin and desolation brooded there. Havoc and disaster sailed around the room. The red-headed woman who licks her children with the stove handle had played smash, and left nothing to begin anew on. No insurance, and no more Twilight.—Detroit Free Press.

Miscellaneous.

In the midst of life we are in death," has a deeper meaning than at first appears. Das Leben est der Zod, says a German philosopher—life is death—and certain it is that the activity of life produces death, and the greater the activity the nearer is death, as the faster the clock beats the sooner it runs down. Heat is life, as cold is death, and from the heat of the sun's rays has come all the life in the solar system, and yet by virtue of their very vitality they develop poison organisms both vegetable and and animal, miasma and fermentations that send deadly fevers and plagues stalking over the earth. The hot weather is the season for typhoid, diphtheria, yellow fever, and other contagious diseases and epidemics, which it has been demonstrated are caused by the action of the sun upon decaying animal and vegetable matter. The proximity of a cesspool or privy to a well, the choking up of a sewer or drain pipe, a stagnant pond or puddle in the back yard, or a few decaying vegetables in the cellar, even a heap of damp and fermenting grass or weeds have furnished the germs of an epidemic that have decimated the neighborhood, while prayers were offered up that the hand of the inscrutable Providence might be stayed. The Providence was the manifestation of the eternal laws of nature, and had they been understood and acted upon the trouble had been averted. To labor is to pray, says the proverb, and prayer in such behalf should take the form of timely work in thoroughly cleaning out every atom of decaying or fermenting matter, and, above all, seeing that there is no possible source of contamination of wells and cisterns, and it should be understood that the clearest water in which chemical analysis can discover no impurity may contain the germs of disease that will spread through the whole mass of the blood, like leaven through flour. If every householder in the land would spend a day in "cleaning up," summer diseases would be stamped out, as Gen. Butler stamped out yellow fever at New Orleans.

DO NOT DRINK IT.—You remember how David, with one of those fits of homesickness which seem to have come over him occasionally, thirsted for a draught from the well of Bethlehem, at which, as a shepherd boy, he used to drink. There were those around him of his chief captains to whom his every wish was law and they, ere he could say to them "Nay," dashed away from him through the opposing ranks of the Philistines, and brought back a pitcher of the precious water. But he would not drink it; he poured it out before the Lord, for men had risked their lives to get it for him. So, when you lift the glass and think of the multitudes whose souls for eternity are being endangered by that deceitful beverage, I want you, David-like, to pour it out before the Lord; and, believe me, He who poured out His precious blood for you and me will count it no vain sacrifice.—Rev. Dr. W. M. Taylor.

An excellent suggestion has been made by the Earl of Derby in the interest of workingmen. It is that in every workshop there should be a bank established, so that when the men receive their weekly wages, they may at once make a deposit, if desirous to do so, without running the gauntlet of temptation set up by the liquor stores on the way home. He says, "I do not think that it is an exaggeration to say that a penny bank in every workshop would add millions yearly to the wealth of the country. The shilling that is set aside from weekly wages should not have to pass the public house door if it can be helped; it should be put by at once."

EPITAPHS.—A gentleman in Essex, who was an officer in the forty-eighth regiment during the rebellion, has furnished us with the following epitaphs which he copied from tombstones in a cemetery in Baton Rouge, La.:

Here lies buried in this tomb,
A constant sufferer from Salt Rheum,
Which finally in truth did pass—
To Spotted Erysipelas.
A husband dear, a father true,
Here he lies and so must you.

Here lies the body of David Lewis. His last words were, I die a Christian and a Democrat.

A NON-COMMITTAL CAPTAIN.

Sea captains are generally prepared for ·y emergencies; at least, the hero of our ·ch seems to have been.

·ptain Ward of Salem, Massachusetts, s an eccentric of the first water, and one ·s peculiarities was that he never gave ·ired answer to a direct question. ·ere is an amusing instance of his evasive habit:

One morning, four of his friends, who aware of this trait in his character, ·d the captain going to market, and ·some bantering, entered into a bet as the practicability of learning from him price he paid for his purchase.

They accordingly settled the preliminaries, and stationing themselves at different points along the street which he must pass on his way home, awaited his coming.

Very soon, the bluff old gentleman made his appearance, with a bunch of pigeons in his hand. As he approached, the first questioner accosted him with:

"Good morning, captain. What did you give for pigeons this morning?"

"Money," said the captain, bluntly, as he moved up the street.

The second gentleman, a little further on, addressed him and asked:

"How goes pigeons this morning, captain?"

"They don't go at all. I carry 'em," was the equally unsatisfactory reply.

Shortly after that he met the third, who passed the time of day, and inquired:

"How much are pigeons a dozen, captain?"

"Didn't get a dozen; only bought half a dozen," said the old gentleman, still plodding on his way.

Finally, the fourth and last of the conspirators cottoned to the wary old salt, by observing, in the blandest of tones:

"A fine lot of pigeons you have there, captain. What did you get them for?"

"To eat," was the pertinent and emphatic rejoinder.

And the captain reached home without further molestation.

A BOY TO THE CHIEF COMMAND.

When General Bonaparte first came among us we were furious with the Directorate for having sent a boy to command us. (It should be remembered that at this time Napoleon was only twenty-six years of age.) He was a short, awkward-looking, thin youth, and the Army was seriously discontented with having such a boy placed in the chief command, while Generals like Augereau and Massena were placed under him, but they soon felt the influence of the young General's genius in establishing order among them; and after the battle of Montenotte, when Napoleon on the following morning visited the hospitals, and addressed words of encouragement to every wounded soldier, and saw himself that his wounds were dressed and his failing strength revived by suitable nourishment, a kind of magic confidence in him came over the spirit of the soldiers, which the sebsequent victories of Dego and Massemo, following soon after that of Montenotte, kindled into a spirit of enthusiasm.—Temple Bar.

TENDER AND TRUE.

The next morning the young man and the girl's father both appeared in the Mayor's Court, the old genileman being charged with assault.

"Where were the parties standing when you saw them?" asked the court.

"Out in the moonlight," said the witness; "the complainant was about halfway down the steps and the prisoner was standing on the porch, close to the edge.

"What was the distance between the parties?" asked the court.

"Just one foot," calmly replied the witness.

The court leaned forward and looked at the witness earnestly for several seconds, then with a profound sigh leaned far back in his chair and frowned awfully at the officer on duty. The prisoner smiled grimly, while the complainant fidgetted uneasily in his chair and tried to reach his abrupt mustache with unavailing teeth, and the witness, calmly gazing at the court and placidly chewing his quid of fine-cut, was the only man in the court room who sat unmoved and undisturbed.

A DUEL WITH BOWS AND ARROWS.

On one occasion bows have been bent with most bloodthirsty intent. On Feb. 10, 1791, a very ludicrous duel took place at Edinburgh, of which, unfortunately, only this meagre account is preserved: "Two gentlemen met on the Meadows, supplied with bows and arrows, to decide a point of honor. They were accompanied by seconds, and had a surgeon in attendance in case their Indian artillery should by any means prove effective. After a harmless exchange of three shots the parties retired, the point of honor doubtless being satisfactorily arranged. If similar weapons were always employed in dueling," adds the newspaper reporter, "this amusement would speedily become unfashionable, seeing that the seconds would run quite as great, if not a greater, risk than the principals."—Belgravia.

A real Christian is a man who prays on Sunday, and then helps the Lord to answer his prayer the rest of the week.

A wise man ought to hope for the best, be prepared for the worst, and bear with equanimity whatever may happen.

He receives a benefit who bestows one on a worthy person.

CONCERNING CATS.

Is it not strange that the favorite, one might say the domestic friends and companions of the human race are the representatives of the two classes of carnivorous animals, a feline and a canine.

At present, leaving the dog for future consideration, we are disposed to treat of the cat, which represents the feline, just as the dog represents the canine species.

In one respect the cat is regarded as unworthy of consideration—that is, while there is rather a heavy tax upon dogs in the British Islands, the cat has never been subjected to anything like a fiscal notice.

In a Natural History, published in 1775, extending to twelve volumes, and written by the Reverend Samuel Ward, the domestic cat, that Pussy which has a home in every household, however humble, is hardly dealt with.

He describes it as an useful but deceitful domestic. The dog's caresses are sincere, he says, but the cat has but the appearance of attachment. "Nothing," he adds, "so discovers the natural malignity of the cat as its fondness for sporting with its living prey before killing it."

In ancient times, cats were more favorably regarded. In Egypt, they were looked upon as sacred animals. To kill one was an offense punished with death; and when a cat died, in the course of nature, all the inmates of the house had to go into mourning.

Among the Egyptian statues, a cat-headed deity is familiar, and mummies of that sacred animal are abundant. They are to be seen, some two or three thousand years old, in most modern collections of antiquities.

As late as the time of King Richard II., who died in the year 1400, a race of wild cats abounded in England. They are mentioned by name in a charter to the Abbot of Peterborough, permitting him to hunt game in the royal forests.

Cat-skins, probably of the wild cat, were a favorite trimming of handsome dresses in the middle ages, and restricted to the use and adornment of certain ranks by the sumptuary laws of the period.

According to Hone's "Everyday Book," cats were introduced into England from the Island of Cyprus, by merchants who came to trade for tin, a metal which then, as now, was largely found in the southwestern shire of Cornwall.

By the ancient laws of Wales, a considerable money-value was fixed on cats and kittens. A good mouser fetched fourpence (the same price as a calf), while a new-born kitten was valued at a penny.

In the middle ages, a cat was the only animal allowed to be kept by the "Ankers"—recluses who lived in little cells, built against the walls of a church or a cathedral, without any opening into the sacred building.

In Provence, in the South of France, a singular survival of the Egyptian cat-worship lingered long. At the feast of Corpus Christi, the finest tom-cat in the country was wrapped in swaddling clothes and exhibited on a magnificent shrine; but, in the same place, on St. John's Day, a number of cats were burned in the public square, on suspicion of being accomplices of wizards or witches.

It is said that cats are naturally cleverer than dogs, and can be more successfully trained for performing purposes. At present, in the streets of London, is an exhibition of two cats who box cleverly—feline pugilists!

There exists more than a tradition, actually a credible record, of a concert of cats that was gratuitously exhibited in Paris. It was called a "Concert Miaulant" from the mewing of the animals.

They were trained, it was discovered, by having their tails pulled every time a certain note was struck, and the disagreeable remembrance caused them to mew each time they heard the sound again.

There are many stories of feline intelligence, but, as a general rule, the cat is less popular than the dog, and the household do not know much about it. The breakage of crockery, and the absence of cold viands from the larder are liberally declared to have been caused by Grimalkin, but perhaps the servants know more about it.

The cat has settled down into service, as guarding the domicile from the mischievous mouse—its natural enemy. The dog is a drawing-room favorite, if not too bulky, and associates with its master.

The cat remains mostly in the basement, and is expected to earn its own living by waging perpetual warfare against the rats and mice. A kitten, only a few weeks old, recognizes its enemy and its prey, on seeing it for the first time.

Cats have got a bad name from their habit of slinking out of the house at nights, and joining, toward the "wee, sma' hours," in the caterwauling concert in the yard and on the house-roof, which deprives many of their sleep.

They are punctual, however, in their attendance at meal-times. In Sir Henry Meux's great brewery, in London, where a large number of cats are part of the establishment, they are called to their dinner by the peal of a bell, and gather in simultaneously, with the punctuality of hungry gourmands.—Dr. R. Shelton Mackenzie.

TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.
Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,
Universalist Pastor.

For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.
Peabody, Mass, June 27, 1879.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,
Of Beverly, Mass.

I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, CATARRH, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him; his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.
Beverly, Mass, Oct'r 29, 1879.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,
Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence, Ms.

My dear Dr. Lighthill,—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the larynx into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted, I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.
Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.
Lawrence, Nov. 4, 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,
Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.

The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celbrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.

I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.

I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.
R. S. LAMBERT.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.
From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,
Piano Manufacturer, 185 Washington St., Boston

Dr. Lighthill,—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.
I have the honor to be very truly yours,
A. M. McPHAIL, Jr.

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.
From Mrs. M. A. Emery.

Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends, and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,
Mrs. M. A. EMERY,
359 Lowell Street,
Lawrence, Sept. 21, 1880.

HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES.
A REMARKABLE CURE.
From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.

Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man.
G. H. ROBINSON,
Methuen, Nov. 1st, 1880.

PEABODY'S ADV.

When a married man up-town was surprised by his wife with his arm around the pretty servant girl, a few evenings since, he rushed out of his house and had his hair shaved close to his skull with a horse clipper. He says he wanted to save the roots anyhow.

True benevolence is to love all men. Recompense injury with justice, and kindness with kindness.—Confucius.

Nice Cologne in fancy pitcher for 39 cents—pitcher alone worth more than the price we ask for it filled, at Peabody's.

"Never milk while the cow is eating," is the advice of a bucolic cotemporary. Judging from the character of much of the milk that comes to market, it would be more to the point never to milk while the cow is drinking.—Boston Transcript.

Lisle Gloves, all grades, a fine stock at Peabody's. Orders by mail will receive prompt attention.

A woman admires a handsome man until she meets a woman whom he admires, and then she thinks he isn't as handsome as he was, and that the woman is a deceitful, jealous, conniving hussy.—Floating Filosophies.

The "Foster" Kid Gloves, laced wrist, instead of buttons, will fit any wrist perfectly, at Peabody's.

She was a young lady fresh from boarding school, and she went into a laundry to learn how to iron shirts. Not suceeding very well, she said, "Oh, Katy, I shall never be able to get a polish on this bosom." "Sure, miss, you want to put a little elbow grease on it." "Please send for some right away, Katy," was the innocent response.—Boston Courier.

A lady who knows what she is talking about, writes, "I have spent much time the last twenty-five years shopping on Essex St., and am fully convinced that there is no store so attractive as Peabody's. He always has the best goods, latest styles and designs, and sells them at a uniformly low price. His assistants are always kind and attentive, vieing with each other to make the store what it is—the pleasantest and best store to trade in on the street." So say they all.

Gents' Socks, 15 cts.—two pair for 25 cts.—at Peabody's.

To Peabody's store the ladies hie
When pretty goods they wish to buy;
His store may easily be found,
By crowds of customers around,
Who, by the lowest prices drawn,
Commence to buy at early dawn,
And all day long they rush to trade,
And dream at night of bargains made.

We wonder how the appointment of ex-Senator Bruce (colored) of Mississippi, as Register of the Treasury, sets on the stomach of some of those old Copperheads around here. We suppose they wouldn't look at a treasury note signed by a negro.

The Eclipse Manufacturing Co., of Beloit, Wis., are putting up a large wind-mill, at the curry-shop of Mr. Thomas E. Proctor, on Webster street, to be used for pumping water into a large tank that supplies the factory with water. The fan has eight arms, each ten feet long.

The Galveston (Texas) News contains an account of a large poultry show that was recently held in that place, and the gentleman who won the first premium on Brahmas bought the eggs of Mr. C. L. Beckett, of this town, which is quite a recommendation for the pure stock of that gentleman.

Last Wednesday afternoon Misses Eliza Poor and Katie Price, of the Bowditch School, entertained their pupils with a May party. They visited Buxton's Hill, and enjoyed a pleasant afternoon. These kindly feelings between teacher and pupils can be nothing but productive of good results.

Mr. W. Winslow has purchased the old Custom House yacht "Excelsior," and has hired an old Salem harbor pilot and "skipper." It is Mr. Winslow's intention to let the boat for pleasure parties, and to run it in the vicinity of the Willows when not engaged elsewhere. Mr. Winslow intends spending his vacation on the yacht, in hopes to improve his health, which strict attention to business has somewhat impaired. The first excursion will take place down the harbor June 17th.

During the shower last Monday evening the hired man at the residence of one of our citizens, who is connected by telephone, heard the telephone bell ringing, and, as was his custom, went to answer it, not thinking it was caused by the lightning. He placed the instrument to his ear just as a vivid flash illumined the heavens. In less time than it takes for us to tell it, he was picking himself up from the floor at the opposite side of the room, and commenced rubbing the kinks out of his arms and legs. The next time he takes an electric shock it will not be through the telephone.

Barnum sends us word that since the advertisements of his giant steer were issued (a cut of the animal will be found on our eighth page) the great animal, on account of his tremendous size and unwieldy shape, has become incapacitated for railroad travel.—Hence, the circus people have been compelled to turn him out to pasture, and shall have to forego the pleasure of his exhibition in Salem. The circular says:—"We never advertise an act feature or animal which we do not exhibit. For this reason we send this brief notification that our giant steer, the monarch of the bovine race, is not with us, but that the fault is not ours, and proceeds from a cause we cannot overcome. We have enlarged our tents for the third time, and yet we fail to hold the people. Better urge them to attend afternoon exhibitions and avoid the great crowds at night."

Peabody is the handsomest town in the State. If you doubt it, climb into the depot carriage, and take a drive through our beautiful shaded streets. View our pleasant residences, grand school buildings, engine houses, soldiers' monument and splendid water works that are to be.

Rev. James Conlon, a native of Pawtucket, R. I., has been appointed to assist Rev. Vincent F. Borgialli, at St. John's Church, until the return of the pastor. Father Conlon was formerly stationed in Salem for a short time. In a late issue we erroneously stated that Father Tobin, of Salem, was to come to Peabody.

Mr. Edwin Caden, in the employ of Mr. Charles Cassidy, of this town, while driving around the corner of Market and Oxford streets in Lynn, last Friday, came in collision with a heavy express team. Both shafts of Mr. Cassidy's team were broken, and Mr. Caden was thrown to the ground and somewhat bewildered, but not seriously injured.

Last Saturday, Chief Peaslee took Mr. Moses Osborn, of Bowditch Court, to the Danvers Insane Hospital. This is an extremely sad case. Mr. Osborn is 77 years of age, and was always considered a good and harmless citizen. He held the position of janitor at the Bowditch School for many years. He has been demented for some time.

Charlie Hanson, of Lynn, was riding a bicycle along Washington street last Friday evening, and wanting to slow up, applied his brake too heavily, which sent him flying over the handles, and landed him without much ceremony some six or seven feed ahead of the machine. He was not much injured, but limped considerably, having turned his ankle.

As a young lady who is often seen driving her own horse along our streets was out riding recently, when coming down Washington street one of the wheels refused to go round, and it required the assistance of a gentleman who was passing to pull off the offending rotator and lubricate the inflamed axle. After a short time the vehicle was brought into a happier mood, and went on its way rejoicing.

As a public benefactor commend us to the ever welcome street sprinkler. After enduring suffocating clouds of dust, the appearance of the water cart is most grateful. Hot and dusty weather will be plenty this season, but with a sufficiency of Spring Pond water in our hydrants, and a team for distributing it, like that hitched out by Mr. Currier, we can safely sit back and enjoy it, at the same time sympathizing with our less fortunate neighbors.

The estate on Aborn street, belonging to the heirs of the late Charles Bomer (advertised in the PRESS) was sold at auction by L. B. Nichols, last Friday. It was sold in three lots. Bancroft, for $415; and the third, including barn and carpenter shop, with land under and adjoining, to George C. Peirce, for $905.

The main shaft at Geo. Brimmer's tannery was "wrung off" one day last week, but no one was hurt; damage about $500.

A picked nine from Peabody played a picked nine at Danvers, Monday forenoon, and defeated them. Score, 12 to 9, five innings.

Mr. Daniel Mullane, residing on Tremont street, received a shock by the lightning on Monday evening, and was thrown to the ground.

Wanted at this office. An intelligent, active, American boy, to learn the business. One who has attended the grammar school preferred.

The proposed lease of the Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad by the Eastern has been abandoned, as satisfactory arrangement can not be made.

The rooms now occupied by the F. M. C. T. A. Society, over Simonds' grocery store, are being fitted up and remodeled for the use of the Society.

Probably 500 people visited Geo. Stevens' store, yesterday, and saw the large splinter which he took from the Baptist steeple, after it was struck by lightning.

If any of our quotations are not according to Hoyle, remember that none of the several editions of the New Testament we have contracted for have yet arrived.

Mrs. Dillingham, Test Medium of Lynn, will occupy the Hall, corner of Washington and Mason streets, Sunday evening, June 5, 1881, commencing at 7 1-2 o'clock.

Workmen are engaged in the vicinity of the square in making connections with the iron main to supply the stores from that pipe, instead of the old wooden log from which they have been supplied with water.

The F. M. C. T. A. Society will hold their first picnic at Centennial Grove, Essex, on Thursday, the 23d inst. The society, though lately established, is in a flourishing condition, and the picnic undoubtedly will prove a success.

News has been received from Rev. M. J. Masterson, that after a prosperous voyage, he has arrived in Paris, where he met his brother, who is studying there. From the French capital he will proceed to Spain and Portugal, after which he will go to Rome.

Mr. Joseph Fairfield, for many years in the provision business in this town, died at his home on Main street last Saturday, of pneumonia. He always took a great interest in whatever was going on in town, and his business connections made him widely known throughout the community. He was 72 years of age, and leaves a wife and one daughter. His funeral took place yesterday afternoon.

The Selectmen have acted on the first batch of applications for license, and have granted five as follows: Baldwin's Hotel, first class; John H. Tibbetts, second class, and our three apothecaries, Messrs. Grosvenor, Lee and Sweetser. The rest were rejected. The next lot will come up to be disposed of next Saturday. Thus far there will be only one to whom the screen law will apply—Mr. Tibbetts. The police have received orders to notify the liquor dealers not to sell after June 15, and to prosecute all violators after that time.

On Sunday morning last, a gang of roughs, having been driven off from the stone wall inclosing the Poor estate on Tremont street by the police, made their headquarters on Mt. Vernon street, at the cemetery gate. Here they spent the best part of the forenoon, drinking whiskey and beer, which were brought them by a youthful messenger, and causing great annoyance to the large number who visited the cemetery from Peabody. At night they returned and continued their disgraceful conduct by bringing with them an elderly female, who was in a beastly state of intoxication. The whole company spent the night under the trees inside the grove.

We have received two communications, with neither of which we agree. We give space for one, the other being received too late for publication. The substance of it was that it would expedite the business if the Water Board were withdrawn from the Water Committee, and that the committee would be agreed, and could go ahead with the work as they recommended to the town.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

CURIOSITIES.—We believe we mentioned at the time, some two years ago, that Mrs. Margaret Lynch of this town, had received an offer from an agent of P. T. Barnum to travel with his great show and exhibit her two children. We learn that a correspondence has again been opened between the parties interested, and satisfactory arrangements may be made during Barnum's visit to Salem next Friday. The children are real Albinos. The oldest is a boy five years old, and, singular enough, his birthday occurs on the 29th of February. The younger is a girl, and will be three years old next August. They were born in Peabody, and are very pretty children; their skin is of a very unnatural whiteness. The hair, which is also white, is very fine and silky, while the iris and pupil of the eyes are a handsome pink. They can see better when it is dark, and their eyes at that time look like two sparks of fire in the distance. The sun seems to effect them and make them near-sighted during the day. Their skin is of such a delicate color that under the hair it shades almost to a pink. Their features are regular, and to all appearances they are as bright and active as any children of that age. The mother is a hard-working Irish woman and resides on Harris street.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT. — On Sunday evening, at about 7 o'clock, Mr. Geo. H. Bushby and H. Oscar Keniston of this town, were driving at Swampscott beach, when they collided with another team, by which they were both thrown from the carriage and Mr. Keniston, striking upon his head, was severely injured. At first his injuries were supposed to be fatal, but we are happy to learn at this writing, that he is doing well and will probably recover in a few weeks. He was attended by Dr. Jordan of Swampscott, and by his advice removed to his home during the night, and is now attended by Dr. C. C. Pike. Just how the accident occurred we are unable to state, but we are assured that the statement of a Boston daily, that "rum did it," is hardly warranted by any fact. Mr. Keniston is a most estimable young man, employed at C. H. Goulding's furniture store since it was started, and has the fullest confidence of his employer for integrity, ability and good habits. During his residence here he has acquired hosts of friends amoug those with whom he has been brought in contact, by his genial and courteous ways. He has the general sympathy of the public and most earnest good wishes for his speedy recovery. Mr. Bushby is well known as a driver for Bushby & Co., grocers, and with his usual "good luck" escaped injury.

RESIGNATION.—Miss Mary J. Floyd, for the past twelve years Librarian at the Sutton Reference Library, has resigned, to accept the position of town Missionary. In thus severing her connection, she has tendered the following resignation:

PEABODY, May 31, 1881.

Mr. George F. Osgood, Chairman of the Eben Dale Sutton Reference Library Committee:

DEAR SIR,—Having been called to another office, which I deem it my duty to accept, I hereby tender my resignation as Librarian of the Eben Dale Sutton Reference Library, to take effect June 14th, which date will complete a period of twelve years, from the first opening of the Library, June 14, 1869.

In rendering back to you the office with which you have honored me, I take the opportunity to express to you, and the many gentlemen who have been members of the Committee during these twelve years, my deep gratitude for all the kindness and forbearance shown me during my term of service.

Yours very truly,

MARY J. FLOYD.

POLICE NOTES.—May 28, Lawrence D. Cuddire and Thomas H. Lillis were arraigned for assault, and each fined $10 and costs.

31, Mary Quinn of Boston, was found in a dazed condition caused by an overdose of fire water, and was gathered into the fold. Not being able to pay the fee of $1 charged for this attention, she was committed to Salem jail.

George Woodman also appeared for being afflicted with the same complaint, but having more money than Mary, he was discharged, after paying his fine.

STRAWBERRY FESTIVAL. — The Ladies' Aid Society, of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Peabody, will have a Strawberry Festival in their church on Thursday evening, June 2d, to which they cordially invite all their friends. Go and take all your friends.

The Senior Class at the High School are beginning to practice for the annual exhibition.

One of the most sudden and violent thunder storms, with wind and rain, which has lately visited us, occurred last Monday evening. After the intense heat of the day, mutterings of thunder in the west were followed by rapidly rising clouds of inky blackness, and then with a sudden outburst of almost tornado severity, the rain descended in torrents. The electric discharges were the most intense for years. It appeared at times as if the whole heavens was one sheet of brazen brass. And while the rain continued to pour, the sun which was just setting shone through the clouds, making a grand and ever to be remembered sight. The lightning struck the spire of the Baptist Church near the top, and followed down one of the six-inch timbers, splitting it in many pieces, covering the loft with splinters, and making a large opening the full length. The bolt must have split, as the steeple shows that part went on the outside and part followed the gas pipe into the organ loft, a hole being made by it, and parts of the plastering being scattered about the floor. The loss will be about $150. The lightning was seen to run along the railroad tracks and telephone wires without doing any serious damage. At the central office the drops on the switch board were burned off, requiring a new one to be put in.

Later: The lightning shivered a telephone post in front of Mr. Alex. Clark's morocco shop. A barn in South Peabody and a barn on Glue Hill, owned by E. W. Upton, were struck during the storm.

Business is rushing with Dole & Osgood, at their carriage manufactory on Washington street. Just at present the "boys" are turning off a large amount of work and are running over time. Last Saturday they shipped to Boston, for Gould & Co., 69 and 71 Union street, dealers in paints, oils, varnishes, etc., a handsomely painted and well-made Philadelphia Dray. Messrs. Munroe & Arnold are having one of a similar style made for use in town. It will weigh 3200 pounds. These drays are made with a rounded front and open on the side, so that they may be unloaded from the side instead of the rear. They have also recently finished for A. J. Rowe, of Gloucester, a neat and compact team called a wagonette. This is an English style, and will seat ten or twelve persons. They are very pretty and novel.

Last Sunday a Sabbath School concert of unusual interest was held at the Baptist Church. The pulpit was handsomely decorated with elegant hot-house flowers. A large audience was present. The subject was "Temperance," and the exercises consisted of select readings by Miss Brine, Miss Alice Hart, Miss Hanna Thomas and Miss Lucy Shackley, which were finely given. The little ones filled an extremely interesting part of the programme. Remarks were made by Mr. A. E. Wells, superintendent of the Unitarian Sunday School, and by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Wood. The recitations, both single and by classes, were well given, showing much labor and preparation, and the choir rendered some excellent music; on the whole the exercises were instructive and entertaining.

Last Sunday the G. A. R., to the number of 60, attended divine services at the St. Paul's Episcopal Church. Rev. George Walker, the pastor, addressed the assembly in well-chosen remarks, taking his Scriptural lessons from 23d chapter of Joshua and the 21st chapter of Revelations. He urged upon them the necessity of being Christian soldiers, and said they did their country honor as well as those who had gone before; that they had been and were performing a sacred duty in extending substantial aid and relief to the widows and orphans of deceased soldiers; that they would receive their reward for this ministry of love; that in that last day they would hear from divine lips: "Well done, good and faithful servants."

As Mrs. George Carr was returning from the Essex Institute excursion to Cambridge, on the 4.45 train, last Wednesday, she had her pocket book containing some thirty dollars stolen from her pocket by a man who occupied the seat with her. Just as she discovered her loss the man rushed out upon the platform and jumped off; the train was then passing Swampscott. As he jumped he was thrown violently to the ground, and his face was badly cut and disfigured. He asked the railroad official to be put upon the next train back to Lynn, and the station agent kindly complied with his request. After arriving in Salem information was sent that he was a pickpocket.

A survey is in progress by engineers of the Boston & Maine Railroad, for a new railroad line from Malden, through Saugus, Peabody and Salem, to Ipswich. This is about the same route surveyed some years ago, and will probably amount to just about as much.

There are but few canker worms this year.

BOOK COVERS.

No one will undertake to defend over-ornamented book covers, but the notion that art may not decorate the cover of a book, because the cover has primarily only a utilitarian purpose, is to apply a principle to book-binding that is utterly without recognition in other things. From the beginning of the race, men have taken pride in decorating and ornamenting almost everything their hands have touched, without regard to its primary purpose. Houses are designed for shelter, yet they are made splendid with costly material and many ornamental devices; apparel is intended for protection, yet human ingenuity is taxed to its utmost in order to make it beautiful; plates and dishes are intended to hold food, yet in all ages skillful artists have painted and decorated them; vehicles are constructed to bear us over rough roads, yet we have taken pride in giving them grace of form and beauty of ornament; and, in the same way, implements of war, tools of trade, utensils for domestic use, and objects of every kind, have been more or less incised, carved, painted, or in some way decorated. In fact, the desire to make ordinary things beautiful has, in many periods, amounted to a passion, and art critics are continually condemning us for our indifference and deficiencies in this particular. In book-binding, no less than in other things, there has always been a desire for splendor. In no country or age, unless with us, has "plainness of binding been associated with literary worth." On the contrary, in old times, books that were prized were given costly and brilliant covers; they were set with gems and adorned with lavish and loving care. To such an extent was this carried, that art museums now consider the begemmed and inlaid bindings that have come down to us as among their most precious treasures. Nor is it, indeed, wholly true that plainness of binding is even now associated with literary merit. Books of permanent value are often sent forth by publishers in very plain bindings, but this is confessedly because being of genuine literary worth, a temporary cover is given to the sheets until the owner shall have them permanently encased in covers of stamped and gilded leather. The most sumptuous of all bindings are bestowed upon such books, as any one will discover who enters the libraries of men of wealth. Undoubtedly a great many books are overadorned, and the decoration is frequently inappropriate. But, then, this is true of everything, and hence it is not an argument for the discontinuance of decorative binding. And, further, it is scarcely true that taste in this particular has declined. The application of color to cloth binding has been rendered more feasible, and hence, whereas twenty or thirty years ago books were often covered with an excess of gilt-work, the gilding is now relieved with black stampings and illuminated. The addition of bright colors would have been a dangerous feature had not the introduction of lines stamped in black come into vogue at the same time, so that now, while book-covers are often very elaborate, they are more artistic than at the time when gilding was the sole resource of the binder. There has been a marked improvement, moreover, in the characters of the designs used—the same improvement that we see now in all the arts of design—principally in the substitution of artistic forms for realistic natural objects.—Appleton's Journal.

HOAXING A MANAGER.

Mr. Henry C. Jarrett tells the following story: One evening, while the party were playing at the Opera House in Detroit, a small boy approached him and holding out his hand, exhibiting fifteen cents, said:

"Please, mister, I would so much like to see 'Cinderella,' but that's all the money I've got."

The boys's manner touched Jarrett's tender spot, and after asking him two or three times if that was all the money he had, and receiving each time a pitiful affirmative answer, he gave him a quarter. The boy's countenance beamed with delight, and he did not know how to express his gratitude. Finally moving toward the street, he said:

"You don't know how thankful I am, sir. I am ever so much obliged to you, sir; but now that you have been so generous, I guess I'll go to the other theatre and see 'Jack Sheppard.'"

GROWS EITHER WET OR DRY.

Chief-Justice Mansfield, probably with a view to prolong his own days, was always anxious, when old witnesses were in court, to know their customary habits of life. It so happened that two very old men by the name of Elm were one day the objects of his inquiry.

"You are a very old man," said his lordship to the elder brother. "I suppose you have lived a very temperate life."

"Never drank anything but water, my lord," said Elm.

"Nor you either, I suppose?" said the Judge, addressing himself to the younger.

"When I could get nothing else, my lord," was the reply. "I always took my glass with my friends."

"Well, then," replied his lordship, "all that we can say is 'an Elm will flourish wet or dry.'"

Pride and vanity are forever spoken of side by side, and many suppose that they are merely different shades of the same feeling.

HEART DISEASE.

When an individual is reported to have died of disease of the heart, we are in the habit of regarding it as an inevitable event, as something which could not have been foreseen or prevented, and it is too much the habit, when persons suddenly fall down dead, to report the heart as the cause; this silences all inquiry and investigation, and saves the trouble and inconvenience of post-mortem. A truer report would have a tendency to save many lives. It is through a report of disease of the heart that many an opium eater is let off into the grave, which covers at once his folly and his crime; the brandy drinker, too, quietly slides around the corner thus, and is heard of no more; in short, this report of disease of the heart is the mantle of charity which the polite coroner and sympathetic physician throw around the graves of generous people.

At a scientific congress at Strasbourg it was reported that of sixty-six persons who had suddenly died, an immediate and faithful post-mortem showed that only two persons had any heart affection whatever—one sudden death only in thirty-three, from diseases of the heart. Nine out of sixty die of appoplexy—one out of every seven; while forty-six—more than two out of three—died of lung affection, half of them congestion of the lungs, that is, the lungs were so full of blood they could not work; there was not room enough for air to get in to support life. It is then of considerable practical interest to know some of the common every-day causes of this congestion of the lungs, a disease which, the figures above being true, kills three times as many persons at short warning as appoplexy and heart disease together.

Cold feet, tight shoes, light clothing, costive bowels, sitting still until chilled through after having been warmed up by labor or a long, hasty walk; going too suddenly from a close heated room, as a lounger or listener, or speaker, while the body is weakened by continual application, or abstinence, or heated by a long address; these are the frightful causes of sudden death in the form of congestion of the lungs; but which, being falsely reported as disease of the heart, and regarded as an inevitable event, throw people off their guard, instead of pointing them to their true causes, all of which are avoidable; and very easily so, as a general rule, when the mind has once been intelligently drawn on the subject.—Hall's Journal of Health.

HOW THE FRENCH WORKMAN LIVES.

The French laborer probably gets more for his wages than any other. His food is cheaper and more nourishing. His bouillon is the liquid essence of beef at a penny per bowl. His bread at the restaurant is thrown in without any charge, and is the best in the world. His hot coffee and milk is peddled about the streets in the morning at a sou per cup. It is coffee not slops. His half bottle of claret is thrown in at a meal costing twelve cents. For a few cents he may enjoy an evening at one of the many minor theatres, with his coffee free. Sixpence pays for a nicely cushioned seat at the theatre. No gallery gods, no peanuts, pipe, smoke, drunkenness, yelling, or howling. The Jardin des Plantes, the vast galleries and museums of the Louvre, Hotel Cluny, palace of the Luxumbourg and Versailles, are free to him to enter. Art and science hold out to him their choicest treasures at small cost, or no cost at all. French economy and frugality do not mean the constant retrenchment and self-denial which would deprive life of everything which makes it worth living for. Economy in France, more than in any other country, means a utilization of what America throws away, but it does not mean a pinching process of reducing life to a barren existence of work and bread and water.

AN ANECDOTE OF TWO JUDGES.

Judge Whiting was Chief Justice of Wisconsin, about forty years ago. Justice Woodle was an Associate Justice. Judge Whiting was not considered a very brilliant man, but, though his perceptions were sluggish, his motives were always trustworthy. Judge Whiting and Justice Woodle were traveling together, hearing appeals from nisi prius terms. They traveled on horseback, and on one occasion occupied a room together. Judge Whiting had a shapely foot (a fact which he was suspected of knowing as well as anybody). Judge Woodle had club feet (as to which he was suspected of being very sensitive). On the occasion we speak of, Judge Whiting was lying stretched on the only bed there was in the room, with one of his shapely feet extending out of the bed. He looked up and saw Judge Woodle looking at the foot intently.

"What are you looking at?" said Judge Whiting.

"At your foot, Whiting," said Woodle. "And do you know, if I had your feet I would be almost willing to have your head?"

Cannon Farrar says:—"He alone, by whom the hairs of our head are all numbered, can count the widows who are widows because of alcohol; the gray heads that it has made gray; the sad hearts that it has crushed with sadness; the ruined families that it has ruined; the brilliant minds that it has quenched; the unfolding promise which it cankered; the bright and happy boys and girls whom it has blasted into misery; the young and the gifted whom it has hurried along into dishonored and nameless graves."

If there is anything better than to be loved it is loving.

Portrait of FAITH WHITCOMB, the Shakeress, the most successful nurse of the age, who is now accomplishing more good through the distribution of her medicine than all the doctors in the country.

SPECIAL TO LADIES!

FAITH WHITCOMB'S Shaker Liniment is a Sure and Certain Cure for Inflammation of the Womb and for the distressing Lame Back, from which the majority of American women suffer.

A Boston gentleman, well known in business circles—in fact, one of the largest advertisers of the city whose wife has suffered for four years with inflammation of the Womb with constant lameness in the back—employing the best regular Physicians—and afterwards the best Female Electric Physicians, expending vast sums of money with but little effect, has had no occasion to employ a Physician since commencing the use of last July. She is now well. She never has the Back ache from which she was hardly ever free during the previous four years.

LADIES:—Instead of filling the stomach with wishy-washy medicines for so-called "Female Complaints," apply the proper remedy—externally—and you will obtain certain relief. Every regular Physician will tell you that the only wise treatment for the Inflamation of the Womb is by the external application of the proper remedies, and if you ask your Family Physician he will advise you to use FAITH WHITCOMB'S SHAKER LINIMENT, (to whom the recipe is open for examination.

INVALID LADIES

THE GREAT SHAKER REMEDY

FOR

Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Pains in the Spine, Inflammation of the Kidneys, Enlarged Glands, Toothache, Croup, Earache, Sprains, Chronic Diseases of the Joints and Muscles, Bruises, Backache, Soreness of the Chest, Gout, Quincy, Sore Throat, Swellings, Burns and Scalds, Headache, Frosted Feet, Chilblains, and all diseases of an inflammatory order.

FOR TOOTHACHE.

Boston Dentists use it in their practice and recommend it to their patrons.

FROM THE CELEBRATED SURGEON DENTIST, U. K. MAYO.

337 TREMONT ST. BOSTON, Aug 30, 1880.

I congratulate you upon the merited and enviable renown attained by your really valuable liniment. It is the most effective remedy for toothache that has ever come to my notice and I cheerfully recommend to my patrons. U. K. MAYO.

IT WORKS LIKE MAGIC IN INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM.

For proof of which please read the following:—

214 CAMBRIDGE ST., BOSTON, Sept. 20, 1880.

I am astonished at the wonderful properties of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment. Three weeks ago I was attacked with Inflammatory Rheumatism, my head was swollen to double its usual size and the Pain was intense. The first application relieved the pain. In two weeks after using two 50 cent bottles of the Liniment I was entirely cured. Those who are familiar with the Inflammatory Rheumatism and the time which it generally runs will agree with me that the Shaker Liniment is a remarkable remedy, and I advise Rheumatics to use it. J. F. SAWTELL.

The Boston Evening Traveller in referring to the above case says:—

"The cure of Mr. Sawtell, the well known grocer, of inflammatory rheumatism, is creating a decided sensation at the West End. Several gentlemen from the Revere House, chronic Rheumatics, called upon Mr. Sawtell for confirmation of the rumors of his astonishing recovery and found that the facts had not been exaggerated. Such cures place Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment at the head of rheumatic remedies."

CROUP.

SAVE THE LITTLE ONES.

"If Faith Whitcomb's directions are followed not one case of croup in a thousand will prove fatal

"He will give further pooof if you will call upon him.

BOSTON, Nov. 1, 1880.

This certifies that my wife who had been a sufferer from Neuralgia for twenty years, was cured by the use of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and four applications cured my back which was so lame from Rheumatism that I could not move without pain. I assure sufferers from Neuralgia and Rheumatism that this Liniment will surely cure these diseases. I know it to be a fact that Mr. Lord, one of my neighbors at Greenwood who had been on crutches for fifteen years, and had unsuccessfully tried many remedies, obtained relief from less than one bottle of Shaker Liniment and Mrs. Wheeler of the same place another neighbor, a great sufferer from Chronic Rheumatism—is praising the Shaker Liniment in the strongest terms, for it is the only remedy that would help her. I shall be glad to give further proof of the value of this Liniment to any sufferers who will call either upon me in Boston or at my house at Greenwood. A. HANSON.

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER.

You know Physicians are proverbially shy of anything like patent medicines. Doctor Sylvester is no exception to this rule; but when he saw the formula of "Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment" he said "that is all right, that is a good remedy." He prescribed it for me when I was next assailed by my old enemy Neuralgia, or rather Neuralgic Rheumatism, from which I have suffered much, especially from Neuralg'a of the Heart. It was a severe attack and I feared a long illness, but I used the Liniment freely and began to find relief very soon. In a week I was WELL. Its effects are almost magical. I will cheerfully recommend it to my friends. C. A. SYLVESTER.

SHERBURNE, MASS., Nov. 2, 1880.

Dr. Sylvester the well-known Physician of Sherborn, gives the following statement:—

SHERBORN, MASS., Sept. 20, 1880.

This certifies that I have examined the formula of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and the ingredients are such that it must be of great value in Neuralgia and Rheumatism. I use it in my family and I recommend it to all sufferers from these diseases, for it is better than any Liniment that has ever come to my notice. W. P. SYLVESTER, M. D.

When regular Physicians recommend a remedy, and use it themselves in their families you may be sure it has unusual merit.

A well-known Sunday School Worker gives his evidence.

WOBURN, Aug. 24, 1880.

The Shaker Liniment cured my wife of an enlarged joint, from which she suffered for months. A few applications cured her. I also received almost immediate relief in a case of acute inflammation and my son received great benefit in a severe attack of rheumatism. As a family liniment I think it has no equal.

E. N. CUMMINGS.

"It cannot be recommended too highly as a family liniment.

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, Mass., Oct. 20, 1880.

I have used Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment for rheumatism with the happiest results, indeed it is the best liniment that I have ever used giving me quick relief. It is not only efficacious for rheumatism, but for strains, sprains, etc. It can not be recommended too highly as a family liniment. C. H. LEWIS.

It always relieves Neuralgia and if the application is continued a cure can be dependedupon.

[From Hon. A. Maynard, the extensive manufacturer and founder of the town of Maynard.]

ASSABET MILLS,
MAYNARD, Mass., Aug 24, 1880.

I gladly add my testimony to the value of the Shaker Liniment in case of Neuralgia and Rheumatism. By its use I obtained almost immediate relief, and unhesitatingly recommend it to my friends.

A growing eccentricity is the wearing upon one arm of innumerable bangles hung with charms of every description.

Papa—"That picture shows the story of Prometheus and the vulture that fed on his liver. Every day the vulture devoured it, and every night it grew for him to eat it again." Sympathetic child—"Poor, dear, old vulture! How sick he must have been of liver every day!"

TERRIBLE.—Such is the term Mr. C. W. Purcell, of the National Stock Yards, Chicago, Ill., applies to his sufferings. He says: I, for one, wish to speak a word of praise for St. Jacob's Oil. I suffered with a pain in my shoulder and arm for some six months, and at times it was terrible. One bottle of St. Jacob's Oil, however, cured me thoroughly.—Nashville Daily News.

☞ A purely vegetable medicine containing all the virtues of calomel without any of the injurious tendencies so justly dreaded by mankind. Simmons' Liver Regulator will be found prompt to start the secretions of the liver, and give a healthy tone to the entire system, without salivation or any injurious effects. When used as a cathartic, it in no wise disorders the system, nor does it produce any nausea or sick stomach when about to purge. It is so mild in its action as not to interfere with business or pleasure.

George Perkins arrived at Oroville, Cal., some time ago, penniless, and was taken in by a rich merchant, Mr. Knight, as porter, at $40 a month. The wheel turned over, and George Perkins, governor of California, is now giving his poverty-striken old employer $175 a month as bookkeeper in his establishment, and him made harbor commissioner at San Francisco.

☞ Always avoid harsh, purgative pills. They first make you sick and then leave you constipated. Carter's Little Liver Pills regulate the bowels and make you well. Dose, one pill.

"Do you love me, sweet?" was the wail he wole,
As he pressed her close to his heart's wild throbbing;
"Does love's fierce tide irrigate your soul?
Is your heart with mine simultaneous bobbing?"
Her soulful eyes flew up to his face,
And pierced his own with a lovely glitter;
Then soft she murmured, with winning grace:
"Do I love you, George? Well, I should twitter."

☞ More cases of sick headache, biliousness, constipation, etc., can be cured in less time, with less medicine, and for less money, by using Carter's Little Liver Pills, than by any other means.

Tell me, ye winged winds,
That 'round my pathway roar,
That clatter at the blinds
And make a critter swore—
Know ye no peaceful dell,
No valley in the West,
No spot this side of—well,
The place we hate the best,
No nook, nor cranny small,
No matter where it's at,
That won't reveal at all
The horrid, hideous hat—
The mammoth wreck of fuzzy plush—
With which the modern maid doth gush?
The loud wind answers like a soul forsook,
"Young man, we reckon there's no such nook." —Yonker's Gazette.

For five years, says Mr. J. Echter, this city, I have been afflicted with rheumatism, and for two years have had a sore on my leg the size of a silver dollar, which nothing would heal. St. Jacobs Oil cured the rheumatism and healed the sore.—Harrisburg (Pa.) Independent.

My daughter was postrated with a terrible cough. All remedies failed, and we were discouraged; yet within one month after commencing the use of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam she is well. I will cheerfully answer all inquiries. B. A. CLARK.

Nantucket, March 8, 1881.
I have been very sick; I thought I would never get about again. My cough was very bad both day and night. I had but few moments rest until I commenced to use Faith Whitcomb's Balsam. As every thing else had failed, I tried that as a last resort. I have taken one small bottle and two-thirds of a large one, and my cough is nearly cured. I sleep all night, and midnight sweats have ceased. MRS. CHAS. G. GARDNER.

HARVARD COMMUNITY OF SHAKERS, March 7, 1881.
The herbs of which Faith Whitcomb's Remedies are composed are gathered by the Harvard Community, and the public can depend upon their purity.

GRAHAM FLOUR.—Fresh Ground Graham Flour, received from Mill. For sale by
CHAS A. ROPES,
nov 24 218 and 222 Derby Street.

Finally, it remains for us to honor the ideas for which the nation stands. The soldiers fought for a just and honest government. This cannot be a free country if it is ruled by rings and monopolies; if laws are made not for the best interests of the people, but at the will of the highest bidder. The entire system of spoils is directly opposed to the American idea of government. Men should be selected for the union civil service, not because they are Republican or Democrat, not because they are backed by some boss or ward committee, but because they have proved themselves by fair competition best fitted for the duties of office. Here, as in England, the civil offices of the Nation should be within the reach of every man who is qualified for them, and the party in power, whichever it chances to be, should be ashamed and afraid to appoint any man on mere party grounds. Thus the great cause of corruption in politics would be sapped at its source, and a cheaper, purer, and more efficient government would certainly result. The Nation also stands for virtue. The laws of the land are framed in the interest of sobriety, honesty and justice, and are intended to discourage and punish vice in every form. It is the duty of every citizen to obey these laws himself, and support their strict enforcement in the community. I need hardly say that this is a Christian Nation. Flippant men have denied this, but our customs and laws are largely based upon the Bible. The Christian Sunday is set apart as a day of rest, and the business of banks and traders on that day is declared illegal. Wisely have the American people been urged "diligently to promote piety as the solid foundation of public liberty and happiness," for a Republic can only thrive when based on the solid foundations of virtue and religion. Men must fear God and keep His commandments, or society will become corrupt at its very heart.

This, then, is the duty of the hour—to oppose corruption in every form; to resist the tyranny of evil men; to honor the laws of the land; and to heartily support the cause of morality and religion. Thus the prosperity of the Nation for which our heroes fought shall be secured, and we shall prove worthy of that terrible sacrifice of war by which was gained the life of the Nation and the liberty of all.

Mr. Editor,—Does it not appear as if our local Water Committee were, with ill-advised haste, committing the town to a situation that must be repented at leisure?

Apparently, its chairman advertises for construction bids, with no well defined plans or specifications, but covering items with a word of such latitude as "suitable," which can differ most essentially when in a contractor's interest. It lacks a business-like flavor, being nearly equivalent to saying, "Here's $85,000, give us what you can for it," and with child-like innocence, relying upon the fairness of a contractor bound by nothing but his own individual interests.

Would any member of our committee launch himself into any private enterprise of equal proportion, calling for such an outlay, with such meagre preparation, and if so, is he fitted for the responsibility given him?

Propriety and precedent would seem to dictate the necessity of employing an hydraulic engineer of established reputation, to make, in the town's best interests, such detailed plans and specifications as met approval, enabling all to see the end from the beginning, and town and contractor to work alike on a tangible basis. Citizen.

Barnum's colossal exhibition to-day announces itself, and it is but justice to say that its claims are fully substantiated by the leading papers of New York, and other places where the show has been held. The advertisement gives far fuller particulars than we can do in our reading columns. Enough to say is that this is a combination of four great shows, fitted up with new appointments of the highest order and elegance. The daily expenses are $4500, there being 200 performers and attendants employed, so that the performances can be carried on simultaneously in three rings. The street parade is said to surpass anything of the kind yet seen, and to embody that of "the Greatest Show on Earth," as one of its sections.—When the exhibition takes place, we strongly urge all who can to attend in the afternoon rather than the evening. See adv.

Mr. Henry Derby, formerly a well-known citizen, and a native of Salem, died in Danvers on Friday in the 78th year of his age. Mr. Derby was Deputy Collector of Salem from 1859 to 1861, succeeding Chipman Ward. He was also at different times a Deputy Sheriff, a Coroner, and an Inspector of Customs. He was by trade a tailor, and long a consistent advocate of the old Democratic party. In early manhood, he was a member of the Second Corps of Cadets. He has resided in Danvers for the past twelve or fifteen years.—Gazette.

All About Rack Rent.—"What is rack rent, dad?" inquired a young Comstocker who had been reading the news from Ireland.

The patient parent laid down the stock list and replied: "Do you know how much I charge Mr. Boggarty for his room up stairs?"

"Yes, sir; $12 a month."

"Well, now, suppose Mr. Boggarty should take it into his head to have, at his own expense, new paper put on the wall, the ceiling whitened, and all the furniture mended, the room would look a heap sight prettier, wouldn't it?"

"Lor!" murmured the intelligent boy.

"Well, if the minute Boggarty had got all these improvements made, I should go up and look around and smile and jingle my money in my pocket and remark, 'This is a pretty good sort of a layout for a single man, Boggarty, and you have altogether too soft a thing. Your rent will be $20 a month hereafter,' what would you thing of it?"

The innocent child giggled and said, "That would be cheek, wouldn't it?"

"Bet your money on it, my boy," replied the father, beaming kindly on his off-spring. "That would be rack-renting Mr. Boggarty, and if he kicked and claimed that all the improvements had been made by him without costing me a cent, and I should fire him out, that would be eviction. I will now," continued the parent, warming up, "briefly review the history of Ireland for the past 700 yearts. When Brain Borhu——"

But his son had fled.

An Ancient Battle Ground.—A remarkable mound containing a vast number of human bones and Indian relics was uncovered about three miles east of Lanesboro, recently. Mr. Newell was plowing on his farm, and turned up a skull, which he took to town and exhibited to Dr. D. F. Powell. The doctor went out the following day, accompanied by others who assisted in the excavation, and as a result of their labors several wagon loads of bones were found, indicating that the mound had been the burial place of fully 600 human beings.

The bones were all of full grown men, there being no remains of women and children, indicating clearly that these were corpses of men killed in battle. A copper spear head, harder than steel of modern times, a handsome pipe, and other articles were secured by the editor of the Lanesboro Journal. Also many stone knives and a stone maul, of harder material than exists in this vicinity, were found. "Big Fire," grand medicine man of the Winnebagos, says a great battle occurred at this place some thirty generations ago, between the Chippewas and Sioux, the former coming out victorious, and nearly annihilating their enemies. After the battle a trench was dug, and some 600 warriors were piled therein. Big Fire's version of the matter looks very reasonable.—Preston (Minn.) Republican.

An Editor's Vacation.—An Albany editor's squibs about the treatment of an "agent," has in it humor, and a certain pathos in the inference that may be made from it out of a hard-worked newspaper man's life:

About six weeks ago a person entered our office and proposed to sell us a new-fangled "fountain pen." The rash young man at length mentioned as a recommendation that the pen held enough to last through twenty-four hours' incessant writing, and obviated the tedious necessity of dipping it in the inkstand. Thereupon we exclaimed:

"Dear young friend, would you deprive us of our vacation?"

"I don't understand," he replied.

"Why," said we, "the only vacation we get is while we are dipping in the inkstand, and no man shall deprive us of that. Please go away with your vacation-extinguisher."

He saw we were in earnest, not even daring to offer us one of his fountains as a gift; and we dipped our old-fashed pen in our muddy ink-stand, and took a rest.

I wish to correct a report which seems to be quite generally circulated around town, that I have sold out my Rendering Works and given up the business. This is not so. "I still live," and shall continue the business at my factory, which I built two or three years ago. The buildings advertised to be let, as recently occupied by me as Rendering Works, have never been used by me for that purpose since they were built, but merely as a store house during the remainder of my lease. The Southwicks.

A friend has furnished us with the following interesting reminiscenses of some of the earlier settlers in this vicinity:

Lawrence and Cassandra Southwick came from Lancashire, England, to America in 1625, returning to England the same year. They came again in 1630, with their family, in the last trip of the "Mayflower," in company with Gov. Wm. Bradford. They purchased a few acres of land in Salem (now Peabody) for the prosecution of their trade of pottery and glass manufacturing, to which the Commonwealth of Massachusetts added by donation some 3 or 4 acres, to enable them to increase their business, the property being situated on both sides of the North River, in Salem. On the rise of Quakerism, two Public Friends of that prsuasion came to the neighborhood, Lawrence provided them with a place to hold a meeting, also entertained them, for which he was fined, and later, both himself and wife were fined and imprisoned for attending the meetings of friends, as were also their children, and also whipped through the streets of Salem, Lynn and Boston, with three thongs of dried gut, knotted, which cut severely into the flesh, their backs being stripped to the skin, and this cruelty alike inflicted on men and women. One of the sons, Josiah, was banished into the wilderness, during the severe winter of 1658, after being cruelly scourged, and all persons forbidden to entertain or give shelter to friends, under penalty of the same punishment. After long and cruel persecution, and entirely despoiled of all their substance, Lawrence and Cassandra were banished, late in the season of 1659, to the then wilderness, Shelter Island. Sometime during the ensuing inclement winter, they died within three days of each other, of exposure and starvation, at an advanced age, and at the hands of those who had fled from England to escape persecution there.

After the persecution, the children returned, to find their home a ruin and a desolation. They rebuilt, and recommenced the business, leaving it, at their decease, to their children, one of which, Daniel Southwick, married Ruth Shove and removed to Mendon, now Uxbridge, Mass. He had learned the tanning business with an older brother, who was the first tanner in New England, if not in America. Daniel started a tanyard in Uxbridge and built a house, supposed to be the first one erected between Providence and Worcester.

It is queer that even the Holy Bible cannot be issued without a publishers' quarrel; yet there is a a quiet but animated one in progress between the University Presses of Oxford and Cambridge and the American committee of revision. In place of a copyright in England, the publishers of the revised New Testament paid the expenses of the English committee, and in place of a copyright in America they prepared to flood the market here, extending to members of the American committee the privilege of buying "representation copies" in advance of the general publication. The publishers made a great financial success but the American revisers, who paid their own expenses, or had them paid by private subscription, have not got their "presentation copies" yet. Hence an unpleasantness, suggesting that monopolies, even in the word of God, are not desirable.

Literary pirates fare badly in China. Any person printing and selling the works of any author without his permission is liable to a hundred blows of the bamboo and transportation for three years. If the offender has stopped short at printing, and has not begun to sell, the penalty is fifty blows, together with the forfeiture of the materials from which it is intended to print.

A WONDERFUL INVENTION.—The Paris correspondent of the London Telegraph sends the following account of the latest scientific sensation: "A remarkably interesting experiment has just been made at Calais and Dover, between which places a conversation has been kept up viva voce by means of new kind of telephone which has been patented under the name of the electrophone. Not only were the words whispered into the apparatus at Calais distinctly heard at Dover, and, of course, vice versa, but the listener, at one end was perfectly well able to distinguish by the mere tones of the voice the person who was speaking at the other end. The scientific specialists present were astonished at the difficulty successfully overcome in the enormous condensation produced by the simultaneous passage of telegraphic dispatches along other wires of the cable. It should be observed that while the human voice was being transmitted through one of the wires, the other wires were being employed for the transmission of ordinary telegraphic messages. Moreover, the experiments were conducted between the hours of 10 and 4, that is, in the busiest part of the day, when the wires are in universal requisition. The voice of the speaker was distinctly heard as soon as the wires were joined to the apparatus, and conversations were carried on without interruption in the presence of Sir James Carmichael, chairman of the Submarine Telegraph Company, Mr. Sabine, Mr. DePointes, and other competent specialists. Experiments with the same apparatus were then continued with the same result, and in the midst of the confusion produced by the simultaneous working of several machines at the London terminal station, the voice of the speaker was heard as plainly as though he had been in the same room. There can be no longer any doubt that it is practicable to converse across, or rather under, the sea, by means of any submarine cable, and the success of the experiment opens up vistas of the possibilities of rapid communication that a few years ago would have belonged to the realms of dreamland alone. The inventor maintains that it is just as easy to talk across the Atlantic as from one room to another, and he has succeeded so well in the first practical illustration of his apparatus that one is scarcely justified in doubting his assertion that he has found out a system by which words spoken from the other side of the ocean can be fixed on their arrival here and treasured up for further use.

A Guadalajara (Mex.) exchange has the following marvellous account of a man viper: "In the village of Cuautla, belonging to the canton of Autlan, exists an individual having a scaly skin exactly like that of a viper, even to the green color. He has, besides, the viper habit of changing or shedding his skin every year. The skin comes off in a single piece, and not as might be supposed, in parts. On the man's head there is not a single hair. A sister of this man, who died a short time ago, manifested the same phenomenon, and toward the close of her life began slowly to grow blind, owing to the viper's skin encroaching on the eyes to such an extent that she could only see through a narrow circular aperture at each eye. The same thing is now happening to the unfortunate brother. He can scarcely see any object and his head presents the repulsive aspect of a viper. In Cuautla these unhappy beings have been known as the 'viper man and woman,' and the phenomena is attributed to the fact that their mother ate in excess of viper's meat to cure a disease of the blood." In Cuba it is a common practice for people to eat viper's flesh as a remedy for blood diseases. The Guadalajara paper asks that the viper man be brought to this city in order that his strange case may be studied by the local physicians and savans.

Bob Ingersoll's Orthodoxy.

Some one sends us a little tract containing epigrammatic expressions from Col. Robert G. Ingersoll's latest lecture, "What shall we do to be saved?" We have read the entire lecture. If this is truly Ingersoll's creed, the colonel is not far out of the way. He is coming around, maybe. He manages to get considerable scripture into his creed, as he sets it forth. There is lots of hope, in fact, there is a good deal of certainty for the colonel. We subjoin a few articles of this great man's creed, just to show from what book he gets his declaration of faith.

"Honest industry is as good as pious idleness," says the colonel.

Well, that's all right. That's orthodox. The Bible says the same thing, and said it long before the colonel thought of it—"Faith without works is dead."

"Christ believed the temple of God to be the heart of man."—Ingersoll.

Yes, that's orthodox, too. We "must worship him in the spirit." "Know ye not that ye are the temples of the Holy Ghost?"

"If I go to heaven, I want to take my reason with me."—Ingersoll.

Of course, and so you will, "for now can we see through a glass darkly, but there face to face; now I know in part, but then I shall know even as I am known."—1 Corinthians xiii. 12.

"Fear is a dagger with which hypocrisy assassinates the soul."—Ingersoll.

That is good gospel, and "perfect love castest out fear."

"If I owe Smith ten dollars, and God forgives me, that doesn't pay Smith."—Ingersoll.

Correct you are; the prayer of Christianity is "forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors." "Owe no man anything."

"Reason is the light of the soul, and if you haven't the right to follow it, what have you the right to follow?"—Ingersoll.

"Yet in the church I would rather speak five words with my understanding that by my voice I might teach others also, than ten thousand words in an unknown tongue. Brethren, be not children in understanding; howbeit in malice be ye children, but in understanding be men."—Corinthians xiv. 19–20.

"If you go to hell, it will be for not practising the virtues which the sermon on the mount proclaims."—Ingersoll.

That's all orthodox. "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them."

"The men who saw the miracles all died long ago. I wasn't acquainted with any of 'em."—Ingersoll.

Same way with the men who saw Servetus burned. But the colonel most firmly believes that Servetus was burned.

"A little miracle now, right here—just a little one—would do more towards the advancement of Christianity than all the preachers of the last thirty years."—Ingersoll.

"If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead."—Luke xvii, 31.

"If there is a God in the Universe he will not damn an honest man."—Ingersoll.

"A false balance is an abomination to the Lord; but a just weight is his delight."—Proverbs vi, 1.

"There is only one true worship, and that is the practice of justice."—Ingersoll.

"Render therefore unto Cæsar the the things which be Cæsar's, and unto God the things which be God's."—Luke xx, 25.

"God will not damn a good citizen, a good father or a good friend."—Ingersoll.

Certainly not; nor any good man.

"A good man showeth favor and lendeth; he will guide his affairs with discretion. Surely he shall not be moved forever; the righteous shall be held in everlasting remembrance."—Psalms xxii, 5, 6.

"Study the religion of the body in preference to the religion of the soul. A healthy body will give a healthy mind, and a healthy mind will destroy superstition."—Ingersoll.

That explains why the Indians have no superstitions.

"Persons who have the smallest souls make the most fuss about saving them."—Ingersoll.

Of course, colonel; they are the hardest kind to save.

"I will never ask God to treat me any fairer than I treat my fellow men."—Ingersoll.

Well, that's perfectly orthodox.—"For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your Heavenly Father will also forgive you; but if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses." "For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged; and with what measure ye mete, shall be measured to you."

"Upon the shadowy shore of death the sea of trouble casts no wave."—Ingersoll.

The Colonel must have been singing that good old hymn, "When I can read my title clear," in which occur the lines:

"And not a wave of trouble roll
Across my peaceful breast."

DEAR MOTHER.

Composed while on picket on the banks of the Potomac by a member of the 2d Massachusetts Regt. during the Rebellion.

Of thee, mother dear, I am thinking,
As walking my lonely beat,
Of the bright happy days which are coming,
When at home once again we shall meet,
Mid the long dreary hours of midnight,
When silence is mixed with the gloom
Then, I think of you mother, above all the rest,
And I think of my own native home.

Of all at home, mother, I'm thinking,
That home so far, far away,
And hope, mother dear, to be with you again,
By another Thanksgiving day,
But the changes of time are uncertain,
As the past has so taught us to know,
And many a grave will be dug ere then,
For the soldier to lay in so low.

When I lay myself down in my tent, mother,
To rest, as the chances may be
Then my thoughts wander back to my home in the North,
And I wonder, do they think there of me,
When the drum beats the roll to arouse us,
To defend the proud flag of the free,
And muster in strong ranks unbroken,
I think, mother dear, then of thee.

When the foe from his stronghold advances,
And we meet him with strong iron will,
When we drive him in dismay with our bayonets,
Then, mother, I think of thee still,
And the thought makes my nerves more steady
And strengthen my arms for the strike,
For we know that our cause is a holy one,
For freedom, our homes and the right.

Perchance, I may fall in some battle,
Then remember my wish, mother dear,
As your thoughts are of him who has fallen,
Drive back to their fount every tear,
And think of those others around you,
And the joys with which you are blest,
Remembering but this, my last thoughts were of home,
Of thee, mother dear, and the rest.

A veteran New York fisherman says: "Shark fishing pays, and it's great fun for a green hand. The business is carried on principally for the oil and fins. A big place for them is in the White Sea, and again in Iceland. The sharks they get there are from thirty to fifty feet long. Sometimes they run in around the Grand Banks and are caught. About four barrels of oil is the average from a good-sized fellow. My shark fishing was all done near New-Smyrna, Florida. Some sharks would give half a barrel of oil, but they were generally under fifteen feet. we usualls hired fifteen or twenty darkies to do the pulling and hauling, and camped out during the months of July, August and September, moving up and down wherever the biting was. We carried our pots and things alone and tried out the livers, and shipped the oil by a smack up to Ferdinanda, where it was all bought by one man. I don't know what he did with it. Some said he sold it for cod liver oil. We used a regular hook and line, only it was a rope, and the hook was a foot long, and made fast to the line by a three-foot chain. Fish bait was the best. We kept about twenty of these lines over all the time, at regular intervals, along wherever the water deepened quick from the shore.

All the lines were about fifty yards long. Sometimes they fool over the bait, but generally a big shark will nose it once or twice, and then suck it up and move off, swallowing the bait as he goes. You want to give him about fifteen feet of rope, and then take a brace, and when he hauls the line taut, all jerk together. Then the work commences—fun, some people call it. As soon as he feels the hook he makes a big rush that will often start ten or fifteen men, and I've seen five jerked right into the water on the start. Up and down he goes sometimes jumping into the air and trying to shake out the hook, and some old fellows will swim right for you and try to bite the line. In India they catch sharks for their fins and send them to China, where they make them into soup. T.

Poet's Corner.

A Bouquet.

Sweet Mary—maid of San Andreas—
Upon her natal day,
Procured an album, double gilt,
Entitled, "The Bouquet."

But what its purpose was, beyond
Its name, she could not guess;
And so between its guilded leaves
The flower he gave she'd press.

Yet, blame her not, poetic youth,
Nor deem too great the wrong;
She knew not Hawthorne's bloom, nor loved
Macaulay's flowers of song.

Her hymn book was the total sum
Of her poetic lore,
And, having read through Dr. Watts,
She did not ask for Moore.

But when she opened her book again,
How great was her surprise
To find the leaves, on either side,
Stained deep with crimson dyes.

And in that rose—his latest gift—
A shapeless form she views,
Its fragrance sped, its beauty fled,
And vanished all its dews.

O Mary!—Maid of San Andreas—
Too sad was your mistake;
Yet one, methinks, that wiser folks
Are very apt to make.

Who 'twixt these leaves would fix the shapes,
That love and truth assume,
Will find they keep, like Mary's rose,
The stain, and not the bloom.

Selected Story.

FALSE ECONOMY.

"Albert, I wish you would let me have seventy-five cents."

Kate Landman spoke carefully, for she knew her husband had not much money to spare; yet she spoke earnestly, and there was a world of entreaty in her look.

"What do you want seventy-five cents for?" asked Albert.

"I want to get some braid for my new dress."

"I thought you had all the material on hand for that."

"So I thought I had; but Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Thompson both have a trimming of braid upon theirs, and it looks very pretty. It is very fashionable, and adds very much to the beauty of a dress."

"Plague take these women's fashions! Your endless trimmings and things-a-ma-jigs costs more than the dress is worth. It's nothing but shell out money when once a woman thinks of a new dress."

"I don't have many new dresses. I do certainly try to be as economical as I can."

"It is a funny kind of economy, at all events. But if you must have it I suppose you must."

And Albert Landman took out his wallet and counted out the seventy-five cents; but he gave it grudgingly, and when he put his wallet back into his pocket he did it with an emphasis which seemed to say that he would not take it out again for a week.

When Albert reached the outer door on his way to work, he found the weather so threatening that he concluded to go back and get his umbrella; and upon re-entering the sitting-room he found his wife in tears. She tried to hide the fact from him, but he caught her in the act, and asked what it meant.

"Good gracious!" cried the husband, "I should like to know if you are crying at what I said about the dress."

"I was not crying at what you said, Albert," replied Kate, tremulously; "but you were so reluctant to grant me the favor. I was thinking how hard I had to work; I am tied to the house; how many little things I have to perplex me, then to think"—

"Pshaw! what do you want to be so foolish for?"

And away started Albert Landman a second time; but he was not to escape so easily. In the hall he was met by his daughter Lizzie, a bright-eyed, rosy-cheeked girl of 10 years.

"O, papa, give me fifteen cents!"

"What?"

"O, I want fifteen cents. Do, please, give it to me."

"What in the world do you want with it? Are they changing school books again?"

"No, I want to buy a hoop. Ellen Smith has got one, and so has Mary Buck and Sarah Allen. Mr. Grant has got some real pretty ones to sell. Can't I have one?"

"Nonsense! If you want a hoop, go and get one off some old barrel. I can't afford to be buying hoops for you to trundle about the street."

"Please, papa."

"No, I told you."

The blue eyes filled with tears, and the child's sobbing broke upon his ear.

Albert Landman hurried from the house with some very impatient words upon his lips.

This was in the morning. At noon when he came home to dinner, there was a cloud over the household. His wife was sober, and even little Lizzie, usually gay and blithesome, was sad and silent.

But these things could not last long in the household, for the husband and wife really loved each other devotedly, and were at heart kind and forbearing. When Albert came home to his supper, Kate greeted him with a kiss, and in a moment sunshine came back; and had the lesson ended there the husband might have fancied he had done nothing wrong, and the cloud had been nothing but the exhalation of a domestic ferment, for which no one was particularly responsible, and might have cherished the conviction that women's fashions were a nuisance and a humbug, as well as a frightful draft on a husband's pocket.

After tea, Albert did a few chores around the house, and then lighted a cigar and walked out. He had gone but a short distance when he met Lizzie. In her right hand she dragged an old hoop which she had taken from a delapidated flour barrel, while with her left, she was rubbing her red, swollen eyes. She was in deep grief, and was sobbing painfully. He stopped the child, and asked what was the matter.

She answered, as well as her sobs would let her, that the other girls had laughed at her, and made fun of her hoop. They had nice, pretty hoops, while hers was ugly and homely.

"Never mind," said Albert, patting the little one on the head (for the child's grief touched him); "perhaps we'll have a hoop some time."

"Mayn't I have one now? Mr. Grant's got one left—oh, such a pretty one!"

The sobbing had ceased, as the child caught her father's hand, eagerly.

"No, not now, Lizzie — not now. I'll think of it."

Sobbing again the child moved on toward home, dragging the old hoop after her.

At one of the stores, Albert Landman met some of his friends.

"Hello, Albert! what's up?"

"Nothing in particular."

"What do you say to a game of billiards, Albert?"

"Good! I'm in for that."

And away went Albert to the billiard hall, where he had a glorious time with his friends, He liked billiards; it was a healthy, pretty game, and the keeper of the hall allowed no rough scuffs on his premises.

They had played four games. Albert had won two, and his opponent had won two.

"That's two and two," cried Tom Piker. "What do you say to playing them off, Albert?"

"All right; go in," said Albert, full of animation."

And so they played the fifth game, and he who lost was to pay for the five games. It was an an exciting contest. Both made capital runs, but in the end Albert was beaten by three points, and with a little laugh he went to settle the bill. Five games, 20 cents a game—just one dollar. Not much for sport; and he paid out the money with a grace and never once seeming to feel that he could not afford it.

"Have a cigar?" said Tom.

"Yes."

They lighted their cigars and then sauntered down the hall to see the others play.

Albert soon found himself seated over against a table at which some of his friends were playing, and close by stood two men, strangers to him, one of whom was explaining to the other the mysteries of the game.

"It is a healthy pastime," said he who had been making the explanation; "and certainly it is one which has no evil tendency."

Albert heard the remarks very plainly, and he had a curiosity to hear what the other, who seemed unacquainted withbilliards, would say.

"I cannot, of course, assert that any game which calls for skill and judgment, and which is free from the attending curse of gaming, is of itself an evil," remarked the second gedtleman. "Such things are only evil so far as they excite and stimulate men beyond the bounds of healthy recreation."

"That result can scarcely follow such a game," said the first speaker.

But the other shook his head.

"You are wrong here. The result can follow in two ways: First, it can lead men to spend money who have not money to spend. Whenever I visit a place of this kind I am led to reflect upon a most strange and prominent weakness of humanity as developed in our sex. For instance, observe that young man who is just settling his bill at the desk. He looks like a mechanic, and I should say from his manner, and from the fact that he feels it his duty to go home at this hour, that he has a wife and children. I see by his face that he is kind-hearted and generous, and I should judge that he means to do as near right as he can. He has been beaten, and he pays one dollar and forty cents for the recreation of some two hours' duration. If you observe you will see that he pays it freely, and pockets the loss with a smile. Happy faculty! But how do you suppose it is in that young man's home? Suppose his wife had come to him this morning, and asked him for a dollar to spend for some trifling thing — some household ornament, or some bit of jewelry to adorn her person—and suppose his little child put in a plea for forty cents to buy a paper and picture books with, what do you think he would have answered? Of fifty men just like him, would not forty and five have declared that they had not money to spare for any such purpose? And, moreover, they would have said so, feeling that they were telling the truth. Am I not right?

"Upon my word," said the man who understood billiards, "you speak to the point. I know that young man who has just paid his bill, and you have not misjudged him in a single particular. And what is more, I happen to have a fact at hand to illustrate your charge.—We have a club for an excellent literary paper in our village, and last year that man was one of our subscribers. This year he felt obliged to discontinue it. His wife was very anxious to take it, for it had become a genial companion in leisure moments, but he could not afford it. The club rate was one dollar and fifty a year."

"Aye, and so it goes," said the other gentleman. "Well, that man's wife may be wishing at this very moment that she had her paper to read, while he is paying almost its full price for a year—for what? And yet how smilingly he does it. Ah! these poor, sympathizing wives! How many clouds often darken upon them from the brows of their husbands, when they ask for a trifling sum of money, and how grudgingly the mite is handed over when it is given! What perfect floods of joy that dollar and forty cents might have poured upon the children of that unsuccessful billiard player. Ah! it is well for such wives and children that they do not know where the money all goes."

They finished at the nearest table.—The two gentlemen moved on and Albert Landman arose from his seat and left the house. Never before had he had such thoughts as now possessed him; he had never dwelt upon the same grouping of ideas. That very morning, his own true, faithful, loving wife had been sad and heart-sick because he had harshly and unkindly met her request for a small sum of money. And his sweet Lizzie had crept away to her home almost broken-hearted for the want of a simple toy, such as her mates possessed, and yet the sum of both their wants amounted to not as much as he had paid away that evening for billiard playing.

Albert Landman wanted to be an honest husband and father, and the lesson was not lost upon him. On his way home he stopped at Mr. Grant's and purchased the best and greatest hoop to be found, with driving-stick painted red, white and blue, and in the morning, when he beheld his child's delight, and had received her grateful, happy kiss, the question came to his mind: which was the best and happiest result, this or the five games of billiards? The hoop cost thirty cents.—He could play two games of billiards less and be the absolute gainer of ten cents by the pleasant operation.

A few mornings after this, as Albert arose from the breakfast table, he detected an uneasy, wistful look upon his wife's face.

"Kate, what is it?"

"Albert, could you spare me half a dollar this morning?"

And out came the wallet, and the money was handed over with a warm and genial smile.

What! Tears at that? Was it possible she had been so little used to such scenes on his part, that so simple an act of loving kindness thus affected her?

How many games of billiards would be required to secure such satisfaction as Albert carried with him that morning to the shop?

A very simple lesson, is it not? But how many may gain lasting profit by giving heed to the lesson?

Anecdotes.

How Watty the Middy got Married.—A middy in the Royal Navy, he went ashore at Portsmouth with some messmates, and there made merry until the funds were exhausted, and a long bill run up at a tavern at the Point. The signal was made for all hands on board, but when the careless middies would have obeyed it, the landlady intervened, vowing they should not leave the house until the reckoning was paid, and called in a bailiff and his men to show she was in earnest. The youngsters threatened and entreated all to no purpose. The obdurate woman reminded them that they would be irretrievably ruined if the fleet sailed without them, and pronounced her ultimatum. Said she to her horrified debtors: "I will give you all a chance. I am so circumstanced here that I cannot very well carry on my business as a single woman, and I must contrive somehow to get a husband, or at all events to be able to produce a marriage certificate. Now the only terms upon which I will set you free are that one of you marries me. I don't care a snap which it is; but one of you I will have for a husband, or else to jail you all go and your ship sails without you." Finding the vixen immovable, the unhappy midshipmen cast lots, and Watty drew the fatal slip. The lady procured a license, and the knot was tied; after which she bade them, husband included, good-bye, intimating that she did not want to see him again, the marriage papers being all that she wanted, and these were safe in her possession. The ship sailed, the middies keeping their strange doings at the Point a strict secret, as they had sworn to do before drawing lots. Twelve months later, when the ship was at Jamaica, a batch of English papers reached the midshipmen's berth. Glancing over them, Watty was attracted by an account of a robbery and a murder at Portsmouth, and the execution of the culprits. Suddenly leaping to his feet, he waved the welcome newspaper above his head, shouting, "Thank heaven, my wife's hanged."—Chamber's Journal.

Chinese Cruelty.—On the morning of the 25th day of the 5th moon (2d of July), about 11 o'clock, a large and heavy plank of wood floated past Hankow; the people saw that it had a most picturesque appearance; a fair damsel of 19, well dressed was nailed on the plank so that she could move neither her hands or feet. Beside her was the head of a Buddhist priest, attached on the right side of the plank some cakes and other catables so fixed that she could bend her neck and eat them, and on the left three thousand copper cash, and inscribed below was: "This three thousand cash is provided for her coffin when she is dead," and a special inscription was written above her head, "Whosoever pities her and endeavors to save her life, they are guilty of "nan to yu chong," which means, if men save her they are thieves, and if women save her they are defamed." The particulars are that this young damsel belonged to a wealthy family, and her two brothers are petty mandarins who, holding certain posts in small yamens at a place about twenty miles from Hankow, they used this cruel treatment because she was guilty of criminal intercourse with the beheaded priest whose head was on the plank with her. Some report that she is saved, and others that she is still floating on the Yangtze river. — Shun Pao (China), July 17.

Miscellaneous.

An Exchange says the Colorado grasshoppers are reported to be hatching out and preparing to open a vigorous campaign on the various industries of that golden land. It must be disheartening for the farmers of so young and promising a state as Colorado, (where, if a man winks at you twice in an offensive manner, you are expected to pour the contents of your six-shooter into him,) to see their cabbages, cottonwood trees, mules, young buffaloes, quartz mines, and beer breweries, eaten up by so insignificent an enemy as a grass-hopper. The only thing that these gauzy winged pests cannot devour are the beefsteaks in the railway eating houses.

It is said that engravers and watchmakers of Germany harden their tools in sealing wax. The tool is heated to whiteness and plunged into the wax, withdrawn after an instant and plunged in again, the process being repeated until the steel is too cold to enter the wax. The steel is said to become, after this process, almost as hard as the diamond, and, when touched with a little oil or turpentine, the tools are excellent for engraving, and also for piercing the hardest metal.

For five years, says Mr. J. Echter, this city, I have been afflicted with rheumatism, and for two years have had a sore on my leg the size of a silver dollar, which nothing would heal. St. Jacobs Oil cured the rheumatism and healed the sore.—Harrisburg (Pa.) Independent.

A Paper Carpet. — A description is given of a paper carpet now made in England, and designed to imitate parquet flooring, the paper being printed in patterns to imitate different woods from photographs, so that, as it is stated, the resemblance is absolutely perfect. The floor is first prepared by being made perfectly level, and the crevices filled up with plaster of Paris; over the surface, as thus prepared, hession is stretched, and on this, first, lining paper and then the patterned paper is pasted, the whole being finished with a coating of a peculiar kind of varnish, described as wonderfully hard and wear-resisting. This kind of carpeting can be kept perfectly clean with the greatest ease, and though the wear of paper carpeting may be thought problematical, the inventor states that he has had rooms covered with it for some sixteen months, without showing any appreciable signs of wear. Its appearance, also, is very satisfactory to the eye.

How to Stop a Paper.—The following, from one of our exchanges, so fully and clearly expresses our views on the subject, that we copy it without comment: "You have an undoubted right to stop a newspaper when you feel disposed, upon the payment of all arrearages. Do not hesitate to do so on account of "tenderness" for the editor. Don't you suppose he would stop buying sugar of you, or meat, clothing, or dry goods, etc., if he thought he was not getting his money's worth, and why should you not exercise the same privilege with him? And when you discontinue a paper, do so manfully. Don't be so spiteful as to throw it back to the postmaster with a contemptuous "I don't want it any longer!" and have "refused" written on the margin, and have the paper returned to the editor. No gentleman ever stopped it in that way, no matter if his head is covered with grey hairs that should be honorable. If you do not longer wish to receive a newspaper, write a note to the editor like a man, saying so—and be sure that arrearages are paid. This is the way to stop a newspaper."

The Human Figure.—The height of the human figure is six times the length of the feet. Whether the form is slender or plump, the rule holds good; any deviation is a departure from the highest beauty in proportion. The Greeks made all their statues according to this rule. The face from the highest point of the forehead, where the hair begins, to the chin, is one-tenth of the whole stature. The hand from the wrist to the end of the middle finger, is the same. From the top of the chest to the highest point of the forehead is a seventh. If the face from the roots of the hair to the chin, be divided into three equal parts, the first division determines the place where the eyebrows meet, and the second the place of the nostrils. The height from the feet to the top of the head is the distance between the extremity of the fingers when the arms are extended.

What is a Yacht?—"Is that a yacht?" we inquired of a long, gaunt codder who was hanging about the wharf, and we pointed to a small steam vessel coming in. "No," was the reply. "Is that a yacht?" we inquired again, pointing to another sort of a craft that we thought might be a yacht. "No, that isn't no'yot, nuther," was the answer. "Well, then, what is a yacht?" was the next inquiry. "Wot's a yot?" said the fisherman; "well, you gets any sort of craft you please, and fill her up with liquor and seeg-yars, and git yer frens on board and have a yell of a time—and that's a yot!" We thanked him with fervor, for we had long been trying to find out what a yacht really was.—Troy Press.

Rubbing the Midnight Oil.—In the Philadelphia Times of recent date, we notice an item referring to the miraculously quick cure of a prominent druggist of that city, Mr. J. M. Higgins, Germantown Road and Morris street, who had an awful attack of rheumatism of the knee. He applied St. Jacobs Oil at night, and next morning was well and in his store as usual.—Troy (N. Y.) Morning Telegram and Whig.

At the Social Science Congress in Edinburgh, "Mrs. Duncan McLaren protested against the custody of children being considered a minor matter." Pray, what is it then?

Advice is cheap—dreadfully cheap. But we must be true to our instincts of humanity and tell our suffering friends to use St. Jacobs Oil, and surprise their rheumatism and themselves also at the result. J. D. L. Harvey, Esq., of Chicago, says: I would be recreant to my duty to those afflicted, did I not raise my voice in its praise.—St. Louis Chronicle.

A candidate for the situation of coachman advertises in a Cork paper that he has good testimonials, and is "both courageous and a good shot."

A person who is fond of figures states that our national debt, in silver dollars, could be removed by rail only with the aid of 5,550 cars, carrying ten tons each.

The common punishment in a Washington public school has been confinement in the boiler room, where the temperature is 110. One little girl was made seriously ill.

On a fairly uncrowded street of New York twenty men were counted as they passed rapidly along. Of the twenty exactly ten turned to the right when they met a pedestrian. The other ten took a great deal of trouble to turn to the left and made much confusion.

A Monsieur Loitel has been recently dredging in the Sea of Gallilee. It has a depth of over eight hundred feet, and contains twelve species of fish. The majority of these species have the singular habit of hatching their eggs and sheltering their young in their mouths.

In a prosecution for dog stealing, heard at the Middlesex Sessions, in England, the other day, a lady stated that she had had dogs stolen ten times, and for their recovery had paid upward of £100. One favorite pug had been stolen three times, and each time she had paid £25 for its recovery.

The proprietors of the International Hotel in Helena Mon. Terr., a few days ago loaded some stove wood with gunpowder, with which they proposed annihilating some wood thieves. By accident, however, they used some of the sticks themselves. The stove was smashed into small pieces.

A woman at Lodi, Pa., deliberately starved herself to death. The process required six weeks of total abstinence from food, though she drank sparingly of water. She had long been eccentric, and the death of her mother destroyed her reason. Thereupon she went to bed with the avowed intention of dying and never ate again.

A Chicago tenant informed the owner of the house he occupied that the drainage was defective, and demanded repairs, which were not made. His daughter was barely saved from death by diphtheria, and the physician declared that she was poisoned by sewer gas. A suit for $5,000 damages has been brought against the landlord.

A man in Warren county, Ky., drives an ox team that once belonged to an intemperate man, and that got so used to stopping for him at saloons that now, when passing a saloon, the animals will not move until their new owner goes in to get a drink. He doesn't care for the liquor, he says, but is obliged to drink to get his team along. He has refused $5,000 for the oxen.

About six miles west of Beowawe Station, on the Central Pacific Road, there is a true geyser on the side of a mountain, or rather forty of them. The one which throws the highest stream is only about an inch and a half in diameter, but at intervals of thirty-five minutes it casts up boiling water to a height of twenty-five feet. A lot of others gush up in the vicinity over about forty acres of ground.

At a ball at Schwartzenberg, Saxony, a young man entered, having what appeared to be a cigar in his mouth. He went to the chandelier as if to light it, and a terrible explosion ensued. The lights were extinguished, the walls partly gave way, some of the dancers were covered with blood, and the young man was blown to pieces. He had killed himself by means of a dynamite cartridge.

While a Long Island family were eating their supper, recently, they heard a squeaking in the kitchen closet, and found on the floor a rat with its foot caught by a clam. The rat came out of the closet, and was assailed by the cat, but fiercely resisted, and bit the cat's ear so severely that the feline pet of the house ran out into the yard, wild with rage, carrying the rat on its ear, while the rat carried the clam on its leg. The rat rat finally met his fate.

A mean householder in Toronto refused to allow the body of a woman who had died on his premises to be removed for burial unless he was paid $50 for rent and attendance. He also presented another bill for $25, alleging that the visitors to the deceased had worn out his carpets. At the request of the officiating minister, a policeman was detailed to be present at the funeral, with instructions to arrest him if he created any trouble, which he was prudent enough to avoid.

When a man wants to enlist in the army of China his courage is subjected to a very unusual test. The recruiting officer places the candidate on a chair and proceeds to extract a tooth, and the conduct of the patient under this ordeal is said to decide the question as to his fitness for the military service of the empire. If he howls and jumps up and down he is pronounced unfit, but if he smiles and exhibits generally a feeling of satisfaction, he secures a permanent place in the ranks.

An attendant at the Oregon Insane Asylum was told to climb a tree and bring down a patient who had taken a position in its top. He had reached a height of thirty feet when a limb broke, and he fell, bouncing from branch to branch, and finally sitting on the ground like the hammer of a pile driver. For twenty years this man had been dumb, though able to hear, but now the spectators were astounded by such an outbreak of fluent and shocking profanity as they had never heard before. The cure was permanent, too.

A TOTAL ABSTINENCE FACE.

Charity may be a virtue, but when aiming to be good in this direction it is proper to see that your generosity is applied to deserving objects. A Hartford gentleman, who is charitably disposed, has been imposed upon so many times he is now very cautious to whom he gives. But this morning a man poorly clad, with features pinched by cold, called at our friend's store and asked for something to eat. The merchant was about to send him to the right about with a savage "No," when a something about the man's face made him think that this one was possibly deserving of charity. So he questioned him and drew out what appeared to be a tolerably straight story of misfortune, resulting in the loss of work, and thus compelling him to beg.

"Do you drink?" asked the merchant.

"No, sir," answered the other, a little indignantly. "Do I look like it?"

The merchant was compelled to inwardly admit that his pale face did not look like the phiz of a drinking man.

"But," continued the merchant, "I suppose you would prefer a tenpence to a good warm breakfast?"

"No, sir," replied the beggar, "I would rather have the breakfast."

This seemingly honest answer threw him off his guard, and he handed him a quarter, telling him to go and get a breakfast.

"Thank you," said the fellow, as he carefully laid away the coin in an inside pocket to his coat. "Now, there be men mean enough to take money from a gentleman like you and then go off and peddle it off for rum. But I ain't that kind of a chap—not much. Good day, sir."

This little speech aroused the merchant's suspicions, and he told one of his clerks to shadow him and see where he brought up. He turned the first corner, and there met a companion, and as the clerk was following on behind, heard the following dialogue:

"Well, old rooster, what did you get?"

"Not a cent. How did you make out?"

"Oh, I got a quarter. My total abstinence face did the business. Your rum face spiles you for a first-class beggar. But come along in here and get a drink," and the clerk saw them slide into a saloon, and when he went back and reported, the merchant was convinced he had been sold again. If that total abstinence face shows up in that particular store again there will be music at the toe of the merchant's boot.—Hartford Times.

THE LONGEST LAWSUIT.

When Hamlet spoke of the laws delays he may have had a prophetic inkling of the famous Berkely suit. This historic process lasted upward of one hundred and ninety years, having commenced shortly after the death of Thomas, fourth Lord Berkely, in the fifth of Henry V. (1416), and terminated in the seventh of James I. (1609). It arose out of the marriage of Elizabeth, only daughter and heiress of the above baron, with Richard Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, their descendants having continually sought to get possession of the castle and lordship of Berkeley, which not only occasioned the famous lawsuit in question, but was often attended with the most violent quarrels on both sides, at least during the first fifty years or more. In the year 1469 (tenth of Edward IV.), Thomas Talbot, second Viscount Lisle, great-grandson of the above Elizabeth, residing at Wottom-under-Edge, was killed at Nibley Green, in a furious skirmish between some five hundred of his own retainers and about as many of those of William (then) Lord Berkeley (whom he had challenged to the field), who likewise headed his men; when, beside the brave but ill-fated young Lisle (scarce of age at that time) about one hundred and fifty of their followers were slain, and three hundred wounded, chiefly of the Wotton party, who fled on the fall of their leader. Lord Lisle's sisters were his heirs, and their husbands (one of whom also got the title) followed up the suit, as their descendants did after them, till down to the time of the first James, when Henry, eleventh Lord Berkeley, obtained a decree in favor of his claims, and got full and quiet possession of the lands and manors in dispute. Shakespeare evidently had this suit in mind when he put the famous soliloquy in Hamlet's mouth.

A NATURAL CURIOSITY.

A knot of manzanita roots, about a foot long, which grew so as to represent a man resting upon the head of a dragon with one foot, while the other foot and one arm are uplifted, as if the figure was in the attitude of hurling a javelin, is now in the possession of a gentleman at San Jose, California. The color of the wood is a rich brown. The representation is quite true, and very little carving is needed to make it almost perfect. The curiosity was formerly in the possession of an Indian chief, and was left him by his ancestors. It grew somewhere in the Rocky Mountains, and is supposed to have been in the possession of the Indians for centuries. What little carving was done on it was executed by them. During some war it was captured by the whites and fell into the hands of a hunter. In 1849 he was offered $100 for it, but refused to part with it, and kept it till his death, which occurred not long ago. He left the curiosity to Mr. Charles Ehrlich, the gentleman referred to, who prizes it highly.

TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.

Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,
Universalist Pastor.

For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.
Peabody, Mass, June 27, 1879.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,
Of Beverly, Mass.

I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, CATARRH, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him; his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.
Beverly, Mass, Oct'r 29, 1879.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,
Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence, Ms.

My dear Dr. Lighthill,—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the larynx into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted, I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.
Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.
Lawrence, Nov. 4, 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,
Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.

The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celbrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.

I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.

I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.

From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,
Piano Manufacturer, 185 Washington St., Boston

Dr. Lighthill,—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.
I have the honor to be very truly yours,

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.

From Mrs. M. A. Emery.

Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends, and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,
Mrs. M. A. EMERY,
359 Lowell Street,
Lawrence, Sept. 21, 1880.

HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

A REMARKABLE CURE.

From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.

Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man. G. H. ROBINSON,
Methuen, Nov. 1st, 1880.

Please Remember—Dr. LIGHTHILL'S Office is at 115 Boylston Street, Boston.

Now or Never.

It must be evident, even to prejudiced observers, that the present status of the "liquor question" in this town offers an opportunity for effective and beneficial action. At last we have a Board of Selectmen clear-headed enough to know the law, independent enough to take a stand under the law, and we believe with nerve enough to follow the course naturally demanded by their position in the premises. The position they assume doubtless fails to meet the approval of some, but would any course please everybody? This fact should be kept carefully in view, that they have taken a decided, radical position, which, if maintained, cannot fail to cripple the power of the liquor traffic in this town. This is not the time to argue the evil effects of Intemperance. They are granted and well known. "The pestilence which stalks in gloomy triumph through some Eastern land is less destroying." We are not to consider, in the present emergency, which is best—prohibition or license; we are not to criticise because the Selectmen have not selected our plan of action; we are not to be governed by the fact that we took part in or opposed the political movement which placed the present Board in power. The Selectmen have given us a chance to do some good work, and the one important point is, Have the citizens of Peabody virtue and grit enough to take advantage of the opportunity? It is not fair to fall back upon the argument that the Selectmen ought to do their duty anyway. Every fair-minded man knows the difficulties there are in the way of a successful opposition to the liquor traffic and the encouragement there is to anyone trying to perform a disagreeable duty, to know that friends are sympathizing and anxious to help. There ought to be two things done. There ought to be a concentration of public sentiment so united and unmistakable that it would give assurance of earnest and thorough work. There ought to be friends enough to raise a large amount of money, and to counsel and aid the Selectmen as they may desire. There ought to be a manifestation, without regard to creed or party, by every respecter of law, every lover of order, every one who desires the promotion of virtue and sobriety. If necessary, our citizens should be sworn in by detail as special police, and the work done with force and decision. It is a golden opportunity, in which all can conscientiously join, and which, if neglected, means the strengthening of the liquor element beyond the power to control at all in the future. The contest will not be an easy one. It will create excitement, expense and hard feelings, but it is needed. Are the people of Peabody ready to meet the issue, or are they going to let praiseworthy public officials fail for want of sympathy and aid, which is their due? Time will shortly tell. Let us hope for the best.

We have received the fourth edition of "The North Shore of Massachusetts Bay," the correct guide for all traveling in this section of the county. Messrs. Benj. D. Hill and Winfield Scott Nevins show great and commendable enterprise in this work, and we are glad to see it so successful.

Mr. Robertson is Collector of the Port of New York, and the grand old Republican party still holds together and the Government goes on in the same old way.

A New York paper, speaking of electric light factories, says there is one on Twenty-fifth street, another on Sixth avenue, and Edison's own on Fifth avenue. Broadway is a nightly glory of moonlike light, from the electric globes, and the silhouettes of the tree branches thrown on the broad pavements from this intense glare of pent-up and controlled lightning, are, to the artistic mind, the most beautiful lessons in light and shade to be found in all this great city, much as art prevails. From these centers, or light factories, as we here chose to call them, wires lead to nearly all parts of the city, lighting streets, stores and dwellings. Here the electricity is generated by friction engines, and there! away it goes on a tiny track of iron, or zinc, to blossom into the white illumination miles away.

The new steamship line between Boston and Gloucester affords an opportunity for a most delightful and novel ocean excursion, and we do our readers a favor in calling their attention to its novel and attractive features. The Admiral is an ocean steamer, and was selected by the Government to convey General Grant and party to Cuba. She will make two round trips each day, remaining at Gloucester over night, where those securing state-rooms have comfortable quarters for the night, and are already on board for the morning trip to Boston. The fare is very reasonable, the trip varied, charming and invigorating, and we shall be surprised if a trip on the Admiral does not become one of the most popular excursions of the season with individuals or parties. Particulars may be found in our advertising columns.

The good man now takes comfort in the thought that the season of housecleaning is well-nigh past—those direful days when he takes his breakfast on the head of a barrel, after struggling an hour over dusty carpets or wrestling with refractory stove-pipes, and comes home to dine on the remnants of yesterday's frugal meal, and to find recreation in pounding his fingers in his unskillful aims at the head of a tack, or in lugging off barrels of disabled crockery, superannuated fruit cans, old boots, coal ashes and other waste that the argus-eyed housewife has gathered up in her semi-annual campaign over the house premises.

A bill to punish that anomaly among crimes, vitriol-throwing, has just passed both houses of the New York assembly, unanimously. The Legislature doubtless received a fresh impulse from the recent Long Island case, in which a startling spirit of ferocity was shown. The bill fixes a penalty of from two to ten years in the State's Prison. This addition to our criminal jurisprudence will have a salutory effect upon those dastardly cowards who in years past have not hesitated to use this powerful acid to disfigure for life their victims.

Murat Halstead, editor of the Cincinnati Commercial, says the devil is a faded fraud. We always had an idea he was a fraud, but it never entered our head that he would fade. When one of these political editors attacks a deep, theological subject in which the devil is concerned, look out for revelations of a startling character.

A man in Westfield, Mass., recently received a letter from an Englishman, setting forth that his son had landed in New York, and gone, he believed, "to a place called Texas." The father wanted to know if it would "be asking too much" to beg that his correspondent run over to Texas, and learn whether the young man is there.

The prediction of another short harvest in England is made. If true, we shall see more distress among English laborers, a greater demand for American agricultural products, and increased emigration.

Cars on several of the San Francisco streets are moved by wire cables, but this is done only where the grade is so steep that horses cannot well be used. The system is now to be tried on a level route in Chicago.

Where ignorance is bliss: Miss Featherfuss, sitting in the front pew in her gorgeous new hat, was totally oblivious of the innocent little tag that told to the congregation that that stunning spray of flowers cost her just 62 cents.

A kindly policeman picked a drunkard out of a San Francisco gutter, and, perceiving that his head was bent over to one side, set about straightening it by main strength. The fellow lazily opened his eyes and remarked: "Born so, mister, born so."

A correspondent wants to know if there is any profit raising lions. Not now, we believe. There was a prophet raising lions many years ago—Daniel, but the business is confined to wild-beast trainers now.

FOREIGN FRUITS. — Bananas come from Baracoa, on the northeastern coast of Cuba, and from Jamaica. The banana plant bears but one bunch, and is killed when that is gathered. Fresh plants are raised from the seed slips which are found clustered around the base of every bunch. They take from six to eight months to produce mature fruit, and the bunches are cut for export while still green. Cocoanuts are obtained at the same ports, and the usual method of loading vessels is to put in first a load of cocoanuts and then a layer of banana bunches above them. A platform is then put over, and on this another layer of banana bunches is placed. The hatches are kept open as much as possible in order to keep the fruit cool, and if the run takes only ten or twelve days the bananas are fit for market when they arrive. A schooner will bring from 20,000 to 50,000 cocoanuts and from 2,000 to 3,000 bunches of bananas at a time.

Pineapples come from the Bahama Islands. The plant is killed with the gathering of the single fruit that it bears, and is reproduced by planting seed slips, as in the case of bananas. The ordinary pineapples are piled together in the hold, and the loss from decay is often very great. The sugar-loaf pine is a fine, juicy variety that is very perishable, and to have it in a condition at all marketable a good deal of the bush must be taken with the fruit.

The oranges brought to New York in sailing vessels come from Porto Rico. They are stored on platforms in layers, each about fifteen inches thick from, 350,000 to 400,000 coming in a single cargo. Any delay on the passage causes great loss from decay of fruit. Orange and cocoanut trees are perennial bearers, and well-established plantations last a long time.

The business of fruit growing is precarious. The season for hurricanes is just when the banana plants are young, and it is not a rare thing for a plantation to be destroyed in a day. The orange groves also suffer greatly from storms at times, and are also injured by the attacks of a fly, whose larvæ embed themselves in the rind of the fruit and the bark of the trees. The chances of a good pineapple crop in the Bahamas are said to be so precarious that sometimes the negro planters working small plantations are reduced to an exclusive fruit diet, which is as near as one gets to starvation there.

There is no necessity to announce the arrival of a cargo of fruit. As soon as a cargo is in, dealers cluster around it. Fruiterers, marketmen, grocers, and street peddlers are there, and what one dealer will not take another will. Fruit that is too ripe to be bought by a storekeeper is taken at a low price by a street Arab, who begins to cry his stock as soon as he leaves the wharf, and before the day is over it will be not only sold, but eaten. The trade is active from the latter part of March into summer, but when the peach and berry crops get into the market the West India fruit trade is flattened out as if by a storm of the tropics.

When Jay Gould was in Galveston, and accompanied by a number of leading citizens, was inspecting the cotton exchange, a small boy was siezed by one of the Galveston gentlemen, just as the gamin was picking the great railroad magnate's pocket. "What did the little fellew do?" asked Gould. "He stole your pocket-handkerchief, Mr. Gould, and I am going to turn him over to a policeman." "Don't do that," replied Mr. Gould, smiling good-naturedly; "let him go. We should not discourage young beginners. I had to start out in a modest way myself when I went into the railroad business;" and reaching down into his pocket Mr. Gould took up a quarter and gave it to the boy, to encourage him to aim higher.—Galveston News.

HE COMMENCED WELL.—A young society gentleman didn't desire his office associates to know how often he communicated with his sweetheart, and a few days ago sent the errand boy with a note and particular instructions not to "give him away" on his return. The bright little fellow soon came back, and with a look and emphasis that showed he fully understood what was desired of him, called out before all the legal minds that were present, "That gentleman says it's all right, and she'll see you at half-past seven."

Fred Douglass has a soft thing. Gen. Sheridan, the late incumbent, says he liked the place, but was overworked. His office hours were from half-past 12 to a quarter of 1 every other Wednesday.

The class in German grammar is on the subject of genders. "Miss Flora, why is 'moon' masculine in German?" "So that she can go out alone at night, I suppose."

PEABODY.

The Peabody Temperance Union held a meeting on Monday evening, and decided to hold regular meetings on the first Monday of each month; also to hold a public meeting a week from next Sunday, to be addressed by a speaker from abroad, and have the local liquor question discussed by prominent citizens in town.

Whoever said there was nothing large about Mr. S. A. Osborne should have seen the rhubarb displayed at his store last week. The bunch contained twenty stalks, the combined weight of which was thirty-four pounds. It was raised by Mr. A. W. Rowe, of Danvers. There were seven square feet in one of the leaves.

The revised edition of the New Testament will be delivered as fast as received to those who ordered them of Mr. D. P. Grosvenor, Sr. Mr. G. is receiving orders daily, and any one desiring a copy may order it through him. He is selling the standard work published by the Henry Bill Publishing Company, of Norwich, Conn.

We received a call this afternoon from Messrs. John W. and Charles P. Stevens, the former of the firm of Stevens, Berger & Co., leather manufacturers, Chicago, and the latter of the firm of Wild & Stevens, roller makers, Boston; both former residents of this town. We were reminded by their visit that each had been a regular subscriber for the PRESS since its first issue.

Yesterday afternoon, about 4 o'clock, Eddie, son of Mr. Charles Carlon, but nineteen months of age, wandered into the fireroom in J. A. Lord's establishment, where his father is engineer. The little fellow fell into a tank of hot water, kept to supply the boiler. His little brother, a lad of two years, pulled him out, and the two walked home. Dr. Elliott was called, but the little boy died at 6.30 o'clock, in intense agony.

A Strawberry Festival will be given by the ladies connected with the Baptist Society, in the vestry of the Baptist Church, on Wednesday evening, June 15. Strawberries, ice cream and cake will be offered for sale. It is expected that Miss Ella F. Palmer, of Somerville, will favor us with select readings, which will be interspersed with singing by the choir. As the proceeds of the festival are intended to help defray the expenses of repairing the steeple, it is hoped the friends will give us liberal patronage. Admission, 10 cents; children under 12, 5 cents.

The persons to whom the Selectmen granted licenses have decided not to take them, preferring to fight it out without one. The rumsellers claim that they overreached themselves at the last town election. For in the caucus they captured, they voted to increase the number of Selectmen to five, while if they had remained three the license would undoubtedly have been granted the same as last year.—Gazette Correspondent.

We are glad to learn this, because we were never clear as to what faction that party belonged who captured that caucus, and on the results of which our neighbor said: "Every citizen who has the true interest of the town at heart should rejoice, and we now have "Hope" (Dr. Ayers' cut) for the future advancement and prosperity of our town."

The thief who snatched the pocket-book of Mrs. Geo. Carr, at Swampscott, about a week ago, while on an Eastern Railroad train, was captured in Lynn on Friday. His name is Bernard McKinley. He was examined on Saturday, and held in $1,000 for trial at the October term of the Superior Court. Thos. A. Gallagher, one of Pinkerton's detectives, who is with Barnum's circus, recognized the prisoner as a man following the circus through Connecticut. He was arrested there, having previously made the statement to Gallagher that he came there to borrow of countrymen. Mr. G. says the man is a New York professional thief, and his record is upon Pinkerton's New York books.

The Bank of England was incorporated in 1649. It covers five acres of ground, and employs nine hundred clerks. There are no windows on the street. Light is admitted through open courts; no mob could take the bank, therefore, without cannon to batter the immense wall. The clock in the center of the bank has fifty dials attached to it. Large cisterns are sunk in the court, and engines in perfect order are always in readiness in case of fire.

A Boston paper relates an anecdote concerning a young man in that city to whom a rich but prudent uncle presented a colt which the young man raised and broke. The uncle was so impressed by his nephew's actions that he left him $50,000 in his will. Something similar to this occurred in Chicago. A rich uncle left his nephew $50,000. The young man went to Kentucky, bought a colt, raised it, and then the colt broke him by losing the first race in which it started.

Two of the most popular American magazines, which sell for 35 cents at home, are sold in England for 25 cents. In other words, an American printing house can write, print, engrave, publish and transport a magazine thousands of miles and sell it for 10 cents less than in New York.

Leadville has six theatres, six daily papers and five banks, and some of the people are talking of putting up a church for the looks of the thing.

Bernard Koehler and Fritz Hisgen, two house-painters, yesterday began painting the large house at Betts street and Central avenue. Three o'clock in the afternoon found them close up to the eaves of the house and 65 feet from the ground. They had just finished the surface within reach and had started to lower the scaffold a few feet. When the required dishad been reached Hisgen called to his partner to hang on to the rope until he (Hisgen) tied his own, when he would come over and perform a like service for him. Hisgen had just completed his own knot when Koehler cried out: "Come over quick, I can't hold it." Hisgen, as quickly as possible, started across the aerial bridge, but had not gone two steps when he saw the man let go his hold and felt the ladder give way beneath his feet. As he began the fall, in the energy of desperation he with both hands, grasped the almost smooth top of the fourth-story window cornice and there hung in the air a distance of sixty feet from the pavement. He then gave an exhibition of nerve that terrified every one that saw it. Placing the toe of one boot against the window he gave his body a slight pendulum motion away from the house. A second push gave him a better impetus, and as he swung on the return toward the window he released his hold and went crashing through the sash and glass safely to the floor of the fourth-story room, from whence he immediately looked out through the aperture he had made to see what had become of his companion! Koehler had not been quite so fortunate. As he went shooting through the air he caught the hanging rope with both hands and lessened his speed all the way down at the expense of all the cuticle of his palms, which was burned off by the friction. He landed in a sitting posture on the sidewalk and was taken to the hospital with a pair of very sore hips. —Cincinnati Commercial.

Don't worry about a division in the Republican party. The truth is that part of the party which will secede because one or two Senators are not permitted to manage the party in their own interests is so very small that it won't be missed. HOW THEY GET INDIA RUBBER IN AFRICA.

Having passed fully three years on the southwest coast of Africa, as trader for an English firm, I will endeavor to describe the manner in which India rubber is procured in that country, as India rubber formed the staple produce of the district where I was located.

The natives are in a very rude, uncivilized condition. They have no currency, and do all business by bartering the native products for manufactured stuffs. Their wealth consists chiefly in the number of slaves they possess, who fish, hunt and keep their plantations in good order.

When rubber has to be collected, from four to ten slaves get their flint muskets in order, each carrying, in addition, a long sword-shaped knife called a machete, a number of calabashes or jars to collect the juice of the rubber vine, and a little food that has been cured in smoke, as they can find plenty of sustenance in the bush without carrying it about with them from place to place.

The vines are in some cases near to the towns, but generally the natives have to go several days' journey into the bush before they can sit down and commence business. The vine itself is of a rough, knotty nature, about as thick as a man's arm, and grows to a length of fully two hundred feet. Its leaves are glossy, like those of the South American rubber trees, and a large fruit, much liked by the natives, is gathered from it. I have tasted it, and found it very palatable, being slightly acid. This vine (what its scientific name is I don't pretend to know) yields several grades of rubber, each of different commercial value, the best quality being taken from the highest part, and the poorest from the bottom.

With their knives, or machetes, the natives slash the vines in several places, and put broad leaves directly underneath the wounds for the juice to drop on, and which, being of a strong, adhesive nature, none of it gets lost. When the top part of the vine is bled, calabashes, or jars, are placed with their openings to the wounds, so that none of it may drop on the branches of the tree, and so get lost; but it is not often they trouble themselves climbing, unless the vines happen to be scarce in the vicinity. The entire day they devote to cutting; next day they gather what was cut on the day previous, and so on. Each evening, after collecting, they put all the juice they have into several iron pots, or earthen vessels of native manufacture, and boil it; at the same time they can greatly improve the lowest quality by adding a little salt, and the more they boil the juice the better it becomes. When sufficiently boiled the water is poured off and the juice is allowed to cool, when it is fashioned according to the grade—ball, flake, mixed or tongue—and is ready for the market. In this way about twenty or thirty pounds a day is generally collected. It is then taken to the factory, and there exchanged for guns, cloth, rum, &c. When it is received at the factory it is carefully marked, classed, weighed, and put into casks for shipment. It contains so much water that twenty per cent. is deducted from the weight of each cask, as that is about the amount of shrinkage on the voyage. This is, however, a loss to the native, as it is deducted from him when selling.

This vine, from my personal observation, is to be found from Sierra Leone in the north to Vunsembo in the south, but along the coast line it is rapidly becoming extinct, as the natives are so careless or rapacious that in many cases they completely sever the vine, thus killing it, instead of simply bleeding it.—Rubber Era.

A CHILD BIRD-CHARMER.

There lives near Harrisburg, O.—an out-of-the-way place in Hancock county, about three miles west of Mt. Blanchard—a very remarkable child only five years old, who seems to have the power to charm birds at will. Her mother first noticed this strange fascination the child possesses about a year ago. The little girl was out in the door-yard among a bevy of snowbirds, and when she spoke to them they would come and light upon her, twittering with glee. On taking them in her hands and stroking them, the birds instead of trying to get away from their fair captor seemed to be highly pleased, and when let loose would fly a short distance and immediately return to the child again. She took several of them into the house to show her mother, who, thinking she might hurt them, put them out of doors, but no sooner was the door opened than the birds flew into the room again, lit upon the girl's head and began to chirp. The birds remained about the premises all winter, flying to the little girl whenever the door opened. The parents of the child became alarmed, believing that this strange power was an ill-omen, and that the much-dreaded visitor, death, was about to visit their home. But death did not come, and during the last summer the child has had many pet birds. The child handles the birds so gently that a humming bird once in her hands does not fail to return. Last winter a bevy of birds kept her company, and she played with them for hours at a time. Every morning the birds fly to her window, and leave only when the sun sinks in the west. The parents of the little girl are poor, superstitious people, and have been reticent about the matter until lately, fearing that some great calamity was about to befall them.

Portrait of FAITH WHITCOMB, the Shakeress, the most successful nurse of the age, who is now accomplishing more good through the distribution of her medicine than all the doctors in the country.

SPECIAL TO LADIES!

FAITH WHITCOMB'S Shaker Liniment is a Sure and Certain Cure for Inflammation of the Womb and for the distressing Lame Back, from which the majority of American women suffer.

A Boston gentleman, well known in business circles—in fact, one of the largest advertisers of the city whose wife has suffered for four years with inflammation of the Womb with constant lameness in the back—employing the best regular Physicians—and afterwards the best Female Electric Physicians, expending vast sums of money with but little effect, has had no occasion to employ a Physician since commencing the use of last July. She is now well. She never has the Backache from which she was hardly ever free during the previous four years.

LADIES:—Instead of filling the stomach with wishy-washy medicines for so-called "Female Complaints," apply the proper remedy—externally—and you will obtain certain relief. Every regular Physician will tell you that the only wise treatment for the Inflamation of the Womb is by the external application of the proper remedies, and if you ask your Family Physician he will advise you to use FAITH WHITCOMB'S SHAKER LINIMENT, (to whom the recipe is open for examination.

INVALID LADIES

Who will send a postal card, simply bearing their address, will receive, prepaid by mail,

"FAITH WHITCOMB'S ADVICE TO MOTHERS,"

which every mother should read. Address, FAITH WHITCOMB'S Agency, Boston, Mass.

LINIMENT.

THE GREAT SHAKER REMEDY

FOR

Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Pains in the Spine, Inflammation of the Kidneys, Enlarged Glands, Toothache, Croup, Earache, Sprains, Chronic Diseases of the Joints and Muscles, Bruises, Backache, Soreness of the Chest, Gout, Quinsy, Sore Throat, Swellings, Burns and Scalds, Headache, Frosted Feet, Chilblains, and all diseases of an inflammatory order.

FOR TOOTHACHE.

Boston Dentists use it in their practice and recommend it to their patrons.

FROM THE CELEBRATED SURGEON DENTIST, U. K. MAYO.

337 TREMONT ST. BOSTON, Aug 30, 1880.

I congratulate you upon the merited and enviable renown attained by your really valuable liniment. It is the most effective remedy for toothache that has ever come to my notice and I cheerfully recommend to my patrons. U. K. MAYO.

IT WORKS LIKE MAGIC IN INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM.

For proof of which please read the following:—

214 CAMBRIDGE ST., BOSTON, Sept. 20, 1880.

I am astonished at the wonderful properties of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment. Three weeks ago I was attacked with Inflammatory Rheumatism, my head was swollen to double its usual size and the Pain was intense. The first application relieved the pain. In two weeks after using two 50 cent bottles of the Liniment I was entirely cured. Those who are familiar with the Inflammatory Rheumatism and the time which it generally runs will agree with me that the Shaker Liniment is a remarkable remedy, and I anvise Rheumatics to use it. J. F. SAWTELL.

The Boston Evening Traveller in referring to the above case says:—

"The cure of Mr. Sawtell, the well known grocer, of inflammatory rheumatism, is creating a decided sensation at the West End. Several gentlemen from the Revere House, chronic Rheumatics, called upon Mr. Sawtell for confirmation of the rumors of his astonishing recovery and found that the facts had not been exaggerated. Such cures place Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment at the head of rheumatic remedies."

CROUP.

SAVE THE LITTLE ONES.

"If Faith Whitcomb's directions are followed not one case of croup in a thousand will prove fatal.

"He will give further pooof if you will call upon him.

BOSTON, Nov. 1, 1880.

This certifies that my wife who had been a sufferer from Neuralgia for twenty years, was cured by the use of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and four applications cured my back which was so lame from Rheumatism that I could not move without pain. I assure sufferers from Neuralgia and Rheumatism that this Liniment will surely cure these diseases. I know it to be a fact that Mr. Lord, one of my neighbors at Greenwood who had been on crutches for fifteen years, and had unsuccessfully tried many remedies, obtained relief from less than one bottle of Shaker Liniment and Mrs. Wheeler of the same place another neighbor, a great sufferer from Chronic Rheumatism—is praising the Shaker Liniment in the strongest terms, for it is the only remedy that would help her. I shall be glad to give further proof of the value of this Liniment to any sufferers who will call either upon me in Boston or at my house at Greenwood. A. HANSON.

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER.

You know Physicians are proverbially shy of anything like patent medicines. Doctor Sylvester is no exception to this rule; but when he saw the formula of "Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment" he said "that is all right, that is a good remedy." He prescribed it for me when I was next assailed by my old enemy Neuralgia, or rather Neuralgic Rheumatism, from which I have suffered much, especially from Neuralgia of the Heart. It was a severe attack and I feared a long illness, but I used the Liniment freely and began to find relief very soon. In a week I was WELL. Its effects are almost magical. I will cheerfully recommend it to my friends. C. A. SYLVESTER.

SHERBURNE, MASS., Nov. 2, 1880.

Dr. Sylvester the well-known Physician of Sherborn, gives the following statement:—

SHERBORN, MASS., Sept. 20, 1880.

This certifies that I have examined the formula of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and the ingredients are such that it must be of great value in Neuralgia and Rhumatism. I use it in my family and I recommend it to all sufferers from these diseases, for it is better than any Liniment that has ever come to my notice. W. P. SYLVESTER, M. D.

When regular Physicians recommend a remedy, and use it themselves in their families you may be sure it has unusual merit.

A well-known Sunday School Worker gives his evidence.

WOBURN, Aug. 24, 1880.

The Shaker Liniment cured my wife of an enlarged joint, from which she suffered for months. A few applications cured her. I also received almost immediate relief in a case of acute inflammation and my son received great benefit in a severe attack of rheumatism. As a family liniment I think it has no equal.

E. N. CUMMINGS.

"It cannot be recommended too highly as a family liniment.

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, Mass., Oct. 20, 1880.

I have used Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment for rheumatism with the happiest results, indeed it is the best liniment that I have ever used giving me quick relief. It is not only efficacious for rheumatism, but for strains, sprains, etc. It can not be recommended too highly as a family liniment. C. H. LEWIS.

It always relieves Neuralgia and if the application is continued a cure can be dependedupon.

[From Hon. A. Maynard, the extensive manufacturer and founder of the town of Maynard.]

ASSABET MILLS,
MAYNARD, MASS., Aug 24, 1880.

I gladly add my testimony to the value of the Shaker Liniment in case of Neuralgia and Rheumatism. By its use I obtained almost immediate relief, and unhesitatingly recommend it to my friends.

MR. POOLAMEY GETS MARRIED.

Mr. Poolamey was married. Not having the exact change with him when the ceremony was solemnized, he told the minister that he would send it around by a friend.

A few days ago Mr. Poolamey, in some unaccountable manner, obtained a five dollar note, and enclosing it in an envelope, sent it to the minister by a tried and trusted friend.

On the way the friend stepped into a beer saloon. There he met several acquaintances, and told them where he was going.

"What! A fiver for a minister for making a man unhappy for life? Pshaw!" ejaculated McSweezy.

Heister thought so himself, and said that $4 ought to be enough. He spent $1 in treating.

This made the crowd think, and one of them suggested that $3 would be sufficient for ten minutes work.

Heister spent another dollar with the boys.

"Now, see here!" said McSweezy, "the ministers are making entirely too much money nowadays. I think two dollars ought to be enough for any man. They know the whole thing by heart, and all they have to do is to sling it out. It's moved and seconded that we send him two dollars. Carried."

Heister spent another dollar, and then said he really must go.

As he was about starting out a happy idea struck McSweezy. He had a counterfeit two dollar note, and suggested that that be sent to the minister. All hands agreed, and the good money was squandered in beer. Then the bad bill was duly mailed to the "owner of the gospel mill."

That night the minister's servant-girl was arrested for passing counterfeit money. Mr. Poolamey has also been arrested, and he will probably spend his honeymoon in jail.

SOMETHING ABOUT BRICKS.

In the antiquity of the brick as a building material, says the Builder, it is needless, nor is it indeed our intention, to insist. The great national collections of Europe, the British Museum foremost in the number, show us bricks, sun-dried and baked, from the ruins at Ninevah, and from the days of that city to the present moment bricks have never ceased to be an important instrument in the hands of the builder. That throughout Asia Minor they were largely employed we have seen, only very recently, proved in these columns, M. Bayet, in his work on Miletus, having shown that the far-famed palace of Crœsus was built of no more costly materials than honest bricks. What those bricks were, and their qualities, are even to this day appreciated by the natives, who for many centuries have plundered the ruins to build or to patch up their own even more ruinous houses. The use of bricks among the Romans, who largely employed them as building materials, as we see in the familiar instance of the Temple of Concord, has been more than once the subject of the inquiry of industrious antiquaries, for the Romans were not content with producing the flat, tile-like brick which is so often to be met with in the lower portions of antique structures scattered over the empire, and that are known in England, but their bricks were indelibly stamped with the mark of their maker, the names of the reigning consuls, and sometimes the year. From this source, then, more than one patient archæologist has gathered a rich store of information. But few inquirers have ventured far on the apparently arid and difficult road, which has hence remained little explored.

A NEW WAY TO PROPOSE MARRIAGE.

The tide is turning at last. A young man in Nelson county, Iowa, armed himself with a revolver and sallied out to shoot a young woman who had declined the offer of his hand. But she was up to snuff. She read the papers and had frequently seen accounts of similar affairs, quietly resolving that no discarded lover could make a victim of her, not if the court, or rather the courted, understood herself. When the young man arrived at the house on his deadly mission he found the fair but cruel one in the kitchen doing the week's ironing. She didn't appear to suspect and he expected to have an easy time preparing her for the Coroner; but when he reached around to the pistol pocket, with the remark that her time had come, she stated, "I guess not," and knocked him down with the flatiron, demolishing his nose and front teeth. Then she gave him the scalding contents of a tea kettle that was singing a cheerful air on the stove, and when the family came in she was mopping the floor with him. The next time he proposes and is refused he will probably conclude that that settles it.—Cincinnati Saturday Night.

I look upon indolence as a sort of suicide, for the man is efficiently destroyed though the appetite of the brute may survive.—Chesterfield.

My daughter was postrated with a terrible cough. All remedies failed, and we were discouraged; yet within one month after commencing the use of Faith Whitcomb's Balsam she is well. I will cheerfully answer all inquiries. B. A. CLARK.

Nantucket, March 8, 1881.

I have been very sick: I thought I would never get about again. My cough was very bad both day and night. I had but few moments rest until I commenced to use Faith Whitcomb's Balsam. As every thing else had failed, I tried that as a last resort. I have taken one small bottle and two-thirds of a large one, and my cough is nearly cured. I sleep all night, and midnight sweats have ceased. Mrs. CHAS. G. GARDNER.

HARVARD COMMUNITY OF SHAKERS, March 7, 1881.

The herbs of which Faith Whitcomb's Remedies are composed are gathered by the Harvard Community, and the public can depend upon their purity.

A NOVEL REVENGE.

The coffin was a plain one—a poor, miserable pine coffin. No flowers on the top; no lining of white satin for the pale brow; no smooth ribbons about the coarse shroud. The brown hair was laid decently back, but there was no crimped cap with neat tie beneath the chin. The sufferer of cruel poverty smiled in her sleep; she had found bread, rest and health.

"I want to see my mother," sobbed a poor little child, as the undertaker screwed down the top.

"You cannot; get out of the way, boy; why don't some one take the brat?"

"Only let me see her one minute," cried the helpless orphan, clutching the side of the charity box, as he gazed upon the coffin, agonized tears streaming down the cheeks on which no childish bloom ever lingered. O! it was painful to hear him cry the words, "Only once; let me see mother, only once."

Quickly and brutally the heartless monster struck the boy away, so that he reeled with the blow. For a moment the boy stood panting with grief and rage—his blue eyes distended, his lips sprang apart, fire glistened through his eyes as he raised his little arm with a most unchildish laugh, and screamed:

"When I'm a man, I'll be revenged for that!"

There was a coffin and a heap of earth between the mother and the poor forsaken child—a monument much stronger than granite built in the boy's heart the memory of the heartless deed. * * *

The court house was crowded to suffocation.

"Does any one appear as this man's counsel?" asked the Judge.

There was a silence when he had finished, until, with lips tightly pressed together, a look of strange intelligence blended with a haughty reserve upon his handsome features, a young man stepped forward with a firm tread and kindly eye to plead for the friendless one. He was a stranger, but at the first sentence there was silence. The splendor of his genius entranced—convinced.

The man who could not find a friend was acquitted.

"May God bless you, sir, I cannot," he exclaimed.

"I want no thanks," replied the stranger.

"I—I—I believe you are unknown to me."

"Sir, I will refresh your memory. Twenty years ago this day you struck a broken-hearted little boy away from his dead mother's coffin. I was that boy."

The man turned livid.

"Have you rescued me, then, to take my life?"

"No, I have a sweeter revenge. I have saved the life of a man whose brutal conduct has rankled in my breast for the last twenty years. Go, then, and remember the tears of a friendless child."

The man bowed his head in shame, and went from the presence of magnanimity, as grand to him as it was incomprehensible.

A GOOD BOY.

A Detroit grocer was the other day hungrily waiting for his clerk to return from dinner and give him a chance at his own noonday meal, when a boy came into the store with a basket in his hand and said:

"I seed a boy grab this 'ere basket from the door and run, and I run after him and made him give it up."

"My lad, you are an honest boy."

"Yes, sir."

"And you look like a good boy."

"Yes, sir."

"And good boys should always be encouraged. In a box in the back room there are eight dozen eggs. You may take them home to your mother and keep the basket."

The grocer had been saving those eggs for days and weeks to reward some one. In rewarding a good boy he also got eight dozen bad eggs carried out of the neighborhood free of cost, and he chuckled a little chuck as he walked homeward.

The afternoon waned, night came and went, and once more the grocer went to his dinner. When he returned he was picking his teeth and wearing a complacent smile. His eye caught a basket of eight dozen eggs as he entered the store, and he queried:

"Been buying some eggs?"

"Yes; got hold of those from a farmer's boy," replied the clerk.

"A lame boy with a blue cap on?"

"Yes."

"Two front teeth out?"

"Yes."

The grocer sat down and examined the eggs. The shells had been washed clean, but they were the same eggs that the good boy had lugged home the day before.—Detroit Free Press.

A SAD STORY FROM ROME.

A young man named Moretti, a tailor, was condemned to a short term of imprisonment for some alleged fraud in his dealings. A girl to whom he was betrothed went to the police magistrate to learn about his fate and prospects. The magistrate told her he would assuredly remain many years in prison. The girl, in despair, poisoned herself. Soon afterward Moretti is found to have been perfectly innocent, and is at once discharged. On learning the miserable end of his betrothed, he, too poisoned himself.

"I still live," and shall continue the business at my factory, which I built two or three years ago. The buildings advertised to be let, as recently occupied by me as Rendering Works, have never been used by me for that purpose since they were built, but merely as a store house during the remainder of my lease. SPECIAL TOWN MEETING.

A special town meeting was held at the Town Hall last Monday afternoon Mr. Amos Merrill was elected Moderator.

The second article of the warrant was to act upon the addition to the town By-laws, relating to truant children. This provided for confinement, discipline and instruction of habitually truant children, a place prepared by the School Committee of the town at the Alms House. On motion of Mr. F. E. Farnham it was adopted.

The third article, To see if the town would authorize the Water Committee to change the location of the pumping station, the size of the pumping engines and the height of the stand pipe, if such changes be necesary andexpedient.

Mr. Isaac Hardy called for the report of the committee stating reasons for asking permission.

Mr. R. H. Brown moved that the Committee be authorized to make such changes in the location of pumping station stand pipe and pumping engine, and such other changes as in their judgment they might think expedient.

Mr. Amos Merrill explained that at the annual town meeting it was voted to accept the report of the committee, which recommended having the pumping station at Allen's Lane. The committee now think it better to locate at the corner of Foster and Washington streets. That there would probably be no change in stand pipe, but a larger engine would be required.

Mr. Jonathan King said that in a matter of so much consequence the citizens ought to know what they are about and should know what the extra cost will be. That the citizens voted for a distinct purpose. That the committee had gone ahead with this change and now wanted the sanction of the town. That the town did not know what it wanted. That the people didn't understand what they were doing; that the town should postpone the whole subject; that we find a motion before the town to change the whole vote of the previous meeting, so that the committee could get something larger. He was not ready to vote till he knew more about the expense.

Mr. F. E. Farnham desired to correct the misapprehensions of Mr. King. He said he thought Mr. Merrill had gone too far when he said the committee wanted a change; that he should have said they had only taken steps looking to a change. The committee had not gone ahead, nor did they wish to exceed the appropriation. The committee had acted in good faith; that the committee were not extravagant and desire what was best and most economical for the town; there were no grounds for Mr. King's apprehensions; that the whole could be done and well done for the money, and hoped the town would have confidence enough in the committee to grant the request.

Mr. Jonathan King said that all the citizens ought to know what the expense was to be, and whether there is to be extra cost before giving their consent.

Mr Amos Merrill said that Mr. Farnham was correct; that the committee had not come before the town to ask for more money; that they had received bids for this job except some small items made necessary by the change. We know nearly what they will be, and believe the appropriation is sufficient to cover expenses. We can connect just as cheap at the proposed location as at the place first suggested.

All members are agreed to abide by the majority of the committee, and the committee will do what is for the best interest of the town. It would make no difference about the flow of water where the pumping station may be located.—The committee have decided not to change the height of the stand pipe, but a larger engine would be required, and he believed the margin would be large enough for this purpose.

Mr. Isaac Hardy said he would second the motion of Mr. Brown.

Mr. R. H. Brown said he was surprised to think there should be any movement to undo what had already been commenced. He thought it was understood that the town was to have high service; that this meeting was not called for an expenditure of money; that the committee did not feel authorized to change the location without the consent of the town, and that, if the committee, who were responsible citizens, decide it is better to change, the town should cheerfully give them permission.

Mr. Chas. B. Farley was a little surprised that they should ask any permission of the town, and that, for one, he was willing to give the committee all the latitude they desired.

Mr. Joseph Poor favored Mr. Brown's motion, except the last clause, "and such other changes as they deem expedient," which he thought might involve the town in legal difficulty if more money was spent than was appropriated.

Mr. Farley said the point might be covered, providing they did not exceed the appropriation.

Mr. Isaac Munroe moved to amend by adding, the committee to make such changes as are expedient, provided they do not exceed $85,000.

Mr. S. F. Blaney saw no necessity for the amendment, for the town has already a recorded vote which should be construed as governing in this matter. He endorsed the neutral attitude taken by the members of the committee. So far as they have gone, he was satisfied with their work; was confident that they had matters in such a shape that they will know that the cost shall not exceed the sum of $85,000. He felt assured that no further sum would be expended without an appropriation to cover it.—He hoped the original motion would stand.

Mr. Munroe said if everything was so safe, certainly his amendment could do no harm.

This amendment and article was adopted by almost a unanimous vote. The meeting was dissolved. There was close attention throughout and a large attendance.

MR. EDITOR, — Having noticed an invitation several times in your columns to all citizens to furnish you with information of public interest, I ask a space for this communication. I wish to warn our citizens of the danger they incur every time they ride in the Horse-cars of the Naumkeag Street Railroad. I give this warning, as that railroad is not financially responsible for damages that may occur to life or property through accident or carelessness of their drivers. To substantiate the above, a lady of this town, wife of one of our respected and hard-working citizens, was thrown from a car by the carelessness of one of its employes, and after being defeated by the decision of Judge Morton one of the best judges in the country, they tried to get clear of paying damages, by advancing charges of perjury against the claimant; being also defeated in that charge, they now publicly acknowledge they are not financially able to pay the paltry sum of one thousand dollars.

Citizens of Peabody, just think of a corporation which drapes its employes in blue uniforms and brass buttons, and charges double the cash fare of any other horse railroad in the state, public-admitting they cannot pay for any damage to life and property that may occur as above stated; surely, citizens, we cannot afford to have a bankrupt horse railroad endanger the lives of our families and the destruction of our property, can we?

JUSTICE.

The Water Committee surveyed another lot of land at the corner of Foster and Washington streets. This makes the fourth place which they have decided upon as available a the pumping station, and in each instance the lot selected has been considered as the place, and in one instance some of the committee went so far as to advance $200 to bind the bargain for the purchase of the lot, but as a better place was found, they are $200 out. If the town meeting next Monday grants them power to select the place they deem most proper, the business will probably soon be settled, as the bids are all in and the contract will be given to one or two parties whose bids are the lowest and very nearly alike. The committee think by judicial management they can carry out the work without over-running the appropriation, which was $85,000.—Peabody Cor. Lynn Item.

Who would think that the mad dog season was approaching?

The days are now six hours longer than they were last January.

A number of artists visited the neighborhood of Bartholomew's pond, South Peabody, last week, taking sketches of the pond and its beautiful surroundings.

Heylingberg, the barber, is contemplating putting in a patent, electric, double-decked, two-story, back-action cup case. It'll be a daisy.

As long as this drizzly and chilly weather prevails, there will be a demand for Foster's cough candy, obtainable at 244 Essex street. It is a benefaction.

A large number sat up to see the total eclipse of the moon last Sunday morning. Had it occurred twenty-four hours later, we know that some of the PRESS hands would have seen it.

The recent assault by boys upon Mr. Chas. Benjamin, the flag-man, has not affected his ear for music in the least. He is just as competent to play upon a harmonica or other musical instruments as ever.

In Brockton the school committee allow the teachers one day each term to close their schools and visit others in town or elsewhere, to pick up hints as to methods of teaching, management, discipline, etc. This is a good idea, and doubtless results in much direct practical benefit to the schools.

Miss Mary J. Floyd, for twelve years past the Librarian of the Eben Dale Sutton Reference Library of Peabody, has resigned to accept another position—one account says that of Town Missionery; and another, Collector of the Congregational Church.—Danvers Mirror.

Both correct, neighbor; she will ably fill both positions.

The chapel of the St. Peter's Episcopal Church Salem, last Wednesday evening, was the scene of a very pleasant wedding. The contracting parties were Mr. George C. Prescott of this town, and Miss Caroline, daughter of the late Captain John Phillips of Salem. The marriage ceremony was in accordance with the impressive and beautiful ritual of the Episcopal Church, and was performed by the Rev. Dr. Arey.

A total eclipse of the moon at an early hour on Sunday morning was an event which has not occurred in this part of the country since 1816. The moon entered the penumbra at 11.41 P. M. on Saturday night, and the shadow commenced to pass over it at 12.26 Sunday morning. At 1.27 the eclipse was complete, and lasted for one hour and twenty-two minutes, and many who remained up to see this rare sight were well rewarded for their loss of sleep.

The Sunday school at 10.15 A. M. Prayer meeting at 7 1-2 P. M.

We have received of Mr. T. J. Putnam, of the Congressional Library, at Washington, D.C., one of the last inauguration ball invitations. It is a very handsomely engraved invitation, and the design is very tasty; it has a portrait of both the President and Vice President. This invitation also includes the autographs of the President and Vice President, which Mr. Putnam has kindly procured.

In purchasing your revised edition of the New Testament, don't buy a cheap and inferior article. Mr. D. P. Grosvenor is agent for the Standard work published by the Henry Bill Publishing Co., of Norwich, Ct. It is set in large, clear type, and is printed on fine, heavy paper, and is very neatly bound. He has cheaper editions for Sabbath school children which are far ahead of the average.

To-night the ladies of the Baptist Society will give an entertainment, consisting of strawberries and cream, besides reading and singing. It is understood and agreed that the cream is not to be any of your corn starch preparations, and that more than half a dozen strawberries constitute a dish. Whatever any of our churches do, they do liberally, and anybody who does not step into the Baptist vestry and refresh himself, will regret it sorely.

The Committee on high service have contracted with George H. Norman of Boston, to do the entire work, furnishing pumps, stand pipe, etc. Mr. Norman's bid was quite low for the work to be done, and cut under other contractors considerably. The building for the pumping station will be contracted for in town, and as a change in pipe is likely, there may be some change in the amount of contract, which, on this account, is withheld for the present. It is expected that the pumping station will be commenced in a short time.

There seems to be another first-class "racket" on, with the Volunteer Engine Company. As near as your correspondent can learn, the Clerk of last year refuses to give up the books of the old company. The present company suspects that the accounts are not all right, and for that reason wishes to get possession of them. The case has been put into the hands of a lawyer, and interesting developments are anticipated. Charges are also brought against the Steward, for neglect of duty by leaving the engine uncleaned from the time of Harrington & Co.'s fire up to the time of the last monthly meeting—some three weeks. It was found that the machine would not draft water, and they were obliged to attach to a hydrant and force water into it. It was filled up with old hair and gravel.—Peabody Cor. Argus.

[In to-day's PRESS Mr. Bailey, the ex-Secretary of the company, speaks for himself, and we are informed that the correspondent is mistaken about the latter part of the above article.—ED.]

WEST PEABODY.—As Mr. and Mrs. French are soon to remove from this place, their friends met Wednesday evening, the 8th inst., and made them the recipients of a beautiful silver service. After the presentation, Mr. French made some very appropriate remarks of thanks to their friends for their generous kindness. As they were so much overcome by the surprise, and not feeling that their words of thanks were sufficient for the occasion, they went further to say that they wished and cherished to all their friends and the citizens generally, their most hearty thanks and best wishes.

Poet's Corner.

Retrospect.

We sometimes smile through a vale of tears,
Looking over the shady past;
For somehow we cling to the vanished years,
Holding so much in their mystical clasp.
There were friends—dear friends—and we loved them so,
That our life the while grew strangely sweet;
There were voices tender in the long ago,
Making our dream of bliss complete.

There were hopes that nestled like fair, white doves,
Filling the soul with divinest light;
There were songs that whispered of tenderest loves,
With never a thought of coming blight.
And there were hearths from whose altars arose
The incense sweet of holiest prayer;
And all a young heart ever knows
Of a mother's worshipful love and care.

There brothers and sisters knelt to pray
In the soft hush of the twilight deep,
Or chanted it may be some tender lay,
That still o'er the heart its vigil doth keep.
Oh! tenderly cherished be ever the spot
Where passed our childhood's happy days;
Oh! hallowed home, whether palace or cot,
From whose threshold we entered more perilous ways.

O Life! thy treasured memories we'll bear,
Like a chalice of odorous balm,
And all of the past that is holy and fair
Shall dwell in our hearts an echoing psalm.
So we smile, though it be thro' a mist of tears,
For we know in that morning to be
We shall take from the clasp of untold years
Our own, our loved, and forever be free.

Auf Wiedersehen.

IN MEMORY OF JAMES T. FIELDS.

Until we meet again! That is the meaning
Of the familiar words, that men repeat
At parting in the street.
Ah, yes, till then! but when death intervening
Rends us asunder, with what ceaseless pain
We wait for the Again!

The friends who leave us do not feel the sorrow
Of parting, as we feel it, who must stay
Lamenting, day by day,
And knowing, when we wake upon the morrow,
We shall not find in its accustomed place
The one beloved face.

It were a double grief, if the departed,
Being released from earth, should still retain
A sense of earthly pain;
It were a double grief, if the true-hearted,
Who loved us here, should on the future shore
Remember us no more.

Believing, in the midst of our afflictions,
That death is a beginning, not an end,
We cry to them, and send
Farewells, that better might be called predictions,
Being foreshadowings of the future, thrown
Into the vast Unknown.

Faith overleaps the confines of our reason,
And if by faith, as in old times was said,
Women received their dead
Raised up to life, then only for a season
Our partings are, nor shall we wait in vain
Until we meet again!

—H. W. Longfellow.

Selected Story.

A Story of Mirabeau.

The worst enemy of Mirabeau was his father; it was to him that his son was indebted for his abduction from Holland and his captivity at Vincennes; a truce was established between them, of which it was one of the conditions that Mirabeau should confine himself to the Province of Limousin; and, in pursuance of the agreement, he took up his residence at the chateau of his brother-in-law, the Comte du Saillant.

His arrival was an event for the whole neighborhood; the petty landholders of the vicinity, who had often heard of him from his brother-in-law as a man not less remarkable for his talents than for the vehemencies of his passions, hastened to look on a being respecting whom their curiosity had been so much excited; most of them were mere sporting gentlemen, who knew little besides the names of the dogs, and in whose houses no books were to be found, except an almanac, and, perhaps, a treatise on farriery.

It may be imagined what sort of a figure a man like Mirabeau would present—a man of education, genius and refinement—among these Nimrods, who, when compared with him, were yet of the lowest stage of civilization. To them he was like a meteor from the skies; his vast head, of which the apparent bulk was increased by an immense crop of thick, bushy hair; his strongly-marked features beaming with animation; his quick, dark eye, which keenly expressed his tumultuous passions; his mouth, whose rapid motions betrayed every emotion; his costume, genteel, but extravagant; all these made up a whole which amazed and confounded the rustics, among whom he wasted his days and hours, even when he was silent.

But when he spoke, and his sonorous voice expressed the energy of his imagination, they thought themselves in the presence of something better or worse than man; sometimes they were tempted to throw themselves at his feet, and at others to fly from his presence as from that of a demon.

The monotony of this existence soon became wearisome. To escape from it, he would often set out, with a gun and book, to make long excursions among the neighboring forests, from which he often returned very late. Night scenes delighted him and excited his vivid imagination.

At this time there was much talk in the vicinity of the chateau of highway robberies that had recently been committed. Several persons returning from market had been ordered to give up their purses, and all had obeyed, preferring the loss of their gold to the hazardous chances of resistance. No discoveries were yet made of the robbers; and there was nothing upon which the police could act for their detection.

One night a friend of the Count, arriving late from the fair, was observed to be rapt in a profound and unusual reverie, very different from his habitual manner, which was that of a jolly companion. He was almost a wag by profession; and this made his present silence and gravity more remarkable. The courage of this person was somewhat doubtful; but this did not prevent him from talking largely of his exploits.

The Count, anxious to know what it was that had caused such a change in his manner, took him to one side after supper, and begged to know what made him so grave and silent.

"No, no," he replied, "you would not believe me; perhaps we should quarrel about it."

"What, then," exclaimed the Count, "it is something in which I am myself concerned?"

"No, not exactly yourself, but—"

"A plague upon buts! What is it? Why will you tease me with these mysteries? Tell me what is the cause of your silence."

"No, no, it is nothing."

"My dear friend, I require it of your friendship to tell me."

"Well, then, since you will know, I have been robbed within half a league of the chateau."

"Robbed, and by whom?"

"Ah, that is what you must never know; indeed, it was dusk, and I am not certain myself."

"Whom do you suspect?"

"Excuse me; I cannot, I must not, declare that."

"I insist; were it my own son, I insist upon knowing."

"It was your brother-in-law."

"What, Mirabeau?"

"Yes, Mirabeau."

"Impossible; you mistake; yes, yes, you have certainly made a mistake."

"Perhaps so."

"Let us have no more of this nonsense; return to the supper-room and resume your usual spirits, or I shall think you mad."

"Agreed."

And they returned to their companions, as if nothing had happened.

The guests soon became gay and festive as usual, but the Count strove in vain to drive what he had heard from his thoughts. At length he again sought an interview with his friend, and, after much conversation, a plan was proposed and agreed upon; it was that the guest should say nothing of what had happened, but take his leave for a week and return to the chateau on the eighth day at the same hour at which he had been robbed. Their measures were taken accordingly.

On the eighth day, the hour appointed arrived, but the guest had not yet made his appearance; the Count was on thorns; Mirabeau, too, was absent. On a sudden the gate of the court-yard is opened, and the Count flies to meet his expected friend.

"Well," he exclaimed.

The other answered:

"I have been stopped again; it is he; there is no longer a doubt."

As before, he had been ordered to throw his purse on the ground by a man partly concealed behind a great tree; by the glare of the lightning he had distinguished the robber's features. After throwing down his purse, he had urged his horse forward to strike the robber down, but he, taking deliberate aim with his gun, exclaimed, "Pass on, or you are a dead man;" and the voice was that of Mirabeau.

Within the next half hour Mirabeau entered, his clothes dripping with rain; he went at once to his own apartment, ordered his supper to be brought up, sent word to his brother-in-law that he should not come down, and went to bed as soon as he had finished his meal.

When every one had retired, the Count repaired alone to the chamber of Mirabeau; he found him asleep, and that so soundly that he was obliged to make several efforts before he could arouse him.

"Well," he exclaimed, when he at last awakened, "what is the matter?"

"What is the matter! can you ask?" answered the Count; "I come to tell you that you are a wretch."

"Pleasant enough to wake a man from his sleep with such an agreeable compliment."

"Robber! you have robbed my friend on the highway, and that, more than once; he has recognized you."

"And could you not tell me all this in the morning? Suppose I have robbed him, what then?"

"What then! It follows that you are a felon, a wretch."

"You are a fool, my dear brother-in-law; do you suppose it was for the money I stopped that half-witted boor? I wanted to try his nerves and my own; I wanted to know from experiment how much resolution was requisite to enable a man to place himself in direct collision with the most sacred laws of society. The experiment was a hazardous one, but I have made it, and I am content with myself; but your friend is a coward. Here, take this key, open my bureau, and bring me the second drawer on the right."

The Count obeyed. In the drawer, wrapped in distinct papers, were nine purses, some of silk and others of leather; upon each envelope was a date and the sum of its contents.

"You see," continued Mirabeau, "that it was not for gold that I took up this trade. It requires courage, my friend, to rob on the highway; more than a soldier needs, who fights in the midst of his fellows. But you cannot comprehend me or my motives. Adieu! To-morrow I shall return to Paris; and now, my good brother-in-law, let me finish my sleep."

Anecdotes.

A Wrecked Existence.

HOW THE SNOW HAS DRIFTED ABOUT THE HEART OF A BOSTON GIRL.

"The snow has drifted around my heart," sighed a fair young Boston girl, as she and her Brooklyn hostess sat on the floor, lacing their boots, the other morning. "No longer do the spring violets bloom in my life."

"May I inquire what has chagrined you?" asked the Brooklyn girl, sympathetically.

"I will tell you all. You shall know why existence is henceforth a burnt prairie to me. He loved me. Ah! the dream has flown. The grasses are bending over the grave of that bright hope."

"Did he leave you?" invoked the Brooklyn damsel, in tears.

"Not voluntarily. We were segregated, but through no fault of ours. It was the dispelling of a vision."

"But won't he come back?"

"I fear me nay. Such a differentiation is not to be overcome. I will tell you. We loved. The moon couldn't beam but he'd hitch up a team and drive into my outstretched arms."

"My!" ejaculated the Brooklyn girl."

"Always. He came, until I looked for him as the stars. Every night until one. Then he came no more to my brown-stone mansion door, no more. And my heart is sad and weary. Listen. I have a father. Pitiless, cold, but still he is my father, though he has frozen up my young heart. I assure you, it is really all icebergs."

"Did he say the young man mustn't come any more?" asked the breathless listener.

"He did not. He welcomed him like the whirlpool's rings that swallows up all sorts of things. Gave him cigars and talked to him. Pa was too awfully sweet at first, and that's what makes me sit sad and sighing, and feel as though I'm surely dying."

"Then how did he come to go away and leave you?"

"You shall hear how the disintegration originated. All the time Pa was treating him so nicely he didn't like him. He was making up his mind to have him leave. Oh! the saddest word of tongue or pen is the terribleness of these bad men. Pa separated us. Like the pouring of the vengeful sea, he separated my own and me."

"How did he do it? What steps did he take?"

"Give me your attention. You shall hear the facts from the protoplasm to the finis. I will tell you of my awful doom right here in your cheerful little bedroom. I wanted an Easter hat. I said so to Pa. Must have it. Was coming to see you, you know. Says Pa, 'Give up the lover or the hat—can't have both.'"

"And you?"

"Gave him up, of course. How could I help it? The hat is lovely, but my heart is stone; I move alone without any comfort. It was hard to wreck him, but there was no alternative. Pa made me choose. Don't you think it pretty?"

And the two girls went down to breakfast, the forlorn girl singing in a low, sweet voice, "The good sword is rusted, the good knight is busted."

Showing in Arkansas.

Billy Arlington, the lecturer, now in this State, has had considerable trouble with the mayors of small towns. Arlington's opinion is that he should not be compelled to pay heavily for a light privilege, but the mayors think that he should. Several days ago he visited a town whose entire population could be grouped into a photographer's tent, and when he called upon the mayor to settle the matter of a license he found that man disposed to charge him as heavily as though he had come to take away all the money in the town.

"What sort of a show have you got?" asked the mayor.

"It's no show. It's a lecture."

"Is it trained?"

"It's a speech."

"Ah, I thought it was some sort of educated hog. What sort of a speech?"

"It's not altogether a speech. It is interspersed with entertainment."

"Our law says charge right and left for them sort of things. Entertainments, let's see. Got a lot of these here paper lanterns, haven't you?"

"No, nothing of that kind."

"Don't stand on your head, I reckon?"

"No."

"Do you ring bells?"

"No."

"One of these dumb shows, ain't it?"

"No, sir; I tell you it's a humorous lecture."

"Sort of patent medicine arrangement?"

"No medicine."

"Do you sharpen knives?"

"Nothing of that kind."

"I reckon then you sell some sort of ointment. A fellow came along here some time ago; got us all in a house an' wanted to sell us rheumatiz medicine."

"If Henry Ward Beecher were to come here, you wouldn't charge him, would you?"

"You bet we would, and we'd put it on him an inch thick. Well, give me $10, and you may sell your rat pizen or make your speech."

The money was paid, and at night, just before the lecture began, an officer approached Arlington, and said:

"Say, Cap, you can't beat an enlightened community in this way. Pay your license or I'll hop you over to jail."

"I paid $10 for the privilege of lecturing, sir."

"Who got the money?"

"The mayor."

"Why, the mayor's gone fishing. Did you pay it to that chap you were talking to this afternoon—that red-nosed fellar?"

"Yes."

"Well, he's got no more to do about running this town than you have. Give me $25 or I'll jump you to jail."

Counting a deaf man and the hotel keeper, who had come in free, the sale of seats amounted to $4.60. The money was paid, and in the future the man who sticks up Billy Arlington's name in that town will be sued for forgery.

Miscellaneous.

THE SACK TRICK.—Because a thing appears to be impossible, it does not follow that the accomplishment of it is supernatural. For instance, what can be more marvelous than the sack and box trick that conjurers sometimes perform? A man is put in a sack, the neck of which is securely tied up with a strink, and the knots carefully sealed. The sack is then placed in a box which stands on a platform above the stage; the box is locked and numerous seals are placed on the cracks where the box closes. How utterly incredible it seems that a man can free himself—that is to say, until one knows how it is done. The first idea which will occur to an inquirer is that the prisoner drops through a trap door and is released below. This, however, is impractable, for a trap in the platform and another in the box could scarcely be made so neatly as to avoid detection; and besides, visitors are invited to place strings, sticks, etc., below the platform, any disturbance in the positions of which could be detected. But how is it done? Very simply, indeed, darkness being secured. The sack is made of an elastic, fibrous stuff, through which the captive can easily make his escape without disturbing the neck; and the hole through which he has escaped close behind him, in consequence of the elasticity of the material. He is now free in a sealed box; and what does he do next? The top of the box is so constructed that when a spring is touched it turns easily upon a rod inserted longitudinally through the top. There is, in fact, a false top, some inches above the apparent top, where the locks and seals are. They remain intact while the false top is swinging loosely. A second touch of the spring, when the captive has slipped out, securely fastens the false top. The lights are turned on, spectators are summoned to look at the seals, which have not, of course, been touched; the seals are not broken, the box unlocked, and there in the box the empty sack, while to the amazement of all present, who do not know the secret, the man who was so firmly entrapped steps forward upon the stage.

THE LORD'S PRAYER.

The following composition was found in Charleston, S. C., during the war. It is printed on very heavy satin and is quite a literary curiosity:

Thou to the mercy-seat our soul doth gather,
To do our duty unto thee——Our Father,

To whom all praise, all honor should be given,
For thou art the great God——who art in Heaven.

Thou, by thy wisdom, rul'st the world's whole frame;
Forever, therefore ——hallowed be thy name;

Let never more delays divide us from
Thy glorious grace, but let——thy kingdom come;

Let thy commands opposed be by none,
But thy good pleasure and——thy will be done;

And let our promptness to obey, be even
The very same——in earth as 'tis in Heaven.

Then for our souls, O Lord, we also pray,
Thou wouldst be pleased to——give us this day.

The food of life, wherewith our souls are fed,
Sufficient raiment and——our daily bread;

With every needful thing do thou to relieve us,
And of thy mercy pity——and forgive us.

And our misdeeds, for Him whom thou didst please
To make an offering, for——our trespasses,

And forasmuch, O Lord, as we believe
That thou will pardon us——as we forgive,

Let that love teach, wherewith thou dost acquain us,
And though, sometimes, thou find'st we have forgot
This love for thee, yet help——and lead us not

Through soul or body's want, to desperation,
Nor let earth's gain drive us——into temptation;

Let not the soul of any true believer
Fall in time of trial,——but deliver,

Yea, save them from the malice of the devil,
And both in life and death, keep——us from evil.

Thus pray we, Lord, for that of thee from whom
This may be had,——for thine is the kingdom.

This world is of thy work its wond'rous story,
To thee belongs——the power and the glory;

And all thy wond'rous works have ended never,
But will remain forever, and——forever.

Thus we poor creatures would confess again,
And thus would say eternally——Amen.

Hot weather takes all the romance out of youth. Perspiration doesn't rhyme with love worth a cent.

It is said we spend more for tobacco than bread. This seems a little hard to believe, when every one seems to depend on his friends for the former.

The idea of the biggest head knowing the most is all nonsense. The mastodon had the biggest head of his time; yet he didn't know enough to get into the ark out of the rain and be saved. The mosquito, with scarcely any head at all, was wiser.

With great pleasure we can recommend, as a radical cure for rheumatism, St. Jacobs Oil. This wonderful remedy has been extensively used by a large number of people who daily testify to its marvelous effects.—Gouverneur (N. Y.) Herald.

A little girl of twelve, the daughter of a Hoboken clergyman, was asked, "Sadie, does your father ever preach the same sermon twice?" After thinking a moment, Sadie replied: "Yes, I think he does; but I think he hollors in different places."

A New England pastor called upon one of his deacons, with whom he was at variance, and, with an air of great solemnity, said: "Brother, it is a shame that this quarrel of ours should bring scandal upon the church. I have prayed earnestly for guidance in the matter; and have come to the conclusion that you must give in, for I cannot."

"Johnny, you don't know how proud I was to have you at the head of your class; and now you have fallen back ever so far." "You are to blame for it, ma." "How so, Johnny?" "The Bible says, 'Pride goes before a fall.' Your pride went before my fall. Besides, it is some other boy's mother's turn to feel stuck up."

Teacher: "Now, Mary, my dear, suppose I were to shoot at a tree with five birds on it, and killed three, how many would be left?" Mary: "Three, ma'am." Teacher: "No, two would be left." Mary: "No, they wouldn't though. The three shot would be left and the other two would be flied away."

A PROMINENT LAWYER'S OPINION.—In one of our New England exchanges we observe that W. T. Filley, Esq., of Pittsfield, Attorney-at-Law and Asst. Judge Police Court, and late County Commissioner, was restored to perfect health and activity by the use of St. Jacob's Oil. He had suffered with rheumatism for years intensely; but by the recent use of the remedy he was, as stated, completely cured, and says the Oil deserves the highest praise.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

There is a sharp trader developing among the Oldtown boys. A growing boy the other day sold a companion two pairs of brown pigeons as "dun tumblers." Strolling leisurely about a shipyard, says an English paper, one day recently, we observed a regular hard-weather sailor-looking tar from a man-of-war, who, in turn, was watching two men dragging a seven-foot cross-cut saw through a huge live-oak log. The saw was dull, the log very tough, and they went—see-saw, see-saw, pull, push, push, pull. Jack studied the matter over awhile, until he came to the conclusion that they were pulling to see who would get the saw, and as one was a monstrous big chap, while the other was a little fellow, Jack decided to see fair play; so giving the big one a clip under the ear that capsized him end over end, he jerked the saw out of the log, and giving it to the small one sung out, "Now run, you beggar!"

CUTTING IT SHORT.

The nationally gratifying fact that Edwin Booth made so palpable a hit in London in Shylock, calls to mind a little story told by our leading star to the writer one Sunday during his last visit here, while taking a look at the Golden Gate from the lantern of the Point Bonita light-house.

"Once, during the days of my early struggles in the profession," said Booth, "and while we were barn-storming down in Virginia, an odd thing happened, which illustrates the shifts to which the 'poor player' was then put in order to get along. We were playing—'showing,' they called it then—one night at a little place named Lee's Landing, and the tobacco warehouse we had improvised into a theatre was crowded by the planters for miles around. We had arranged to take the weekly steamer that we expected would touch there late that night, and between the acts were all busy packing up. The play was 'The Merchant of Venice,' and we were just going on for the court scene, where the Jew insists on his pound of flesh, when we heard a whistle blow, and the manager came running in to say that the steamer had arrived ahead of time and would leave again in ten minutes.

"As that was our only chance of getting down to the Chesapeake for a week we were naturally in a terrible quandary. 'If we stop right here and explain,' said the manager, 'the audience will think they are being cheated, and go in for a free fight. The only thing we can do is for you fellows to get up some sort of a natural-like, impromptu ending for the piece, and ring down the drop. Go right ahead, ladies and gentlemen, and take your cue from Ned, here,' and he hurried away to get the luggage on board.

"If it had been in any other quarter of the country I wouldn't have had the assurance to do as he said, but the ignorance of the 'clay eaters,' or ordinary Virginians of those days, was something marvelous, so when old George Ruggles, who was doing Shylock, got to where he sharpens his knife on his shoe, I walked solemnly up to him and said:

"You're bound to have the flesh, are you?"

"You bet your life,' said George, under the impression that he was improvising very skillfully indeed.

"'Now, I'll make you one more dicker,' I continued. 'In addition to this bag of ducats, I'll throw in two kegs of niggerhead terback, a shotgun and a couple of the best coon dogs in the State.'

"'I'm blamed if I don't do it,' said Shylock, much to the approbation of the audience, who were tobacco raisers and coon hunters from the ground up.

"'And to show that there is no hard feeling,' said Portia, tucking up her legal gown, 'we'll wind up with a Virginny reel.'

"And as the prompter struck up 'Money Musk' on his fiddle, we danced a couple of figures, and made a break for the boat as the curtain fell, amid thunders of applause.

"When we got on board, the steamer's captain, who had witnessed the conclusion of the play with great delight, tendered the troupe the compliment of a hot supper, and remarked, as we sat down to what was a rare treat in those 'palmy days of the drama:'

"'I'd like to see the whole of that play sometime, gentlemen. I'm blamed if I thought that fellow Shakespeare had so much snap to him.'"—San Francisco Post.

THE FIRST CASTING OF IRON.

Cast iron was not in commercial use before the year 1700, when Abraham Darby, an intelligent mechanic, who had brought some Dutch workmen to establish a brass foundry at Bristol, Eng., conceived the idea that iron might be substituted for brass. This his workmen did not succeed in effecting, being probably too much prejudiced in favor of the metal with which they were best acquainted. A Welsh shepherd-boy named John Thomas had, some little time previous to this, been received by Abraham Darby into his workshop on the recommendation of a distant relative. While looking on during the experiments of the Dutch workman, he said to Abraham Darby that he thought he saw where they had missed it. He begged to be allowed to try; so he and Abraham Darby remained alone in the workshop all night struggling with the refractory metal and imperfect molds. The hours passed on and daylight appeared, but neither would leave his task; and just as morning dawned they succeeded in casting an iron pot complete. The boy entered into an agreement with Abraham Darby to serve him and keep the secret. He was enticed by the offer of double wages to leave his master, but he continued faithful; and from 1709 to 1822 the family of Thomas were confidential and much-valued agents to the descendants of Abraham Darby. For more than one hundred years after the night in which Thomas and his master succeeded in making an iron casting in a mold of fine sand contained in frames and with air-holes the same process was practiced and kept secret at Colebrook Dale with plugged keyholes and barred doors.

Do not say, "I will help thee to-morrow." Perchance that poor soul may not need thee to-morrow; perchance thou mayest have nothing to give to-morrow; perchance there may be no such day as to-morrow.

Consolation indiscreetly pressed upon us when we are sufficiently under affliction, only serves to increase our pain and to render our grief more poignant.

TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.
Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,
Universalist Pastor.

For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.
Peabody, Mass, June 27, 1879.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,
Of Beverly, Mass.

I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, CATARRH, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him; his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.
Beverly, Mass, Oct'r 29, 1879.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,
Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence, Ms.

My dear Dr. Lighthill,—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the larynx into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted, I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.
Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.
Lawrence, Nov. 4, 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,
Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.

The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celbrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.

I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.

I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.
R. S. LAMBERT.
Boston, Nov. 26, 1880.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.
From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,
Piano Manufacturer, 185 Washington St., Boston

Dr. Lighthill,—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.
I have the honor to be very truly yours,
A. M. McPHAIL, JR.

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.
From Mrs. M. A. Emery.

Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends, and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,
Mrs. M. A. EMERY,
359 Lowell Street,
Lawrence, Sept. 21, 1880.

HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES.
A REMARKABLE CURE.
From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.

Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man. G. H. ROBINSON,
Methuen, Nov. 1st, 1880.

Please Remember—Dr. LIGHTHILL'S Office is at 115 Boylston Street, Boston.

Party Commotion.

The period of commotion, sensation and disorder through which the Republican party has been passing since the inauguration of the present administration, has been, it must be admitted, an unfortunate one, and has led to many despairing reflections and to prognostications of ultimate party disruptions and defeat. We do not share in any such fears. While we regret the commotion, we cannot anticipate a permanent lack of harmony. An unfortunate, inharmonious element, the product of intense and high placed personality has afflicted other administrations, and notably the one immediately preceding the present, and has been steadily working its way to the front. This is a wild unharnessed element, coming in contact with official power, demanding the subordination of the latter, to an imperious individual service. That element had, unavoidably, to be met sooner or later, either to try titles with it, or to submit to it. The latter was positively inadmissible. Executive prerogatives must be either maintained or overthrown. It is well that the issue should be raised now, and confronted, rather than to remain a harassing disturber of party peace and force.

We do not claim that the administration has exhibited perfection in method and action in all things, in its new and untried pathway, with an element of imperious force unexpectedly hurled upon it, but we do claim that it has acted with intelligent, sagacious, prompt, effective vigor that cannot fail to command respect and confidence, and that will finaly place the party that put it in power on the high plane of usefulness and positive success. We are now in the early days of the administration, its inauguration scarcely completed, and the obstacles and abasions that meet it on the threshold, must be met and cleared away; and all this will be done without fatality to the administration or the party. In the years that are to follow, the principles and doctrines, purposes and recommendations of the inaugural address will be sustained and accomplished; imperious, personal self-assertion will have lost its disturbing power, the party will have been saved from disruption and damaging disaster, and the country will be benifitted and kept on the high plane of prosperity that existed at the inauguration of the administration. Backed by a right purpose, pluck always wins, where selfish, personal assumption palls, falters and fails.

The Democrats cheer with an empty delusion in claiming that the Republican party is going to pieces. On the contrary it will come out of the present ordeal purified and strengthened, prepared to rule the country with wisdom and beneficence, for another twenty years lease of power.

Let no Republican be discouraged, or fear, or lose heart. The political skies of the future will bend brightly over us. Individuals, and even high and influential officials who have had their day of conspicuity and power will subside, and drop out of view, but the party will live, and the Government, in its Republican control, will ever be as a bulwark of salvation for the country.

Do our law-abiding citizens fully appreciate the importance of the meeting called for next Monday evening? The praiseworthy action of the Selectmen in regard to License has sharply defined the issue between the forces of good and evil in this community. Inaction at the crisis means submission to even a worse condition of affairs than heretofore. For yourselves and for your children, reader, which party will you support?

IT IS REPORTED

That the amateur assistant of the Salem News says the PRESS is jealous.

That there is nothing in their "penny handbill" that would move the jealousy of anybody but an idiot.

That the storm last week was a cold and disagreeable one.

That our office was kept warm by the steam pipes.

That we were glad we did not have to depend on a stove, stored at a tin shop.

That our steady going old friend and neighbor, the Lynn Transcript, has been sued for libel.

That it takes a wise man to successfully run a newspaper.

That any fool can sue for libel.

That Gov. Long will succeed himself.

That if B. F. B. runs against him the campaign will be an exciting one, but will result just the same.

That some of the rumsellers say they will sell without a license.

That if they try it on, the Selectmen will make it as warm for them as the place not mentioned in the revised edition of the New Testament.

That the Salem News wants a "fast female" for a compositor.

That we will probably have a good deal of lightning the coming season.

That the person who has a policy in his pocket from the insurance office of O. B. Chadwick & Co., feels better than the one who neglects a precaution so necessary.

The school for deafmutes, situated on Elliott street, has made arrangements for holding a fair and Exhibition at the Beverly Town Hall on the 28th and 29th of this month. This school is doing a good work in educating a class of persons who, without an education, are completely isolated from the rest of the world, and almost helpless as far as earning a living and supporting themselves is concerned. The good results of an education are more visible in deafmutes than in any other class of people; from utter mental darkness, they gradually emerge into the light of knowledge, learning enough to express their wants and ideas in written language and to master a trade, whereby they are rendered self-supporting, intelligent members of society. From a position of helpless dependence upon their friends or the public, they are put into a position to raise families, and to contribute to the general wealth and knowledge. Within the past year the above named school has given the benefits of an education to about twenty deaf and dumb children from adjoining towns, and the number of applicants is increasing, but for want of proper accommodations, many have to wait for admission. It is for this purpose that those in charge of the school appeal to the Public in their coming fair and exhibition, to lend a helping hand to an object worthy of their highest commendations. The tickets and programmes of the fair and exhibition are out, and if their authorized agent, Mr. Samuel Hamilton, comes to sell them, let every one who is kindly disposed, buy one or more. The public will find many good things for sale on the tables, and the exhibition of the pupils will prove of more than ordinary interest. The fair will be open both afternoon and evening. The prices of tickets are put very low, single tickets, 15 cents, season tickets, 25 cents. Any donations in money or articles for the fair will be gladly accepted. It is to be hoped that many of our readers, who are liberally disposed, will contribute something or other to so worthy an object.

All articles intended for the fair should be sent to the school on Elliot street, Ryall's side, or to the Town Hall on the first day. Address by mail to Wm. B. Swett, Supt. School for Deafmutes, Beverly, Mass.

Union Post 50, G. A. R., will leave the square at 6 o'clock sharp, to-morrow evening, to visit Rev. V. M. Simons, of Woburn. They will be conveyed in Quint's barges. It has been arranged to have Post 33 of Woburn, meet them about a mile out, and do escort duty.

Let those who believe in law and order be as united and as liberal as those who openly defy both, and the humiliation of having insult added to injury by rum traffickers may be spared them in the future.

Dr. S. F. Worcester, the better to accommodate his large practice, has removed his office to the basement of his house, and an entrance has been made on the side next the post-office. This gives the Doctor a very pleasant office, besides a large waiting room.

The School Committee will give a little more time for the bids on painting the school houses. It has been extended to the 30th.

"OUR MEETING."

There is an expression peculiar to New England, which may be the outgrowth of stern Puritan customs, or one of the many habits which leads visitors to denounce the people of New England as cold and selfish.

The words are simple enough to appear harmless, and yet they cover a mine of selfishness which should be rooted out and exploded in any community where the teachings of the gospel are enjoyed. For instance—a peculiar case of distress is brought to you, and you at once seek assistance from friends and acquaintances some meet you grandly with full hands and warm hearts, but more ask quickly "Do they go to our meeting?"

It is almost painful to witness the calm indifference if you are forced to answer "No," it is pitiful to think of the narrowness which underlies, "Well if they go to such a church, let them look after them." The walls of the Great King's castle are neither high or narrow, there is room for all within and his followers have missed his best and broadest teachings if one communion table receives all his guests. Some of the church members who constantly use this expression seem quite unconscious of selfishness and more who do not utter it express it by their deeds. With all due allowance for the good fellowship which arises from constant association in church organizations, we submit, that sin, sorrow, need, sickness, affliction, are the tests of true faith and he who passes one by because he or she does not belong to the particular sect which they prefer, must find little in his religion to lift himself up or benefit his fellowmen.

"Our meeting" permeates all classes and narrows all, it touches men in their business relations and women in their homes, it enters the thoughts of the child, and limits young men and young women. It is not confined to any particular locality or neighborhood but poisons all the sweet spring of charity or love. It is a bit of the concrete Christianity we have so often alluded to, and it hardens not only individuals but entire families.

Let us see how it operates in one case. In a town not quite a hundred miles from Boston there is a widow, a confirmed invalid; she seldom leaves her room, and spends many lonely hours; near her dwells another family less afflicted and the latter in one short week received numberless calls and kindly offerings, while the invalid who thought "a visitor from the great world outside the best medicine she could have" was passed by.

"I am sorry you did not call upon her" said a friend it is a pity that any one should be so neglected in a Christian community" and quick the question came, "Does she go to our meeting," our emphatic "No" was answered with—"Well it is all I can do to call on our own church folks, without looking up outsiders.

Bye and bye when the tired heart ceases to beat and the All-Merciful has given her rest from troubles who will count the "outsiders." K. T. W.

People who write for the press, as a rule, appear to have such a fogy idea of the kind of matter wanted by a newspaper for general reading, that partly for their benefit and partly in self defense, we offer a few suggestions in regard to what is most acceptable at this office, at least. To begin with, and first of all, we want news from every town in the neighborhood, at any rate. Everything that happens of interest in your vicinity up to the latest possible moment, just get facts and send them in as few words as possible: no matter about the grammar or the spelling, or the punctuation, or the phraseology, we will fix that to suit ourselves. A dozen items of from one to five or six lines are worth more than so many letters of a column each in length.

Next to news we want communications on subjects of general interest today. Make them short and to the point. Use temperate language, and give your own name with the full assurance that it will remain a secret with the editor if you so wish it: and you may be sure of the publication of your article, whether its sentiments accord with our own or not. But don't write long articles with nothing in them, on subjects of limited interest. Don't theorize. We haven't the space, nor our readers the time to waste. Don't write sketches or stories. Our scissors will furnish better matter with much less work, and our thumbs are calloused by using them till it don't hurt them. And above all things don't write poetry. Poetry to the average quillest is a delusion and a snare, and a thorn in the side of a long suffering public. We have a machine in our office which will grind out poetry by the ream, superior to the contributions which overflow our waste basket. For your own sake and for ours, don't write it; or if you must write, send it to the dailies or burn it, either way will insure its oblivion, and be a source of satisfaction to you in after life. We throw out these hints in the hope that they will do somebody some good; at any rate, it eases our own conscience of a duty we owe to the whole tribe of newspaper writers, and if they don't profit by it it isn't our fault.

THE SAME OLD ROUND.—"Could I see the editor?" she asked, looking around for him and wondering what was going on under his table.

"Eh! yes, I'm him," responded the editor, evolving himself and slipping a cork into his vest pocket. "What can I do for you?"

"I am a student at Parker Institute," responded the blushing damsel, "and I have written a little article on 'Our School Days,' which I would like to have published in the Brooklyn Eagle, if you think it good enough."

"Certainly," replied the editor, gazing in unconscious admiration upon the beautiful face before him. "Does it commence, 'Our school days! how the words linger in sweet cadences on the strings of memory!' Is that the way it runs?"

"Why, yes," responded the beaming girl.

"Then it goes on, 'How we look forward from them to the time when we shall look back to them!'"

"How did you know?"

"Never mind," said the editor, with the engaging smile which has endeared him to the citizens of Brooklyn. "After that comes, 'So sunshiny! So gilded with the pleasures that make youth happy, they have flown to the immutable past and come to us in after life only as echoes in the caves of sweet recollection.' Isn't that it?"

"It certainly is," answered the astonished girl, radiant with delight.—"How could you know what I had written?"

"Then it changes from the pianissimo and becomes more tender. 'The shadows gather around our path. The roses of friendship are withering, but may we not hope that they will bloom again as we remember the affection that bound us here and made—'"

"No; you're wrong there," and the soft eyes looked disappointed.

"Is it 'Hope on, hope ever?" asked the editor.

"That comes in further on. You had it nearly right. It is 'The dun shadows close around us. The flowers of friendship are sleeping, but not withered, and will bloom again in the affectionate remembrance of the chains that bound us so lightly.'"

"Strange that I should have made that mistake," said the editor, musingly. "I never missed on one before.—From there it goes on, 'Schoolmates, let us live so that all our days shall be as radiant as those we have known here, and may we pluck happiness from every bush, forgetting never that the thorns are below the roses, and pitying those whose hands are soiled with the march through life.'"

"That's it!" exclaimed the delighted girl. "And then comes 'Hope on, hope ever.'"

"Sure's you're born!" cried the editor, blushing with pleasure, and once more on the right track. "Then it runs: "And as for you, teachers dear!'"

"Yes, yes, you're right," giggled the girl. "I can't see how you found me out! Would you like to print it?" and her face assumed an anxious shade.

"Certainly," responded the editor. "I'll say it's by the most promising young lady in Brooklyn, the daughter of an esteemed citizen, and a lady who has already taken a high social rank."

"That finishes the school commencements at one swoop," sighed the editor, gloomily, as the fair vision floated out. "Can't see how I made that blunder about the shadows and roses and friendship. Either I'm getting old or some of those girls have struck out something original. Here, Swipes, tell the foreman to put this slush in the next tax sales supplement," and the editor felt in his hair for the cork, and wondered what had happened to his memory.

Now that good weather has come, Ward's hothouses present a beautiful spectacle. He is selling rare bargains.

TEMPERANCE RALLY.

At the Vestry of the Cong. Church, on Monday, June 20, at 8 o'clock P. M.

The object of this meeting is one which will commend itself to all good citizens. It is to take action in support of the Selectmen in their efforts to regulate the licensed sale, and to suppress the unlicensed sale, of liquors in the town. The present time is a most favorable one for showing the Selectmen that their action in refusing indiscriminate licenses is not in advance of the temperance sentiment of all law-abiding citizens. Let us have a FULL ATTENDANCE, and give them a hearty and prompt support.

The ladies are invited.

Mr. F. P. Bailey desires to say that he did not refuse to give up the books to the new Secretary of the Volunteer engine company, and that if he had come after them, instead of staying in a rum-shop and sending a boy after the books, they would be given to him. The boy said that Mr. Frank Warner would "kick the 'stuffing' out of me," if I did not give them up. Tell him to kick.

Our Water Board were full of business Friday. Last winter they connected Spring Pond with the "Fountain." Owing to the recent rain the flow has been so great that the Fountain will not hold it, although the flash boards have been partly taken down. The meeting held on Monday evening to consider the aspects of the temperance question, was quite enthusiastic and it was decided to raise a fund of one thousand dollars or more to carry on the temperance work in this community, quite a portion of which was pledged on the spot. After the appointment of a committee to confer with the selectmen, and assure them of the hearty support of the leading citizens of the town, both morally and financially in any measure they may take in support of law and order, the meeting was adjourned to meet Monday evening June 20, in the vestry of the South Cong. church.

The West Peabody Farmers' Club will meet in the afternoon of the 17th of June, at the farm of Mr. Bowman Viles, and enjoy a basket picnic. It is not confined to the members of the club exclusively, for the invitation is extended to all good citizens to join by bringing their baskets of lunch, which will be spread in common on the table. Rev. Mr. Spaulding is to be orator of the day. Some young men in the vicinity have expressed a desire to shoot glass ball on the occasion, and join with the dinner party. The toast-master will endeavor to call out some of the eloquent talent expected to be present, and the Brass Band, which has been engaged for the occasion, will no doubt "blow" well. Mr. Viles and family are arranging to entertain all the ladies and children that can be present, so that none will have occasion for staying away. If stormy the same programme will be carried out the next day.

Miscellaneous.

MRS. CARLYLE.

She was a helpmate to Carlyle in every way, shared his studies, entered into his literary ambitions, and often wrote his manuscripts. Her calligraphy was good; it was a clear hand; I always found it easy to read, and whether she recorded trivial matters or serious ones she always managed to make herself deeply interesting. Her very sudden death threw a deep gloom over the hearts of her old friends in Haddington, her native town; and it was to the house of one of those that her remains were brought from London and kept for a night till the funeral took place.

The epitaph on her gravestone is in every respect a true one. Some years after her death, her husband made a journey to Haddington that he might revisit her tomb, and when every one was wrapped in sleep he came and walked round the old house where his wife was born, and which had been so dear to her own loving heart.

Mrs. Carlyle's sudden death had something singularly pathetic about it. A friend who had occasion to leave London for some time confided to Mrs. Carlyle her pet dog. Driving one day in Hyde Park about four o'clock, she was greatly alarmed to see the little creature, which had been following alongside the brougham, run over by a carriage. It was lifted in beside her, little the worse for the accident, and the driver again moved on. The latter, however, receiving no call or directions from his mistress, as was usual, stopped to discover the reason, and was alarmed to find Mrs. Carlyle, as he thought, in a fit. He drove at once to St. George's Hospital, when it was discovered that she had been dead for some time. Her last act had been an impulse of tenderness toward a dumb animal.

This sad event took place on 21st April, 1866, while Mr. Carlyle was in Scotland, whither he had gone to deliver his rectorial address to the Edinburgh students. He returned immediately to London after the receipt of the dreadful news, and we can picture to ourselves the wild desolation of her husband's stricken spirit as he looked upon all that was mortal of his beloved wife. The quick, impulsive heart that made her so lovable, stilled for ever—"the light of his life gone out," never to be kindled again.

Charles Dickens held Mrs. Carlyle in high esteem. His last interview with her was only a few weeks before her death. It was at the house of Mr. John Forster, and she came in flourishing a telegram in her hand, which she had just received from Professor Tyndall, telling her in a couple of ardent words of her husband's success in the delivery of his rectorial address at Edinburgh. In the course of the evening she communicated to Dickens the outline of what she considered might be made the subject of a novel, from what she had herself observed at the outside of a house in her street in Chelsea; of which the various incidents were drawn from the condition of its blinds and curtains, the costumes visible at its windows, the cabs at its door, and such like; and the subtle, serious humor of it all, the truth in trifling bits of character, and the gradual progress of a half-romantic interest, enchanted, says Mr. Forster, the skilled novelist. This ideal plot was to be completed when they met again, but this never took place.—Chambers's Journal.

"RULE BRITTANIA."

Just one hundred and forty years ago, when the beautiful mansion of Cliveden was the residence of Frederick Prince of Wales, a fete-champetre was held in the gardens to celebrate alike the day of accession of the reigning King, George II., and the birthday of a young Princess. A masque, called Alfred, was performed in a theatre temporarily set up in the gardens. The story and words of the masque appear to have been the joint production of Thompson and Mallet. Evidence exists to show that Mallet wrote a patriotic ode, which was introduced in it, and which is no other than our famous "Rule Brittania." The masque was set to music by Dr. Arne, consisting chiefly of the ode, and sung by one of the characters as a bard. The masque itself was performed by Quin, Milward, Mrs. Horton, and other members of Drury Lane and Covent Garden Theatres. In the next following year, "Rule Brittania" having made a very favorable impression, was introduced in another masque, designated the "Jungment of Paris." Alterations were subsequently made in the song, some of the former verses being omitted, and three others by Bolingbroke introduced, but it is believed that our present popular version is nearly identical with that of Cliveden renown.—All the Year Round.

A BIRD-CATCHING CAT.

On the plains of Nevada, a mile from any house, a gentleman noticed a cat, a huge one. It lay on its back, its feet uppermost, and was apparently dead. Around it, feeding unsuspectingly, was a flock of small birds. Just as he was thinking how much easier it would be for the animal to feign death and catch a bird by deceiving it than by slipping up to it, he was astonished to see the cat suddenly roll over and grab one of the feathered tribe that was very near. The other birds flew away a hundred yards or so and alighted. The cat only made one or two mouthfuls of the game and then crept around to the windward of the birds, laid itself out again, and once more successfully played the dead dodge.

If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver, or "biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as to take SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR OR MEDICINE.

The Cheapest, Purest, and Best Family Medicine in the world!

A Effectual Specific for all diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Spleen

Regulate the Liver and prevent

CHILLS AND FEVER MALARIOUS FEVERS, BOWL COMPLAINTS, RESTLESSNESS, JAUNDICE AND NAUSEA.

BAD BREATH!

Nothing is so unpleasant, nothing so common as bad breath, and in nearly every case it comes from the stomach, and can be easily corrected if you will take Simmons' Liver Regulator. Do not neglect so sure a remedy for this repulsive disorder. It will also improve your Appetite, Complexion, and General Health.

PILES!

How many suffer torture day after day, making life a burden and robbing existence of all pleasure, owing to the secret suffering from Piles. Yet relief is ready to the hand of almost any one who will use systematically the remedy that has permanently cured thousands. SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR is no drastic, violent purge, but a gentle assistant to Nature.

CONSTIPATION!

SHOULD not be regarded as a trifling ailment—in fact, nature demands the utmost regularity of the bowels, and any deviation from this demand paves the way often to serious danger. It is quite as necessary to remove impure accumulations from the bowels as it is to eat or sleep, and no health can be expected where a costive habit of body prevails.

SICK HEADACHE!

This distressing affliction occurs most frequently. The disturbance of the stomach, arising from the imperfectly digested contents, causes a severe pain in the head, accompanied with disagreeable nausea, and this constitutes what is popularly known as sick headache.

Portrait of FAITH WHITCOMB, the Shakeress, the most successful nurse of the age, who is now accomplishing more good through the distribution of her medicine than all the doctors in the country.

SPECIAL TO LADIES!

FAITH WHITCOMB'S Shaker Liniment is a Sure and Certain Cure for Inflammation of the Womb and for the distressing Lame Back, from which the majority of American women suffer.

A Boston gentleman, well known in business circles—in fact, one of the largest advertisers of the city whose wife has suffered for four years with inflammation of the Womb with constant lameness in the back—employing the best regular Physicians—and afterwards the best Female Electric Physicians, expending vast sums of money with but little effect, has had no occasion to employ a Physician since commencing the use of last July. She is now well. She never has the Back ache from which she was hardly ever free during the previous four years.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S SHAKER LINIMENT.

LADIES:—Instead of filling the stomach with wishy-washy medicines for so-called "Female Complaints," apply the proper remedy—externally—and you will obtain certain relief. Every regular Physician will tell you that the only wise treatment for the Inflamation of the Womb is by the external application of the proper remedies, and if you ask your Family Physician he will advise you to use FAITH WHITCOMB'S SHAKER LINIMENT, (to whom the recipe is open for examination.

INVALID LADIES

Who will send a postal card, simply bearing their address, will receive, prepaid by mail,

"FAITH WHITCOMB'S ADVICE TO MOTHERS,"

which every mother should read. Address, FAITH WHITCOMB'S Agency, Boston, Mass.

THE GREAT SHAKER REMEDY

FOR

Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Pains in the Spine, Inflammation of the Kidneys, Enlarged Glands, Toothache, Croup, Earache, Sprains, Chronic Diseases of the Joints and Muscles, Bruises, Backache, Soreness of the Chest, Gout, Quinsy, Sore Throat, Swellings, Burns and Scalds, Headache, Frosted Feet, Chilblains, and all diseases of an inflammatory order.

FOR TOOTHACHE.

Boston Dentists use it in their practice and recommend it to their patrons.

FROM THE CELEBRATED SURGEON DENTIST, U. K. MAYO.

237 TREMONT ST. BOSTON, Aug 30, 1880.

I congratulate you upon the merited and enviable renown attained by your really valuable liniment. It is the most effective remedy for toothache that has ever come to my notice and I cheerfully recommend to my patrons. U. K. MAYO.

IT WORKS LIKE MAGIC IN INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM.

For proof of which please read the following:—

214 CAMBRIDGE ST., BOSTON, Sept. 20, 1880.

I am astonished at the wonderful properties of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment. Three weeks ago I was attacked with Inflammatory Rheumatism, my head was swollen to double its usual size and the Pain was intense. The first application relieved the pain. In two weeks after using two 50 cent bottles of the Liniment I was entirely cured. Those who are familiar with the Inflammatory Rheumatism and the time which it generally runs will agree with me that the Shaker Liniment is a remarkable remedy, and I advise Rheumatics to use it. J. F. SAWTELL.

The Boston Evening Traveller in referring to the above case says:—

"The cure of Mr. Sawtell, the well known grocer, of Inflammatory rheumatism, is creating a decided sensation at the West End. Several gentlemen from the Revere House, chronic Rheumatics, called upon Mr. Sawtell for confirmation of the rumors of his astonishing recovery and found that the facts had not been exaggerated. Such cures place Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment at the head of rheumatic remedies."

CROUP.

SAVE THE LITTLE ONES.

"If Faith Whitcomb's directions are followed not one case of croup in a thousand will prove fatal.

"He will give further proof if you will call upon him.

BOSTON, Nov. 1, 1880.

This certifies that my wife who had been a sufferer from Neuralgia for twenty years, was cured by the use of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and four applications cured my back which was so lame from Rheumatism that I could not move without pain. I assure sufferers from Neuralgia and Rheumatism that this Liniment will surely cure these diseases. I know it to be a fact that Mr. Lord, one of my neighbors at Greenwood who had been on crutches for fifteen years, and had unsuccessfully tried many remedies, obtained relief from less than one bottle of Shaker Liniment, and Mrs. Wheeler of the same place another neighbor, a great sufferer from Chronic Rheumatism—is praising the Shaker Liniment in the strongest terms, for it is the only remedy that would help her. I shall be glad to give further proof of the value of this Liniment to any sufferers who will call either upon me in Boston or at my house at Greenwood. A. HANSON.

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER.

You know Physicians are proverbially shy of anything like patent medicines. Doctor Sylvester is no exception to this rule; but when he saw the formula of "Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment" he said "that is all right, that is a good remedy." He prescribed it for me when I was next assailed by my old enemy Neuralgia, or rather Neuralgic Rheumatism, from which I have suffered much, especially from Neuralgia of the Heart. It was a severe attack and I feared a long illness, but I used the Liniment freely and began to find relief very soon. In a week I was WELL. Its effects are almost magical. I will cheerfully recommend it to my friends. C. A. SYLVESTER.

SHERBURNE, MASS., Nov. 2, 1880.

Dr. Sylvester the well-known Physician of Sherborn, gives the following statement:—

SHERBORN, MASS., Sept. 20, 1880.

This certifies that I have examined the formula of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and the ingredients are such that it must be of great value in Neuralgia and Rhumatism. I use it in my family and I recommend it to all sufferers from these diseases, for it is better than any Liniment that has ever come to my notice. W. P. SYLVESTER, M. D.

When regular Physicians recommend a remedy, and use it themselves in their families you may be sure it has unusual merit.

A well-known Sunday School Worker gives his evidence.

WOBURN, Aug. 24, 1880.

The Shaker Liniment cured my wife of an enlarged joint, from which she suffered for months. A few applications cured her. I also received almost immediate relief in a case of acute inflammation and my son received great benefit in a severe attack of rheumatism. As a family liniment I think it has no equal.

E. N. CUMMINGS.

"It cannot be recommended too highly as a family liniment.

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, Mass., Oct. 20, 1880.

I have used Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment for rheumatism with the happiest results, indeed it is the best liniment that I have ever used giving me quick relief. It is not only efficacious for rheumatism, but for strains, sprains, etc. It can not be recommended too highly as a family liniment. C. H. LEWIS.

It always relieves Neuralgia and if the application is continued a cure can be dependedupon.

[From Hon. A. Maynard, the extensive manufacturer and founder of the town of Maynard.]

ASSABET MILLS,
MAYNARD, Mass., Aug 24, 1880

I gladly add my testimony to the value of the Shaker Liniment in case of Neuralgia and Rheumatism. By its use I obtained almost immediate relief, and unhesitatingly recommend it to my friends.

Childless.

My neighbor's house is not so high
Nor half as nice as mine;
I often see the blinds ajar,
And through the curtains fine,
It's only muslin, and the steps
Are not of stone at all—
And yet I long for her small home
To give mine all in all.

Her lawn is never left to grow—
The children tread it down,
And when the father comes at night,
I hear them clatter down
The gravel walk; and such a noise
Comes to my quiet ears,
And my sad heart's been waiting for
So many silent years.

Sometimes I peep to see them seize
His coat and hand and knees—
All three so anxious to be first;
And call, "Don't tease
Papa"—the baby springs—
And then the low brown door
Shuts out their happiness, and I
Sit wishing as before.

That my neighbors little cottage
And the jewels of her crown
Had been my own; my mansion
With its front of granite brown.
It's damask, and it's Honiton—
It's lawn so green and bright—
How gladly would I give them
For her motherhood to-night.

A CANNIBAL'S ARGUMENT.

Then there is another thing that I wish to refer to, and that is the cannibalism of the people. I want you to understand that cannibalism is a reality. The men think it perfectly legitimate to go out and make raids upon villages, to get victims; and they look upon them as so much human beef. They think no more of that than you think of going to market in this country. They have very little idea of cruelty. They look at things from their own point of view; and when they get their victims, they will break the arms at the elbow-joint, and the leg at the knee-joint, and then throw them in the canoes and take them home, cooking one to-day and another to morrow, if the poor wretches live in that condition. I will not draw pictures of these things as I might do; but let me, by way of illustration, mention a conversation that I had with a cannibal just before I left, and I am not sure that he had not the best of the argument. When I was talking to him about cannibalism, and wishing him to give it up, he said:

"But, you know, it is only our enemies; we never eat our friends. It is right to eat enemies. Have you no enemies in your country?"

I was obliged to say we had people who were sometimes regarded as enemies.

"Well," said he, "do you never fight?"

I was obliged to confess that we did.

"And do you never kill anybody?"

I was very glad he did not ask me how many, as I could not have told him. There would have been no words in his language to tell him that. But when he found out that we did kill people, he said:

"Do you not eat them?"

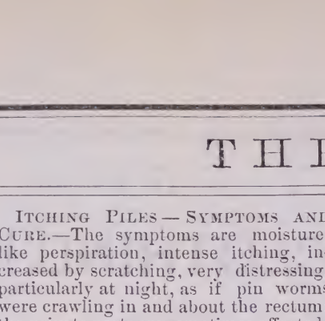
"No, we do not eat people in our country," I answered.

The man looked perfectly astonished. "Then what do you kill them for?" said he. "We kill our enemies because we like them to eat but you kill them for nothing at all."

If it had been able to represent to that man's mind the thousands of people slain upon the battlefield, I have no doubt whatever that his idea would have been, What a splendid lot of beef! I want you to realize the feelings of this man when he said to me, and he said it earnestly: "How is it you kill people if you do not want to eat them?"

You see there are a great many things that we have to look at from the native point of view. Even when the natives come from the savage to the civilized state, there are many things that we think very ludicrous and stupid; but you must look at them from their point of view.

The different tendencies of homicidal mania in different individuals are often only nursed into action when tee current of the blood has been poisoned with alcohol. I had a case of a person who, whenever his brain was so excited, told me that he experienced a most uncontrollable desire to kill or injure some one; so much so, that he could at times hardly restrain himself from the action, and was obliged to refrain from all stimulants, lest, in an unlucky moment, he might commit himself. Townley, who murdered the young lady of his affections, for which he was sentenced to be imprisoned in a lunatic asylum for life, poisoned his with brandy and soda-water before he committed the rash act. The brandy stimulated into action certain portions of the brain, which acquired such a power as to subjugate his will, and hurry him to the performance of a frightful deed, opposed alike to his better judgment and his ordinary desires.—Henry Munroe., M. D.



Justice Smith said, on opening his court at Connorsville, Tenn.: "William Henry Smith is arraigned for assaulting his father." The magistrate had on the previous day knocked his father down with a club, and it was himself he was now arraigning. He continued: "The evidence is conclusive, and I am not sure but I ought to send myself to jail for ten days. But, as this is my first offence, and I certainly had a great deal of provocation, I will simply impose a fine of $10."

ITCHING PILES — SYMPTOMS AND CURE.—The symptoms are moisture, like perspiration, intense itching, increased by scratching, very distressing, particularly at night, as if pin worms were crawling in and about the rectum; the private parts are sometimes affected; if allowed to continue very serious results may follow. Dr. Swayne's All-Healing Ointment is a pleasant sure cure. Also for Tetter, Itch, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Erysipelas, Barbers' Itch, Blotches, all Scaly, Crusty, Cutaneous Eruptions. FAITH WHITCOMB'S

NERVE BITTERS,

Composed of Pure

Shaker Herbs.

AN INFALLIBLE CURE

— FOR —

Dyspepsia, Nervous prostration, Liver Complaint, Indigestion, Lassitude and Weakness, Loss of Appetite, Scrofulous and Cancerous Humors, Salt Rheum, Incipent Paralysis, Kidney Complaints, and the many diseases arising from an impure state of the blood, overwork, worry and indigestion. It renovates the whole system, working upon the Liver and Kidneys. It makes new blood; it builds up the debilitated system, and thousands will testify that it does all that is recommended for it. Do not neglect to try this great Shaker Remedy.

[From the Boston Herald of May 19.]

"The Shakers, as a class, are noted for their uniform good health. Their remarkable freedom from disease is due very largely to their appreciation of the great medicinal value of preparations of roots and herbs. That noble Shaker woman, Faith Whitcomb, has given to her brothers and sisters, and through them to mankind at large, that inestimable boon now so widely known as Faith Whitcomb's Nerve Bitters; and it is in the compounding of these Bitters, and her other Shaker remedies, that the immense quantities of roots and herbs raised by the Shakers are employed. Truly this is such a use of the knowledge gained by long experience for the benefit of mankind as cannot fail to make the word "Shaker" beloved by every sufferer who has found health and strength through the use of Faith Whitcomb's Bitters.

As a spring medicine it is unequalled. Being composed of pure Shaker herbs, comprising Sarsaparilla, Hops, Celery, Chamomile, Thoroughwort, Dandelion, Yellow Dock, etc., it acts directly upon the seat of the disease, and gives speedy and permanent relief. For dyspepsia, nervous prostration, indigestion, lassitude, billiousness, incipient paralysis, kidney complaints, etc., etc., it has proved itself of wonderful efficacy, it renovates the system, cleansing the blood of all impurities, and builds up the patient with every dose.

To obviate all doubt as to the authenticity of Shaker Bitters, attention is called to the language of John H. Sprague in this connection. He says: "The herbs of which Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Remedies are composed are gathered and cured under the personal supervision of the Harvard Community of Shakers, and the public can depend upon their purity. Faith Whitcomb's remedies are Shaker remedies of great value." Elijah Myrick, trustee of the Harvard Community of Shakers, says: "We use Faith Whitcomb's Remedies ourselves in our community, and heartily recommend them for the diseases for which they are recommended." The public can rest assured, therefore, that these Bitters are genuine Shaker Medicine, and will justify by their effects, the strong endorsements already given by thousands who have been benefited by their use. Dr. Geo. F. Brooks, of 122 Eliot street, Boston, a graduate of Harvard College, was asked by the writer concerning his experience with Shaker Bitters. Said the Doctor. "I have no hesitation in recommending them in the strongest terms for general debility, nervous exhaustion, and the like. My patients are highly pleased, and I, as a physician, am both gratified and surprised at the favorable results which have followed their use. You can make any use of my name which you see fit in commendation of these Bitters." The leading wholesale druggists of this city report the most astonishing sales of Faith Whitcomb's Nerve Bitters.—They say that no remedy in the history of the trade has sprung more quickly into popular favor. This, of course, is but natural, since there can be no fear of the patient taking into his stomach, through Faith Whitcomb's Bitters, any of those noxious drugs whith are so often palmed off upon the public. A genuine, honest remedy, of true merit, is bound to succeed.

Testimonials without number might be added to the above. Let it suffice to say that Faith Whitcomb's Nerve Bitters are one of the greatest remedies known to medical science to-day, and that the thousands of bottles which are being daily sold all over the country, afford the most conclusive proof of their popularity."

An Illustrated History of the Shakers,

containing an account of remarkable cures effected by this great Shaker Medicine, will be mailed, postpaid, to any address, or can be obtained free of your druggist.

CAUTION.—See that Faith Whitcomb's portrait is upon each wrapper.

Mr. Spoopendyke.

HE EXPLAINS TO HIS SPOUSE THE OPERATIONS OF WEATHER BUREAUS.

"I see," said Mrs. Spoopendyke, as she laid the paper down, "I see that we are to have rising, followed by falling barometer, with northeast to southwest winds, and higher or lower temperature, with clear or partly cloudy weather, and light rains. How is it they contrive to tell so accurately about the weather? Do you understand it?"

"Certainly," replied Mr. Spoopendyke; "they do it by observation.—They have a man out west observing, and a man down East who observes, and fellows observing around in different parts of the country. They put all their observations together, and we know just what it is going to do."

"I suppose that's what makes the wind so different every morning, when one man's temperature is rising, another's is falling; and when one is clear all the rest are partly cloudy with—"

"No, they ain't. Each observer sends in what he observes, and then the chief makes up his mind from these reports what the weather will be. Can't you understand?"

"Perfectly," said Mrs. Spoopendyke, rubbing her elbows. "If one sees the barometer rising, another sees it falling; and it's cold in one place and cloudy in another, they all say so. But I should think when one hits it right the others would be awful mad."

"What would they get mad about?" demanded Mr. Spoopendyke. "You don't imagine that they all get together and fight it out, do you? They take the weather from different points and combine it, and they parcel it out among the different regions. For instance, if it snows in the east and is warm in the west, they strike an average for the lake region. Now, what is the average between heat and snow?"

"Rain," cried Mrs. Spoopendyke, delighted with her sagacity. "They take what is usually going on, and equalize it all over the country. I'm glad the Democrats weren't elected."

"What have they got to do with it? Do you think a barometer is a politician?"

"No; but if the Democrats had been elected, they would have to change it all around, wouldn't they? And the South would have got the best share.—That's what the Repub—"

"Dod gast the Republicans! They have got no more to do with it than you have. You have got the idea that they throw the barometers and observers into one end of a steam engine and the weather comes out of the other. They don't make weather. The weather makes itself. It is the only self-supporting thing about the government.—And these signal men only watch it and tell what it's going to be."

"I suppose when these observers all get together and talk it over, that is called a storm-centre, isn't it?"

"That's it!" shouted Mr. Spoopendyke. "You've got the weather now. All you want is your name painted on the handle, and the spring broken to be an umbrella. They don't talk it over; they tell what they know, and it is fixed up in Washington. They agree on it there, and then they telegraph it all around everywhere. It is generally made in Manitoba and then sent down here."

"How wide is it?" asked Mrs. Spoopendyke, deeply interested. "Because, if it isn't too big, I should think they might stop it."

"Wide! It's about a feet wide! Just a feet. Just about as wide as your measly information. How're they going to stop it? Think it jaws the sleeping-car conductor because there's only an upper berth left? Well, it don't.—It hires a horse!" howled Mr. Spoopendyke, "and the only way to stop it is to build a fence around it. There was some talk of burning the last one, but the wood was wet."

"Well, my dear, you needn't get angry about it," said Mrs. Spoopendyke, soothingly. "I only thought there might be some way they could make some arrangements about it. I think storm-centres are horrid, and the observer in Manitoba must have a hard time. If he has to observe much in the winter he must be nearly frozen."

"Does any human being know what you're thinking about?" raved Mr. Spoopendyke. "Do you s'pose he goes around with a spy-glass looking behind rocks? Think he prowls around all night with a dod-gasted lantern, hunting up storm-centres? Got an idea that he runs around under the bed with a broom, like a measly married woman I know of, and when he catches a centre, pulls him out by the leg and observes him. He don't do anything of the sort. He has 'em in to spend the evenin' with him, and gets 'em drunk, and finds out what they're up to. Understand it now? All you want is to whirl around twice and squeak nights to be a weather vane."

"I didn't know how they did it," quoth Mrs. Spoopendyke, complacently, "but I see now. If the Prohibitionists had been elected, he couldn't have done that; and we would have been in a bad way. Now that I understand it, I'll learn the indications every morning. How does a barometer rise and fall?"

"With jack-screws, dod gast it!" thundered Mr. Spoopendyke. "Sometimes they haul it up with a stump machine; then they drop a carpenter's shop on it. When it gets very low they blow it up with gun-cotton. Once in Dakota it got so high they had to dig a hole and ram it down with a pile driver. Got it now? Begin to see through it? What you need is a box of pills and a conundrum to be an almanac!" and Mr. Spoopendyke jumped out of the house like a conical shot, and banged the door after him.

"I never quite understood it before," soliloquized Mrs. Spoopendyke, speculating as to whether she would put the plume on the side or back part of her hat; "but now that he's explained it to me, I wonder they don't observe by steam. It must be awful hard on the poor men." And, having decided about the plume, Mrs. Spoopendyke filled her mouth with pins, and crawled under the bed in search of her thimble.

Newspapers have one paramount duty. They ought, in all matters of geographical, historical, biographical or statistical interest, to aim at presenting only the truth. Snatching out paragraphs here and there and printing them without examination tenders a wisely-disposed journal liable to disseminate outrageous errors. And when errors become anchored in the public mind it is next to impossible to eradicate them. "The paper said so" is an infallible argument for multitudes, as it is hard for them to understand that a lie can be printed as easily as it is spoken.

Footmen are going out, says the London World, and footwomen are taking their place. Dining the other night in Eaton Place, the door was opened by one of the latter in a most charming and becoming livery. Black and white mob-cap for head-dress, stand-up collar with white cravat and small pin in it, rich brown-cloth coat, with livery buttons, cut somewhat like a man's hunting-coat, and a buff waistcoat with a high church collar. Such was the uniform. I was so struck with the upper portion of the dress that I never thought of looking at the extremities; but I fancy my eye once got a glimpse, going up-stairs, of red stockings and shoes with silver buckles. During dinner four winsome lasses, all similarly attired, waited on me hand and foot, and certainly never was a dinner more deftly handled and served. Why not? Women are, by nature, much better suited for this sort of work than men. The latter think nothing of eating onions or smoking vile tobacco before serving the soup, or putting their thumbs in the gravy of one's mutton, or breathing stentorously at your ear, or perceptibly on your cranium if its lacks a covering. Besides, there is decided economy; footwomen are not taxed, nor do they eat so much.

Our much respected townsman, Chas. N. Ingalls, left home Tuesday for Minnesota, to take a position on the Northern Pacific R. R., his immediate location being at St. Paul. This road, which for several years did nothing toward extending its lines, is now pushing ahead in a wonderful manner, and is to complete 270 miles of new road this season. This will take them to the Yellowstone National Park, and must greatly aid the success of the road. A CARD.

I wish to correct a report which seems to be quite generally circulated around town, that I have sold out my Rendering Works and given up the business. This is not so. "I still live," and shall continue the business at my factory, which I built two or three years ago. The buildings advertised to be let, as recently occupied by me as Rendering Works, have never been used by me for that purpose since they were built, but merely as a store house during the remainder of my lease. A. L. AMES.

SCHOOL GIRL SLANG.—The "Dare-to-be-a-Daniel" of this age says to her chum: "Take a crawl on the ave?" The very latest effort of the graduate of the near future is this: "Are you going far?" "No, not far." "How far?" "Only to the car." "Ta-ta." And still a latter effort is: "Are you going far?" "Only to the bar." Take a cigar?" "Tra-la-la." "Meet me on the ave. this aft., and we will go to the mat." "No! not this aft. "Well, good aft." "I had a perfectly mag. time, and don't you forget it." "Don't give me away, Kate." "Well I should exclaim." "I should blush to murmur." "I should remark." "I should mutter." "I should smile." "Are you going to the musicale?" "You just bet I am." "Have you got your lesson in physical geography?" "What do you take me for?" "I told the guy I wanted a new handkerchief dress." "Did he tumble to the racket?" "Did he trail?" "Did he catch on?" "He forked over an' it's my treat." These seem to be the most approved slang efforts, and just at present are the most popular. An occasional slang word in a young lady's conversation sometimes adds piquancy, but the continual and unrestrained use degenerates the user and her conversation to the plane of a street walker's style of talk. Young ladies remember this.

Letter from a Small Boy.

MESSRS. EDITORS.—I am a small, good boy. I am a Garfield boy. Some of the boys are Hancock boys. They are not so good as I am, but I like them. Last fall we boys had a good time. Everybody had a good time. Papa makes me go to church. Papa goes to church. Papa went to hear Bob preach. Is Bob a good man? Bob says there is no God. Bob says there is no h—l. If there is no God what will the Garfield men do? If there is no h—l, where will the Hancock men go? Papa scolds when I ask such questions. He says, "Boy, keep still." Boys can't keep still. They must ask questions. Please may we ask them in the Advertiser?

All men seem to me like boys. My papa was a Garfield man. Now he is a Conkling man. He fired rockets and all kinds of fireworks. He put on a cape and said he was a "young Republican." The boys called him "the old man." Jim's papa was a Hancock man. Jim was a Hancock boy. I like Jim. We both think George Washington was a good man. He couldn't tell a lie. I said he was a Garfield man. Jim said he guessed not. We both said we would have a good time next Fourth of July, and hurrah for G. Washington, the Father of his Country. We would have flags and fireworks. Now they say we can't. They say it would keep sick folks awake and make horses jump and run. Please tell us if they would jump any worse than they did last fall. Why can't we have fireworks just one day? our papas played with them all last fall. All the boys want them. Jim says he will have them. Is Jim a bad boy? THOMAS JERRY.

An amusing case of absent-mindedness on the part of a fashonable lady in Boston occurred recently in that city. While in a store on Washington street she purchased a large feather duster and on leaving the store took with her the duster leaving her sun umbrella with orders that it be sent to her residence. Judge of her surprise when she recovered her mental equilibrium and discovered herself entering Jordan & Marsh's store with the feather duster carried above her head a-la-sunshade, and everybody staring at her as they might have done at a Comanche chieftain.

'I've brought this thermometer back,' said a down-town man, as he threw the instrument on the counter of a hardware store. 'There isn't a member of my family that can tell the time of day by it, and I guess the thing's run down. It hain't ticked a solitary once since I have had it. Don't you have keys for 'em?' And, because a young woman who was buying a pair of scissors snickered, he turned red in the face and left the store muttering something about 'new fangled ideas being nuisances.'

PEABODY.

West Peabody Farmers' Club.

By invitation of Mr. Bowman Viles the members of the above-named club, with their ladies, children and invited guests, met at his residence in West Peabody, Friday the 17th inst., to hold a reunion and picnic. The meeting was called to order by Mr. John E. Herrick, president, and after music by the North Reading Brass Band, he introduced Rev. Willard Spaulding, the orator of the day, who delivered an interesting address, appropriate for the occasion, which was attentively listened to by the large assembly present. The speaker was frequently interrupted by applause. After the address and music the members of the club and their guests, whose number had swelled to about nine hundred, were invited to fall in and partake of a dinner, for which the farmers' wives of West Peabody stand No. 1 in preparing.

After the inner man had been filled the president introduced J. F. Ingraham, Esq., as toast-master of the occasion. He said it was with some diffidence that he attempted to occupy this position on this occasion, but it has been said that "a faint heart never won fair lady," and calling to his aid the motto of the hero of Lundy's Lane, "I will try," he said, "To me this is no ordinary gathering, such as we are accustomed to see, that is, a picnic for the purpose of filling some one's pocket with dollars; the object of this social gathering is of a far different nature; we are assembled here to-day for a purpose dear to us all—a purpose as far above the ordinary motive as the stars are above the earth. Our purpose is not for money, not for show, not for foolish pride, but for an exchange of friendly feelings with each other, and the making and renewal of friends and friendship."

1st Toast. Our Country, responded to by the toast-master.

2d Toast. The Orator of the Day, responded to by Rev. Mr. Spaulding, simply saying that, owing to the lateness of the hour, he would simply make a bow.

3d Toast. The West Peabody Farmers' Club, its Origin, its Present Condition and Future Prospects, responded to by Mr. E. C. Farwell, secretary of the club, giving in detail his connection with organizing said club, the general interest taken by its members, and the general influence given to its support by the public; feeling confident that this is to be one of the model Farmers' Clubs of New England.

4th Toast. Recent advances in the Mechanical Art of Farming. Responded to by Mr. J. S. Needham.

5th Toast. Welcome all Inventions that tend to develop the interests of Agriculture; if Ensilage is good we'll adopt it, if bad we'll reject it. By J. G. Walcott.

6th Toast. The best-managed farms in town; here then is to the health of all the Kings in the Kingdom. By J. P. King.

7th Toast. The Essex Agricultural Society, of which our Club claims to be an humble scion; may it prosper in the future as it has in the past, and may the shadow of its President never be less. By Benj. P. Ware.

8th Toast. To the leather interests of our town; may it continue to flourish, ever remain in the future as it has in the past, the sinews of war in trade and the backbone of our republic. By Isaac Hardy.

9th Toast. Although our form of government rests not on that which defends it in its hour of danger, yet may we protect that which protects us; "to the gallant boys in blue." By F. E. Farnham.

10th Toast. The Press of Essex Co., ever considerate to the farming interests, it is justly entitled to the patronage of the farming community; though we yield to its representatives the palm in literature and oratory, we can beat them in hoeing and raking, and if they give us a sample of their oratory now, we will give them a sample of our cabbages in the fall. By Senator N. A. Horton, of Essex Co.

11th Toast. What I know about Farming. By J. P. Palmer, Esq.

12th Toast. Cashiers always respond. By Senator Winship of Middlesex County.

13th Toast. Responsibility and accountability, the interesting lines upon which the government moves; the point of their intersection is the central point around which all government, human and divine, centre and revolve. By Ansel W. Putnam, Esq.

One of the pleasant features of the day was the children's table, presided over by E. C. Farwell, upon which were two elegant mammoth cakes, contributed for the children of members of the club by Mr. F. H. Appleton of West Peabody. It was cut into forty-eight pieces, and contained two beautiful gold rings. The lucky holders of the pieces containing the rings were Master Ingraham and Master Durkee. Glass ball shooting, croquet, and swinging in the barn, with dancing in the evening to the music of a full quadrille band, were among some of the pleasant sports of the day. Upon motion a vote of thanks, with three rousing cheers were given to Mr. and Mrs. Viles, the host and hostess of the home, for the hospitality extended to the club and guests. Dancing was indulged in until a late hour, when all left for their homes.

E. C. F.

G. A. R.—Rev. V. M. Simons of Woburn, formerly chaplain of Union Post 50 of this town, lately extended an invitation to it to make him a visit.—The comrades of Burbank Post 33 of the former place, learning this fact, united with him in extending hospitalities. About fifty of Post 50 left at 6.30 on Tuesday evening last, in two barges under the charge of Mr. Quint. They had a delightful ride through Lynnfield and Reading to Walnut Hill, about a mile out of Woburn, where they were received by Post 33, who escorted them to town, and after a short march through the main street and around the common, the procession entered the hall of Post 33. The usual Post exercises were observed, after which a bountiful banquet was served in the hall below. After due justice to the viands the company adjourned to the upper hall, where a social time was followed by speech making. The commander of Post 33 made a brief but cordial speech of welcome, and placed the meeting in charge of Col. Grammer, who presided with ease and enlivened the occasion with excellent hits and brief introductory remarks. Excellent speeches were made by comrades Perkins, Hall, Mason and Whittemore of 33, the latter closing with a spirited poem. Comrade Simons after an allusion to the pleasant memories he retained of Post 50, read an original poem which awakened much enthusiasm. Commander Ward and comrades Barnes, Johnson, Batchelder, Hildreth, Adams and Randall of Post 50 responded for the Post. At the last stroke of twelve the assembly rose and sang Keller's American Hymn, thus probably being among the first to celebrate the 17th. The trip and visit were heartily enjoyed and we are assured Post 50 will have in pleasing remembrance their cordial reception, until such occasion as may prove fitting to reciprocate.

The death of John V. Stevens, which took place Sunday morning about quarter past seven, though an event which the public have for a few weeks past expected, nevertheless brings with it a sense of loss to the town and the immediate family, which must seem sudden. Mr. Stevens was one of Peabody's own sons, having been born in the old house on the corner of Jacob and Central streets. He grew up with its growth, and was wont to speak of the many changes that had taken place in this time. When quite a young man he engaged in a small way in the tanning and currying business, which his industry, perseverance and good business sense steadily increased till the Boston fire in 1872, when failing health compelled him to retire. He represented the town in the General Court during the years 1864 and 1865, and for thirty-three years he has taken an active interest in the fire department—a part of the time as chief engineer—and the frequency of his appointment on committees in this department of affairs shows that his plain and practical common sense was appreciated by the town. Mr. Stevens was a man of high ideas, and one whose devotion to principle was unquestioned. He was a firm and outspoken defender of good morals, temperance, and was an earnest Christian. In church, Sunday school, and other branches of associated effort for the religious welfare of the community, he was earnest and progressive. His funeral took place on Tuesday afternoon from his late residence on Stevens street, and a large number were present to testify their respect to his memory. The services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Sperry of the South Church, of which the deceased had been a member for more than fifty years. Mr. Stevens' age was 73 years and 7 months, and his family consisted of a wife and three sons—John W., of Chicago, Charles P., of Boston, and George, of this town. His remains were interred in Monumental Cemetery.

Miss Mary J. Floyd, late Librarian at the Sutton Reference Library, has been presented with the following token of the estimation in which her services were held by the Sutton Reference Library Committee:

At a meeting of the Committee of the Sutton Reference Library, held June 8th, 1881, Messrs. G. F. Osgood and T. M. Osborne were appointed a committee to present the following resolutions:

Resolved, That in accepting the resignation of Miss Floyd, the committee desire to express their deep sense of her faithful devotion to the duties of her position during her long service as Librarian, her earnest and careful attention to the wants of readers at the Library, and her unfailing courtesy towards the many strangers who have visited the Institution.

Resolved, That the Committee take great pleasure in recalling the uniformly pleasant relations that have existed between Miss Floyd and themselves, and in conveying to her the expression of the very high esteem in which she will always be held by them.

To the above Miss Floyd replies as follows:

PEABODY, June 21, 1881.

Mr. George F. Osgood;

DEAR SIR,—I cannot refrain from expressing to you my deep and unexpected pleasure at receiving the Resolutions forwarded by you to-day in behalf of the Sutton Library Committee. That I have been enabled so to perform the duties of Librarian as to receive such a token of appreciation and esteem, as, notwithstanding my many short-comings, you have conferred upon me, is indeed a matter of gratitude to Him from whom all help cometh. Those twelve years of connection with the Library will ever be thought of with pleasure.

Allow me to congratulate you on your choice of my successor—Miss Perkins—who is so ably fitted in every way to adorn the place. Wishing for continued prosperity to the Library, in all its interests, I remain

Yours very gratefully.

MARY J. FLOYD.

Last Wednesday evening a very pleasant event took place at the residence of Mr. Geo. M. Teel on Central street. The occasion was the marriage of his youngest daughter, Miss Addie P. to Mr. Jesse H. Smith, and in the presence of the families and immediate friends they were pronunced man and wife. Rev. Mr. Wood, pastor of the Baptist Church, officiated.

Mr. Jonathan E. Osborn desires us to state that the report in a Salem daily last night to the effect that the strike at his boarding-house was caused by his hiring an American instead of an Irish servant, is utterly false, as was also the report that they were all Irish who struck. The question of her nationality was never brought up or considered.

Last Monday evening our young apprentice, Frank Porter, received an injury which incapacitates him for the present from all except mental labor. While playing ball he attempted to catch off the bat, and succeeded in catching the bat, in his teeth, with a demoralizing result. Two teeth were broken and his mouth otherwise injured. Too bad.

Billy Garvey, one of a well-known family, received a severe injury to one of his eyes while cutting wood at a house on Park street, last week; a chip flying and striking him with such force that it is doubtful if he recovers the sight.

M. W. Samuel C. Lawrence, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge, F. & A. M. of Massachusetts, will visit the lodges in Danvers this evening. Delegates from Peabody and other towns will attend the meeting.

Next Sunday will be Floral Sunday at the Universalist Church, and Rev. Mr. Harmon will preach a children's sermon in the morning at the usual service hour, and at six o'clock a Floral Concert will be given.

Reith & Co. have a large line of millinery which they will dispose of cheap.

THE OLD MAN'S GHOST.

Several days ago, a celebrated Spiritualist came to Little Rock, and stated that before giving a public entertainment he would give a seance, where any member of a small invited circle could call up the spirits of their friends and converse with them. By mistake a man from down the river was admitted, a man whose reputation for deeds of violence would not place his spirit above par in the soul market. After listening awhile to tapping, horn-blowing and gauze vail materialzation, the bad man arose and said :

"Say, Cap'n, whar's the old man's ghost?"

"What old man?" asked the medium.

"My old man, the governor. Call him up."

"What's his name?"

"Tom Bealick; call him up!"

"I don't think we are in communication with him to-night."

"What's the matter, wire down?"

"No, the old gentleman is off on a visit."

"Now, here, jest shut up your wardrobe and turn out your light. If you don't give the old man's ghost a show, the thing shan't run."

"Wait; I'll see if he'll come," said the spiritualist. "If he raps three times he is willing; if only once, he has other engagements."

A sharp rap sounded.

"He is unwilling," continued the spiritualist.

"Now, here," said the bad man, "that want my ole man's knock. Why, ef he'd hit that table he'd splintered it. Call him up," and drawing a revolver the affectionate son cast a severe look on the medium.

"To tell the truth, I can't call him up."

"Tell him that I want to see him. That'll fetch him."

"No; he won't come; but I beg of you to be patient. Wait; ah, he will come presently. He is here and desires to talk with you. He says that he is perfectly happy, aud that he longs for the time when you will be with him. He is one of the rulers in the spirit land."

"Cap'n, you are the infernalist liar in Arkansas."

"Why so, sir?"

"Because the old man is in the city prison, drunk as a fool."—Little Rock Gazette.

CHINESE BEDS.

There are two kinds of Chinese beds, and both arranged for a complete shutting in by means of hanging curtains and tapestry. The expensive kind is like a sort of cage, having a flat wooden roof, just the size of the bed proper, supported at a height of about eight feet from the floor on four corner posts and two intermediate ones. Then there is a sort of frieze or entablature work running around horizontally, above and below, so that when you are in bed you are safely penned in a sort of cage, and cannot possibly tumble out. The carving on these beds is sometimes very rich, and large sums are paid for them; but the ordinary and cheaper kind is made of two frames of wood shaped something like the skeleton of an old-fashioned "settee," which are stood up on the floor facing each other. A mattress is placed on the projecting parts of these frames, and a couple of slight sticks across the top; then curtains and hangings shut all in, and makes it look as pretty as the taste and money of the owner are able. Inside, there is a cotton quilt, laid on the mattress frame. The occupant of the bed lies on this, having a little roll of stuff for the head, and for a covering a very thick cotton quilt.

EL DORADO IN PHILADELPHIA.

If you will draw a line across the city, past Cherry Hill to Race street wharf, you will seperate by that line the part of Philadelphia which stands on original land, from the part which stands on soil deposited by the Schuykill. All this lower part of the city is built over a bed of auriferous or gold-bearing clay, and wherever you dig down you will find more or less gold. For all through these vast ages, while the river was gnawing away its western bank and depositing soil on its eastern, it was bringing down little particles of gold from some place in the interior of the State, where there were gold-bearing rocks and sands. The gold under the city has been repeatedly mined for, and enough of it got to make a coin or ring, or some similar trinket, but at a cost greater than its market value; for the quantity found is too small in proportion to the labor expended for it to be worth working. —The Penn Monthly.

AN UNDERGRADUATE'S EXCUSE.

An undergraduate was summoned before one of the Dons for not attending the seven o'clock morning chapel. "Sir," said the Don, "let me hear what you have to say in excuse of your persistent absence from morning prayers." "Sir," replied the delinquent, "the service is too late for me to be present." "Too late, sir? How can seven in the morning be considered a late hour?" "Well," replied the ingenious offender, "were the hour four or five, or even six, I might manage to be present; but to expect a man to sit up till seven o'clock in the morning in order to go to church is more than human nature will endure."—Chambers's Journal.

Every single thing in life is made to say to the man that purchases it, "You may have me if you will grow and make yourself large to take me."

Truth is the most powerful thing in the world, since fiction only pleases us by its resemblance to it.

A SAMPLE VILLAGE.

I write this from a country village containing about one thousand inhabitants. It is a lovely little town, nestled on a side hill to break off the raw winds of winter and the hurricanes of summer. When I arrived this morning it seemed to me as if there could not be a bad man or a scolding woman in the village, but four hours have passed and I am a wiser man. I came here to see old Mrs. Brown about a pension she wants from the government, and when we had finished our business, I said:

"I see you have four churches here."

"Yes; but we never have any sermons worth listening to."

"The men look intelligent and smart."

"Humph! They are regular pokes! There isn't a man in Farmville who knows enough to ask boot in a horse trade."

"But the women look happy," I protested.

"Then they look what they ain't," she answered. "I don't believe there is a happy woman in the whole village. If you knew of the awful carryings on here, you wouldn't look for happy wives."

"What awful things do the men do?"

"You'd better ask what they don't do. It's a wonder to me that Farmville hasn't shared the fate of Sodom and Gomorrow."

"Do they drink?"

"Do they? Didn't I see even old Deacon Harris weaving this way and that as he climbed the hill last evening? It's a slippery path, of course, but sober men don't climb a hill sideways."

"Do they gamble?"

"Gamble? What did Mrs. Potts tell me that her brother's wife told Mrs. Davis not a month ago? Four of the leading men in the place were caught playing checkers for the soda water. That's a nice example, isn't it?"

"Is Mrs. Potts nice?"

"Nice! Why, she's the worst gossip in town! It's a wonder the men don't duck her in the mill-pond!"

"And Mrs. Davis?"

"She's a hypocrite! She'll talk sweet to your face, and abuse you behind your back."

"Mrs. George is well spoken of."

"By whom? I've known her fifteen years, but I never heard a human being speak well of her. She eats opium and lies like a trollop."

"Isn't Mrs. McHenry all right?"

"All right? Why, no one can live in the house next to her."

"The postmaster seems like a good man," I ventured to remark.

"Good man! Why, my husband always believed he was the very man who threw a yellow dog down our well. I don't say that he steals letters, but I do know that when I sent two three-cent stamps in a letter to my daughter in Illinoy, she never got it."

"But there must be one good man here."

"There must, eh? Well, I wish you'd pint him out to me. I'd like to polish up my spectacles and take a good look at him."

"And isn't there one faultless woman?"

"Well, I don't want to seem vain and conceited, because none of us are long for this world, but I expect I'm the faultless one you are inquiring after."

I think I shall go out on the evening train. Mrs. Brown says that every house and lot is mortgaged, every business man is ready to "bust," and every family has at least one scandal about them. On my way over to the post-office an hour ago, I asked a grocer if he knew old Mrs. Brown.

"Know her! Why, she's a gossip, a liar, a hypocrite, and a dead beat, and too lazy to change her stockings more than twice a year."—M. Quad.

SKATING FOR LIFE.

That skating has been in certain circumstances something more than a mere elegant accomplishment is well illustrated by two anecdotes, told by the author of some entertaining "Reminiscences of Quebec," of two settlers in the far West, who saved their lives by the aid of their skates. In one case the backwoodsman had been captured by Indians, who intended soon after to torture him to death. Among his baggage there happened to be a pair of skates, and the Indians' curiosity was so excited that their captive was told to explain their use. He led his captors to the edge of a wide lake, where the smooth ice stretched away as far as the eye could see, and put on the skates. Exciting the laughter of the Indians by tumbling about in a clumsy manner, he gradually increased his distance from the shore, till he at length contrived to get a hundred yards from them without arousing their suspicion, when he skated away as fast as he could, and finally escaped. The other settler is said to have been skating alone one moonlight night, and, while contemplating the reflection of the firmament in the clear ice, and the vast dark mass of forest surrounding the lake and stretching away in the background, he suddenly discovered, to his horror, that the adjacent bank was lined with a pack of wolves. He at once "made tracks" for home, followed by these animals; but the skater kept ahead, and one by one the pack tailed off; two or three of the foremost, however, kept up the chase, but when they attempted to close with the skater, by adroitly turning aside, he allowed them to pass him, and, after a few unsuccessful and vicious attempts on the part of the wolves, he succeeded in reaching his log hut in safety.—Belgravia.

TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.

Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,

Universalist Pastor.

For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.

Peabody, Mass, June 27, 1879.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,

Of Beverly, Mass.

I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, CATARRH, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him; his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.

Beverly, Mass, Oct'r 29, 1879.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,

Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence, Ms.

My dear Dr. Lighthill,—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the larynx into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted, I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.

Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.

Lawrence, Nov. 4, 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,

Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.

The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celbrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.

I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.

I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.

R. S. LAMBERT.

Boston, Nov. 26, 1880.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.

From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,

Piano Manufacturer, 185 Washington St., Boston

Dr. Lighthill,—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.

I have the honor to be very truly yours,

A. M. McPHAIL, Jr.

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.

From Mrs. M. A. Emery.

Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends, and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,

Mrs. M. A. EMERY,
359 Lowell Street,

Lawrence, Sept. 21, 1880.

HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

A REMARKABLE CURE.

From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.

Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man. G. H. ROBINSON,

Methuen, Nov. 1st, 1880.

Please Remember—Dr. LIGHTHILL'S Office is at 115 Boylston Street, Boston.

The Peabody Press.

Wednesday Evening, June 22, 1881.

Believing that our readers would appreciate our efforts we have decided not to publish the PRESS until Thursday next week, when we will have an account of the exhibition of the graduating class of the Peabody High School.

The Legal Aspect.

There is one phase of the subject now agitating the public mind, and that is its legal aspect. Waving the relative merits of prohibition and license, leaving one side the moral part of the controversy, it seems to us that upon the one idea of executing the law there is ground enough for all good citizens to unite. The Selectmen may or may not have decided upon the wisest course in the premises, but having reached a decision after a careful deliberation, those who really desire to see the law enforced should waive their personal preferences, forbear harsh criticism, and strive to have the law obeyed. There is no reason why any portion of our citizens should be allowed to boldly and repeatedly violate the law unmolested. We do not pronounce upon the justice of the law now, but, whether right or wrong, the law is on the statute books, and it is the duty of every citizen to see that it is enforced. There is an attempt to enforce every other law, and we fail to see any good reason why the liquor law should be suffered to go by default. The law plainly forbids the larger majority of the places which have been accustomed to receive licenses, and demands compliance with certain clearly specified provisions by those who are entitled under the law to licenses. The law is plain, no matter what our opinion of it may be, and as law-abiding citizens we hope to see it enforced while it is law.

We trust, however, that while those to whom its enforcement may be specially entrusted will be vigilant, decisive and persevering, they will avoid two things which are calculated only to enhance the bitter feeling connected with this disagreeable subject. The first thing is being impartial.—There ought to be no discrimination. Those who have no licenses should be looked after with equal vigilance, and those who take licenses held strictly to account. Secondly, there should be no action which may appear to be aimed particularly at any one. While we do not think our Selectmen would entrust the matter to those who would show spite, any action which seems to savor of it should be avoided if possible. We have no expectation that perfect success is to be attained, or that our people are to be made righteous by legislation, but we do have faith that such judicious action as is warranted by law, and made possible by the present state of affairs, will greatly lessen the evil. We are as opposed as any one to sumptuary laws, but in consideration of the terrible effects of intemperance upon our race, we believe that all proper advantage should be taken of the law which our law-makers have given us. Let it be done in the proper spirit, and the time will come when some of those who now feel injured by its operation, will bless the time they felt its force.

We have received a communication from Rev. L. L. Wood upon the temperance meeting last Monday evening, and also an interesting account of the trip in the "Excelsior" down the harbor last Friday, which, owing to our inability to get a compositor, we are obliged to leave till next week.

IT IS REPORTED

That the Naumkeag street railway could not pay the sum of one thousand dollars.

That perhaps they need a benefit.

That they should wait as they do on their annual drivers' and conductors' benefit till the season is over and cold weather has commenced, before they take one.

That now the musical mosquito
Appeareth on the scene,
And smileth broadly to himself
As he boreth through the screen.
And soon to our ineffable pain
He sendeth forth his weird refrain.

That a good woman who died in Ohio the other day left the sum of $113, which she desired to be used in the publication of a daily religious newspaper.

That she was an innocent old soul.

That the average cost of engravings in a single number of Harper's runs from $5000 to $8000.

That the Cynosure of Chicago goes on exposing Free Masonry and Odd Fellowship.

That those societies continue to live, as if to spite the Cynosure.

That Wendell Phillips says "the man who reads the paper has a telegraph wire that connects him with the world."

That Uncle Wendell is about right for once.

That Peabody has had an unusual number of marriages within the past two weeks.

That soon the pistol's sharp report,
The horn's continuous squeaking,
The crackers and torpedoes, too,
Will set our ears a tweaking.
We'll hear the music of the band.
The beating of the drum,
And all the world will realize
That the "glorious Fourth" has come.

That at last we are having some fine weather.

That we are fully able to endure it for some time longer.

That the weather prophets say July will be an exceedingly hot and dry month.

That if this proves true, those individuals who were swearing at the rain this month will be suffering from the pangs of repentance.

THE OIL CLOTH with which many children's carriages are covered, is said to cause poisoning to the occupants, from the action of the sun upon the white lead, and other articles used in the preparation of these cloths; a leading manufacturer says this covering ought not to be used, as it is designed for no such purpose; that baby carriages ought to be covered and lined with leather or plain varnished cloth only.

One-half of the new cable connecting America with Europe has been laid, and the end is now resting on a buoy nine hundred miles east of the Nova Scotia coast. When the steamer Faraday returns from London with the remainder of the cable, the two ends will be joined, and before many weeks another and probably cheaper means of communication with Europe will be furnished for the transmission of news and the transmission of business.

Lampton tells a rather funny but evidently true story about a Stubenville girl who rode on a narrow-gauge road up in Pennsylvania the other day. They had to put her on a nail keg on a platform car. She sat criss-cross, of course, and for over ten miles scraped the bark off the trees on both sides of the road with her feet. A tanyard man happened along and got over forty dollars' worth of new bark that was lying along the road. He offered the girl eight hundred dollars a year and traveling expenses to travel on narrow-gauge roads and scrape the bark off trees; but she belonged to a wealthy family, and said he was a "mean, sassy thing," and she would tell her pa on him."

"Sunlight and Shadow" is a mine of extraordinary interest. It can be truthfully said of it, that for thrilling interest, touching pathos and irresistible humor, no book has ever equaled it. In point of paper, printing, binding, and above all, beautiful and costly illustration, we have not seen its equal in many a day. It is superbly illustrated with magnificent full-page engravings, in the highest stylet from original designs by F. O. C. Darley, Fredrick Dielman, and other famous artists. The magnificent steel plate portrait of Mr. Gough was engraved from a photograph taken expressly for this purpose, and will be highly prized by tens of thousands who have listened to his eloquence. We advise our readers to buy "Sunlight and shadow" at the first opportunity. They can, in our opinion, much better afford to dispense with a dozen other books than not possess this.

A cold bathas a tonic can be used safely 'all the year round' (by those who can bear it at all) if one will remember that the temperature of the water should be uniformly about 60 deg. Fahr., and not take it as it comes, cool in summer, and way down towards freezing in winter.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

SALEM.

A boy by the name of O'Hare had a thumb and forefinger cut off by a moulding machine at Winslow & Rogers', on Boston street, Wednesday afteroon.

The Cadet Band have, thus early, more than fifty engagements for the season.

Lawrence E. Millea and Michael Devine, who have returned from their recent trip to Europe, are now once more engaged at their legitimate business.

Mr. Redmond, the artist painter,—all painters are not artists—celebrated the 17th by lettering the Skating Rink and Pavilion at the Willows. He is to put the words "Skating Rink," on the Siege of Paris Building, forty feet long, and facing the city, so that it may be seen for quite a distance.

The Essex Institute has arranged for a trip to West Point and the Catskill Mountains, to leave Salem July 13th, returning July 21st. The party will be limited in number.

The opening at the Willows Friday was a grand success. The crowd all day was great but in the evening it surpassed everything known at this favorite resort. The full Cadet band delighted everybody with its superb music. Salem can well boast of one of the finest bands in this section of the country. They deserve success.

The Naumkeag Clothing Company will hold a rowing regatta on the North River, Salem, June 29th, at 2 P. M.

There will be two races.

First,—a four-oared working-boat race, distance four miles, for which they offer a purse of $75 in gold. First prize, $40; second prize, $25; third prize, $10.

Second race,—Amateur single scull, distance three miles. Prize, a solid silver medal, value $12.

Eight clubs have entered for the first race. Four from Salem, three from Lynn and one from Marblehead. Six names have been entered for the scullers' race. A band of music will be furnished. Should the weather be unfavorable, the races will be postponed to the first fair day.

Several yachts went out from Salem to see the race of the Eastern Regatta off Marblehead Wednesday. Among them was the elegant yacht "Excelsior," owned by Mr. Willard Winslow, of Peabody. The "Excelsior" carried a number of invited guests, who enjoyed one of the pleasantest sails within the memory of man. The day was perfect, the wind off shore blowing a fair breeze from the northwest. The scene along the shore was one of peculiar beauty. Crowds of people had gathered to witness the race. The rich verdure of the fields under the glorious sunshine formed a charming view, and everything went to make it a most enjoyable day. The race was one of great interest.

Saturday evening as William Palmer was walking along Essex street, some boys coming up behind him and hit his hat. Palmer turned around drew his pocket knife and stabbed one of the boys named David Finn in the abdomen, inflicting a wound from which the intestines protruded. Finn was picked up and taken into the office of Dr. Fessenden, and Palmer was arrested and taken to the police station. Palmer is about 13 years old, and is not considered bright. Finn's wound although in a bad place is not considered dangerous. The Palmer boy answers to the nickname of "Darby Ross."

The proposals for the building of the pier for the pivot drawer to the Groveland bridge, ranged from $20,000 to $30,000, all of which were promptly rejected by the County Commissioners as being too high.

DANVERS.

Geo. Day formerly a breakman on the Eastern R. R. has been appointed baggage master on a Vineyard Express train.

The 17th was observed in Danvers by the stores closing at 9 A. M. and remaining closed the rest of the day with a few exceptions.

The Asylum team attracts considerable attention as it stops in front of the Post Office every morning and night; in the morning it is filled with ladies and in the evening gentlemen, and some very curious remarks are got off.

It is reported that there is to be a new hardware store in town.

The W. C. T. Union will hold a business meeting at the rooms of the reform club this evening.

The Associates at Tapleyville have disbanded and sold all their goods at auction.

A. M. Leach has turned his trotting horse "Express Boy" out to pasture for a for a few weeks.

The house occupied by G. A. McKellar on Charter street is receiving a new coat of paint.

Childrens Day was observed at the Universalist Church, on Sunday. The church was handsomely decorated with flowers, and evergreens, and appropriate mottoes were placed in all parts of the room. In the evening it was filled to overflowing, even in the aisles and entries. The service consisted of readings by Misses Trask, Rice, Gray and Boardman and others, singing by Miss Hamilton and by the school. After which Rev. F. A Dillingham made some eloquent remarks taking as his text "Children and Flowers," collection was then taken and the congregation dismissed.

Mr. Irving Rackliff has returned home from Cochesett where he has been for a long time as teacher of the Grammar school.

One thing this town needs and should have, is a watering cart; on the square especially. A good many store keepers have to shut their doors, even in the hottest weather, on account of the clouds of dust.

A. A. Berry is building a shop in the rear of R. D. Bates periodical store, which C. F. West intends to occupy as a paint shop.

Mrs. Wm. Kimball had a night blooming cerius in full bloom last Friday night, and many friends and neighbors were there to witness the spectacle.

BEVERLY.

John E. Morgan has contracted to build a stable for Capt. Newman, on Central street.

Mark Morgan has at last sobered off. He fell from his team yesterday forenoon, in front of the Old South Church in Beverly, and was picked up dead. Mark has been a conspicuous character on our streets for several years. He was a tall, red-haired, red-whiskered man who, with a delapidated team, made regular daily visits to Salem, accompanied sometimes by a dog, and always with a jug. It is so long since he knew a sober moment that he will not know himself when he opens his eyes in the other world. R. I. P.

Friday 20 members of Thorndike Bicycle Club of this town went to Newburyport and back on the machines.—They took dinner at the Eagle House, Rowley, where the kind and genial proprietor, Mr. Smithers, catered for the party in first rate style. Their travelling time to Newburyport was about three hours. They returned to Beverly about 8 p. m., well pleased with their day's journey. One of the club broke his machine and was obliged to return in the cars.

A fashionable wedding took place in town, last Thursday forenoon, at the house of the bride's mother, Mrs. Norwood, on Cabot street, the contracting parties being Miss Helen Norwood, of this town, and Mr. George M. Bard, of Cleveland, Ohio. The ceremony was performed by Rev. O. T. Lanphear. The couple took the train for New York in the afternoon.

Ripe strawberries were picked from a garden in town yesterday.

NEWBURYPORT.

The Annual regimental drill of the 8th. Regiment, M. V. M., took place on Atkinson common, about three miles from the centre of this city on Friday. Before starting for the common, the line was formed as follows, the right resting on the east end of the mall:—

Police, under command of Capt. James Stanton.
Lawrence Brass Band, 24 pieces, E. T. Collins, leader.
8th Regiment, M. V. M. Col. Benj. F. Peach, jr. of Lynn,
Lieut. Col. Chas. L. Avers, Newburyport.
Adjt. Chas. C. Fry, Lynn.
Quartermaster, Fitz W. Perkins, Salem.
Surgeon, Preston M. Chase, of Danvers.
Asst. Surgeon, Thos. Kittredge, Salem.
Paymaster, John G. Warner, Lynn.
Sergt. Major, Dennis Quill, Salem.

FIRST BATTALION.

Major, Edward F. Bartlett, Newburyport.
Co. M. Lawrence, Capt. L. N. Duchesney, 43 men.
Co. B. Newburyport, Capt. O. C. Lougee, 41 men.
Co. A. Newburyport, Capt J. W. Sargent, 29 men.
Co. F. Haverhill, Capt. G. H. Hanscom, 50 men.

SECOND BATTALION.

Major, F. A. Osgood Marblehead.
Co. H. Chealsea, Capt. Charles. J. Foye, 47 men.
Co. I. Lynn, Captain Charles E. Chase, 55 men.
Co. D. Lynn, Capt. Clarance M. Sprague, 59 men
Co. C. Marblehead, Capt S. F. McClearn, 33 men.

THIRD BATTALION.

Major, Wm. N. Tyler, Wakefield.
Co. F, Beverly, Capt. Charles L. Dodge, 42 men.
Co. K, Salem, Capt. Dan'l Casey, 43 men.
Co. L. Salem, Capt. Geo. A. Copeland, 41 men.
Co. G. Gloucester, Capt. Stephen Rich, 24 men.

At 10.30 o'clock, A. M. the regiment began their march, pasing on their way to the common, the residence of Mayor Robert Couch, which was gaily festooned with flags and buntin and over the portico of which was a flag with the figure 8 upon it. A marching salute was here paid to the Mayor, the City Council, and members of the press. "Tyng Cottage," and "Woodland." were also handsomely decorated with American flags. On the common, the customary drill took place, the dinner under the supervision of the popular caterer, H. P. Currier, was freely discussed, and a dress parade followed, after which the regiment marched down town, and were dismissed. Flags were displayed all over the city, salutes were fired and taken all in all, the seventeenth was well observed in Newburyport.

The body of a man was found in the dock at Thurston & Colman's wharf, about nine o'clock Thursday morning, which, upon investigation, proved to be the body of George Jefferson George, a blacksmith on Inn street, well-known here. "Accidental" was the verdict.

A day or two since we had the pleasof taking by the hand, the oldest inhabitant of this city, Mr. George Donnell, residing on Marlboro street, and in better health than one would suppose for one so old. He was 99 years old on Thursday, having been born in York, Maine, June 16th 1782, not 1780 as reported by the Herald, as that would make him 101 years old. He has a large number of descendants, all respectable, and living in this vicinity. Mr. Donnell has been a communicant at the Old South Church, since the year 1818, and on the 99th anniversary of his birthday, the pastor and the session called upon him and administered the sacrament.

ASBURY GROVE.

This place was never more lively than yesterday. A very large number of visitors came by rail and in teams. Mr. Rankin, the Superintendent, is putting the grounds in good order. Many of the cottages are being painted and remoddled. Every day new arrivals add to the number of families already here. Miss Annie Messervy of Salem, occupies a beautiful cottage on Highland Avenue, and Chester Smith, the Campmeeting Chorister, is near by. Mrs. James Buxton of Peabody, came yesterday, and next week there will be hundreds of new comers if the weather is fair.

There are over 25 families here now, and would have been three times that number but for the cold and stormy weather. Many improvements are being made on the avenues. Painters and carpenters have been busy for several weeks putting in order cottage all ready, or soon to be, occupied. Henry J. Waitt, of Lynn, has been doing a good deal of painting and glazing, and Nason is the boss carpenter of the Grove. They have been doing a very nice job in their line for the cottages of Mrs. Dr. Dudley on Main Avenue, which is a credit to their skill as workmen. The painting of this cottage is unique and beautiful. Dean Stiles, of Salem, also has been erecting for Mrs. D. a fine arbor on her grounds, which will be an ornament to the place when covered with flowers and vines. A. S. Hill & Co. are on the ground, and their grocery store is in full blast. They keep everything in the grocery and provision line, fresh and nice, and a family here can have all the luxuries of the season to be had in the city, and full as cheap.

Public religious services will be held soon, and until Camp Meeting pro commences, Rev. Mr. Wagner is to officiate. At Rankin's Livery Stable, close by, horses and carriages, to let, and the drives hereabouts are very fine, and not expensive. Mrs. Shepherd, of N. H., is here, and may be seen driving out with her fine team any fair day. She came on the first of May, and always spends her summers here.

MARBLEHEAD NECK.

Thousands of people from Marblehead and the surrounding cities and towns visited the Neck Friday to witness the regatta. The "Escort," Capt. Pitman, carried nearly 1500 across the harbor.—The barges also did a big business, and the main avenues were lined with carriages including numerous fashionable turnouts. The regatta was a grand success, There were 57 boats in the race, and just enough breeze to blow them along in good shape. The "Cyda," owned by Robert C. Bridge of Marblehead, took the first prize of the second class schooners; the "Gem" took the first prize in second class keel-sloops; the "Expert" first prize, third class centreboard sloops; second to "Thisbe," $10. Fourth class centreboards—first prize to "Vidette," $15; second to "Comus," $10. Fourth class keels—First prize to the "Dell," $15; second to "Hard Times," $10.

The "Dreadnaught," one of the largest and finest yachts that floats, often visits the harbor. Her crew consists of 17 seamen. It is stated that the original cost of this yacht was over $200,000, and although it is not many years since it was launched, it was recently purchased for only $20,000.

The yacht "America," Com. B. F. Butler, was in the harbor last Wednesday.

The Neck never looked so attractive as it does at present. With the inauguration of the new Club House, and the presence of the many fine yachts, all point to a gay and successful season.

The Osgood cottage, situated on the point of the Neck opposite Marblehead Rock, with the land (or rocks) under and adjoining, has been purchased by Mr. Sweet, the Boston banker, for $6000, and the cottage is now being removed to Clifton, a distance of some three miles. Mr. Osgood purchased the estate about a year ago of Gregory the seed man, paying, it is said, about $2000 for it. Mr. Sweet will keep the place open.

Mr. Frank R. Kimball, of Salem, is making arrangements to erect a stone cottage on his lot near the light house. A building to accommodate workmen is nearly completed, which will contain 18 sleeping rooms, a kitchen and a dining room. The cottage will undoubtedly be one of the finest on the Neck.

Mr. E. Poole's new cottage, near the club stable, is nearly completed.

IPSWICH.

Boating on the river was never better. The teams were all out, and went down to the base ball grounds.

Capt. Geo. Upton of Salem, was here Friday, riding out with Gen. Sutton, and has come with his family to remain through the season.

The Post says that a Boston business man recently tried to umpire a game of base ball between two nines made up of his employees, and before the fourth innings he had discharged everyone of the players from his employ, cut down the wages of the scorers and been thrown over the fence by the excited men.

They were approaching an ice cream saloon, and she said; "Oh, Charley, I'm going to have my new dress cut bias—Oh—oo. S-p-p-p!—there's an ice cream saloon, Goody." "Yes, and it is like your new dress, for it will be cut by us," and the horrid old wretch led the panting damsel across the street.—Whitehall Times.

A singular case of partial deafness is that of Mr. Edwin Cowles, editor of the Cleveland (O.) Leader. From birth he has been unable to distinguish any difference between certain consonent sounds—for instance, the difference between the soft sound of s and the sound of z, and in consequence his pronunciation is affected by his corresponding inability to make the proper distinctions in speaking. He is also unable to hear notes of high pitch, and high pitched voices. He can hear ordinary low conversation very well, but can hardly ever understand anything said by a public speaker. He says that if he were placed in a room filled with singing canaries he would be unable to hear a sin note, and indeed for many years he was firmly persuaded that the singing of birds was a poetical fiction. He has oftenwalked beside a policeman at night and seen him blow his whistle, but heard no sound, though the whistle could be heard by others half a mile away. Celebratdd aurists have told him that there is not another case like his in any of the books.

"William," she exclaimed, pushing him away from her, "You've been eating radishes." "Clara," he responded, reproachfully, "you forget that I live in a boarding house, and that radishes at this season of the year cost ten cents a bunch." Forgive me, Willie," she said, penitently, and riseng, turned the light down several degrees.

CARD.

Seeing in your last issue a Card signed by F. P. Bailey, ex-clerk of the Volunteer Engine Company, in which he says he never refused to give the books to me, I would here state that he did refuse more than a dozen times, saying he would lie in Salem Jail six months before the Company should ever have them—but I would here inform the readers of the Press that the foolish notion left him a few nights since, and that I now have the books in my possession. I would also thank Mr. Bailey for the advice he gave about sitting in rumshops, but should think that a man who frequents them as much as he does would be more toney and call them saloons, as rumshops does not sound well.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

It is going to be a hot July.

Mr. Isaac Hardy is building an addition to his tannery on Walnut street.

A rival steam railroad is spoken of to run between Boston and this place.

Mr. D. P. Grosvenor, Jr., with his family, has gone to spend the summer at the Willows.

Dole & Osgood made a shipment of some half-dozen wagons to Australia on Thursday.

Frost was reported at West Peabody Wednesday night, which touched the early beans.

Mr. T. P. Teague has returned from his visit to his brother in Detroit, Minn., and is looking well.

A new pin wheel has been put in at Dean & Blake's morocco shop, on Walnut street, during the week.

Workmen were engaged on Sunday in relaying the plank crossing at the E. R. R. track on Central street.

The Peabody Land League pic-nic will take place about July 18th or 25th, instead of 17th, as first intended.

The 17th of June was celebrated by the closing of most of the stores and the raising of flags in several places.

Two sessions will be held in the High school on examination day, in order that all the recitations may be heard.

A steer escaped from J. B. Thomas's slaughter house, Wednesday, but he was shot before he did much damage.

Mr. George M. Foster and family and Mrs. Mary Smith and family are at present residing at Asbury Grove, Hamilton.

A keeper was placed in the grocery store of Mr. Eben S. Howard, last Saturday, since which time his store has been closed.

A private party, consisting of a number of members of the Essex Club and their friends, took a sail down the harbor Friday.

The fountain in front of the depot has had one story taken off, and is now sending forth quite a respectable stream of water.

A little daughter of James E. Millea strayed from home on Foster Street last Wednesday and was found by the police in West Peabody.

The wagon of a fish vender in a neighboring town bears this startling announcement—James Sewall, Smoked and Pickled Fish Dealer.

Yesterday Henry Langley, a boy 11 years of age, fell from the ice cart of J. B. Newhall. The wheel passed over his foot, badly crushing it.

A runaway of a few minutes' duration stirred up things for a while on Lowell street, Thursday afternoon. The horse belonged to Mr. Samuel Trask, and the damage from the dash did not amount to much.

Considerable excitement was created last Friday by an organ grinder, who played his organ in front of the various empty stores, probably not realizing that the 17th was a holiday in Peabody.

The currying shop belonging to the O'Shea Brothers, on Grove street, which has been idle for a long time, is soon to be started up. Mr. Newman Perkins will carry on business there.

On Tuesday, June 28th, at 11 o'clock, the large tannery and currying shop, on the corner of Walnut and Wallis streets, owned by Atherton & Hall, will be sold at public auction by Fowler & Kendall.

There will be an interesting Sunday School concert at the Baptist Church, next Sunday evening, at the usual hour—7 o'clock. The sermon to children, announced for next Sunday morning, will be deferred one week.

Where are the glass ball shooters—our gallant archery club—the champion coquettists? Is Peabody, with its grand lead in science, literature and trade, to be lacking in these important essentials to general happiness?

Dog owners have no time to spare in getting their canines licensed. Before the first of July the Selectmen will issue a warrant giving the officers authority to dispose of every unlicensed dog found idling about the highways.

The canker worms are supposed to have had their run by the 20th. It is a remarkable fact that there has never been a canker worm seen at the town farm, although the neighbors a quarter of a mile away have been badly troubled with them.

Mr. John Osgood, watchman at Brown & Stanley's, found two lads under the coal sheds near the railroad track, on Wednesday evening, under rather suspicious circumstances. He secured them both and after giving them some sound advice, let them go. Mr. Osgood has before found boys around the shed with matches in their possession.

A boy named Timothy O'Shea was run over in South Peabody, on Wednesday, by a wagon containing a load of furniture. The boy was stealing a ride in under the wagon, and attempted to run out between the two wheels, and the hind wheel passed over him, and he was otherwise seriously injured. Let this be a warning to boys who make it a practice to catch on wagons.

June is about ready to begin her regular business.

The Sunday time on Mr. Stone's Lynn Coaches has been changed. See Adv.

A ten-year-old son of Mr. Harvey Buxton, on Andover street, fell from the hay loft, a distance of 14 feet, and struck his head, cutting a large gash. He is doing nicely at present and no serious results are feared.

On Thursday evening, June 23, a delegation of mediums from Lynn will visit the Peabody Society. Good tests and good speaking, psycometric readings, etc. Humphrey Hall, corner of Washington and Mason streets, at 8 o'clock.

Mr. David T. Winter has bought the land adjoining Ward's greehouse, on Endicott street, of Mr. John M. Berry, and intends to put up a house and stable for his own use. The land measures one hundred feet square, and will make a fine estate.

The annual examination of books at the Peabody Library will commence on Saturday, July 2d, and will include shelves from 1 to 390, and books will be ready for delivery on Saturday, July 23d. The remaining shelves, including all the other books, will not be delivered after July 9th, and will be examined and ready for delivery on Saturday, July 23d.

The annual examination of the classes of the High School will occur Wednesday next, the 29 inst. There will be two sessions on that day, commencing at 8.45 A. M. and 1.45 P. M. Parents who have pupils in the school and all others interested, are cordially invited to be present.

Miss McCausland and Miss Chase, teachers of the Center School, entertained the pupils of their classes upon Baxton's Hill, Friday afternoon. The little ones thoroughly enjoyed themselves, although some bad boys created a diversion by throwing sods at the teachers, who procured an officer and gave them in charge.

If people who think that a cold snap in June is unprecedented would put on their thinking caps they might be able to recall the fact that every June for many years past has given us similar weather, and in some years the mercury has gone lower than this year. The weather does not stray far from its average from year to year.

The Strawberry Festival at the Baptist Vestry, Wednesday evening, was a success, both financially and socially. The entertainment included readings by the talented young reader, Miss Ella F. Palmer, of Somerville. This young lady made a very pleasant impression on her audience, and it is to be hoped we shall have the pleasure of hearing her again soon. The choir sang some fine selections, and a social good time was enjoyed.

On Monday evening a very enthusiastic temperance meeting was held at the South Church. It was voted almost udanimously to sustain the Selectmen in enforcing the liquor law. A committee was appointed to consult with the Selectmen and to carry out the wishes of the meeting, and to ask the board to appoint a special police officer to enforce the law. Some stirring remarks were made, and the meeting adjourned subject to the call of the committee.

While making a blast at So. Peabody, recently, by John Scott & Bros., at Raddin's ledge, a large stone, weighing nearly half a ton, was thrown into the air.—When it came down it crashed through a small building situated near by, which was used for the shelter of horses. Luckily there were no horses there at the time or they would in all probability have been killed. The building was shivered to atoms.

Report has it that one of the liquor dealers who did not obtain a license decided to close up (?) his saloon after Wednesday night. Everything was to be closed out, and he had a large crowd and a big trade till about midnight, when he put up the shutters and locked up. The next morning he did not enter the saloon till about ten o'clock, when he found one os his best customers with his head on a lager beer keg, enjoying a refreshing slumber. He was somewhat confused when aroused, and begged the police officer (as he thought) to send for the "old woman" to bail him out.

Last Sunday was children's day at the Methodist Church, which was well filled, and the audience seemed to be well pleased with the exercises, which consisted of recitations and singing by the children, also singing by the choir. Rev. Dr. Steele's sermon was short and adapted to the young minds, though of equal interest to older heads. His text was from Mark 10, 14: "But when Jesus saw it, he was much displeased, and said unto them, suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of God." There was a very handsome display of bouquets, pot plants and cut flowers.

Miscellaneous.

THE ELECTRIC LIGHT—which is to be, doubtless — is exciting more interest throughout the civilized world than any other application of electricity, perhaps not even the telegraph nor telephone excepted, since the time when "Franklin caught the horse harnessed by Professor Morse." It seems to respond to a pressing and standing need of our nature, the desire for light, and promises to give, if one half the claims for it are reliable, complete satisfaction for the standing and growing demand for cheap and abundant light. The first command was "Let there be light;" and the prayer of Ajax: "Light, more light!" has been repeated ever since. There has been a wonderful advance in the present century toward supplying this desideration, for the generation are not yet all gone who struck fire with a flint and steel, from which spark they lit a tallow dip with a brimstone match. People went to bed very generally by dark, and those primitive appliances answered tolerably well. But as industries were multiplied, they must be carried on by night, as well as day, to ensure the highest profit, and as books and newspapers increased, and evening reading came in vogue, more light must be had, and oil, and gas, and finally kerosene, came along in succession, to supply the demand. But all of these have their disadvantage in lighting on a large scale, the expense and proverbially unreliability of gas, which large cities depend on, being an objection which has incited inventors to look to electricity as the ultimate and climax of all the forces of light. Yet thus far the results do not equal the promise, though several years have elapsed since Edison practically demonstrated that, as its name implies, lightning could be made a source of light. As the streets of London and several continental cities, together with various manufacturing establishments in this country and Europe are at this day successfully lighted by the Brush electric light, people naturally enquire what the matter is that it is not brought into general use at a fraction the cost of gas, as Edison promised; and many papers are going back on the great Yankee inventor, and claim that the Jablochkoff system or the Brush is ahead, and that the sanguine claims of his bit of carbon will all end in gas, on which we shall still be obliged to depend, and submit, another generation or two, to the swindles of the gas monopolists. But it should be remembered that the Brush light is one thing and the Edison quite another, and that while the former will answer well enough for streets, and some kinds of factories and stores, where the proprietors don't want their goods too closely examined—such a flickering, varying, uncertain light, as from the nature of its generation it must always be, can never be adapted to the demands of the people at large, who need in their private homes and offices the clear, steady, reliable glow of Edison's black diamond. It is a matter beyond dispute that his system is as sure a success as the railroad or telegraph, every objection in the working of it having been overcome, and the only stick now is the important one of cost. It can't, with the present appliances, give the people light as cheap as the gas companies can, but the inventor is on the right track, and gas, without doubt, will soon have to clear the track for a better and cheaper light.

SPEAKING "BY THE CARD."—C. H. Wood, Esq., of the C. & T. Ry., Port Huron, Mich., favors our correspondent with the following: After suffering for nearly a year with rheumatism, receiving treatment from most of the best physicians of Michigan and the West, I happened to try a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil. Upon the first application I used fully half a bottle, and its effect was almost instantaneous. I immediately dropped all other treatment, and confined myself to its use alone.—After the use of three bottles, instead of being driven to my business, or moving about on crutches, I walked from one to three miles daily about business, and have been free from this horrible disease for over a year, not having the slightest twinge of it.—Hence, I say that all medicines known to me are useless when compared with the old German Remedy. Use this statement when and where it suits.—Quincy (Ill.) Daily Herald.

The Lynn Transcript stigmatizes the "Globe" Company of Boston a "gigantic fraud," far exceeding the Ladies' Bank in the magnitude of its swindling operations. The Transcript says that the Boston press seems effectually closed against it by liberal cash advertising plums. If our neighbor is right, as he generally is, and as the probabilities indicate, the public will do well to be on the guard. It is a pretty safe rule to beware of investments that promise too much.—Marblehead Messenger.

The Billy goat's a pretty bird
And loves to dine on shirts;
But for a midday luncheon he
Prefers to eat hoop-skirts.
Old oyster-cans and rubber shoes
Appease his appetite,
While barrel-hoops and corset stays
Fill him with great delight.

Four newspapers in Texas are edited by women. And when a man gets mad at something one of these papers says, and goes in to larrup the editor and finds it's a woman, the way he feels mean is a terror.

Worldly Trifles.

"What are you doing in that basin of water? Don't you know you'll wet your clean wrist?" said his mother. "That's all right," said 6-year-old, as he threw a lucifer into the water, "I'm only watching a swimming match."

☞All cases of weak or lame back, back-ache, rheumatism, &c., will find relief by wearing one of Carter's Smart Weed and Belladonna Back-ache Plasters. Price 25 cents.

A young lady was caressing a pretty spaniel and murmuring. "I do love a nice dog!" "Ah!" sighed a dandy, standing near, "I would I were a dog." "Never mind," retorted the young lady, "you'll grow."

☞If you are nervous or dyspeptic, try Carter's Little Nerve Pills. Dyspepsia makes you nervous, and nervousness makes you dyspeptic; either one renders you miserable, and these little pills cure both.

A young lady at the ball called her beau an Indian, because he was on her trail all the time.

Superior articles in universal request are always counterfeited, and the pirates of trade, who pick up a living by depredating upon the rights of others, are constantly trying to cheat the public by substituting, imitating and falsifying Simmons' Liver Regulator; but beware! take none except under our copyrighted, engraved label, with seal, signature and stamp of J. ---

If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver, or "biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as to take SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR OR MEDICINE.

The Cheapest, Purest, and Best Family Medicine in the world!

A Effectual Specific for all diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Spleen

Regulate the Liver and prevent CHILLS AND FEVER MALARIOUS FEVERS, BOWL COMPLAINTS, RESTLESSNESS, JAUNDICE AND NAUSEA.

BAD BREATH!

Nothing is so unpleasant, nothing so common as bad breath, and in nearly every case it comes from the stomach, and can be easily corrected if you will take Simmons' Liver Regulator. Do not neglect so sure a remedy for this repulsive disorder. It will also improve your Appetite, Complexion, and General Health.

PILES!

How many suffer torture day after day, making life a burden and robbing existence of all pleasure, owing to the secret suffering from Piles. Yet relief is ready to the hand of almost any one who will use systematically the remedy that has permanently cured thousands. SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR is no drastic, violent purge, but a gentle assistant to Nature.

CONSTIPATION!

SHOULD not be regarded as a trifling ailment—in fact, nature demands the utmost regularity of the bowels, and any deviation from this demand paves the way often to serious danger. It is quite as necessary to remove impure accumulations from the bowels as it is to eat or sleep, and no health can be expected where a costive habit of body prevails.

SICK HEADACHE!

This distressing affliction occurs most frequently. The disturbance of the stomach, arising from the imperfectly digested contents, causes a severe pain in the head, accompanied with disagreeable nausea, and this constitutes what is popularly known as sick headache.

Portrait of FAITH WHITCOMB, the Shakeress, the most successful nurse of the age, who is now accomplishing more good through the distribution of her medicine than all the doctors in the country.

SPECIAL TO LADIES!

FAITH WHITCOMB'S Shaker Liniment is a Sure and Certain Cure for Inflammation of the Womb and for the distressing Lame Back, from which the majority of American women suffer.

A Boston gentleman, well known in business circles—in fact, one of the largest advertisers of the city whose wife has suffered for four years with inflammation of the Womb with constant lameness in the back—employing the best regular Physicians—and afterwards of the best Female Electric Physicians, expending vast sums of money with but little effect, has had no occasion to employ a Physician since commencing the use of last July. She is now well. She never has the Backache from which she was hardly ever free during the previous four years.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S SHAKER LINIMENT.

LADIES:—Instead of filling the stomach with wishy-washy medicines for so-called "Female Complaints," apply the proper remedy—externally—and you will obtain certain relief. Every regular Physician will tell you that the only wise treatment for the Inflamation of the Womb is by the external application of the proper remedies, and if you ask your Family Physician he will advise you to use FAITH WHITCOMB'S SHAKER LINIMENT, (to whom the recipe is open for examination.

INVALID LADIES

Who will send a postal card, simply bearing their address, will receive, prepaid by mail,

"FAITH WHITCOMB'S ADVICE TO MOTHERS,"

which every mother should read. Address, FAITH WHITCOMB'S Agency, Boston, Mass.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S LINIMENT.

THE GREAT SHAKER REMEDY

FOR

Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Pains in the Spine, Inflammation of the Kidneys, Enlarged Glands, Toothache, Croup, Earache, Sprains, Chronic Diseases of the Joints and Muscles, Bruises, Backache, Soreness of the Chest, Gout, Quinsy, Sore Throat, Swellings, Burns and Scalds, Headache, Frosted Feet, Chilblains, and all diseases of an inflammatory order.

FOR TOOTHACHE.

Boston Dentists use it in their practice and recommend it to their patrons.

FROM THE CELEBRATED SURGEON DENTIST, U. K. MAYO.

337 TREMONT ST. BOSTON, Aug 30, 1880.

I congratulate you upon the merited and enviable renown attained by your really valuable liniment. It is the most effective remedy for toothache that has ever come to my notice and I cheerfully recommend to my patrons. U. K. MAYO.

IT WORKS LIKE MAGIC IN INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM.

For proof of which please read the following:—

214 CAMBRIDGE ST., BOSTON, Sept. 20, 1880.

I am astonished at the wonderful properties of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment. Three weeks ago I was attacked with Inflammatory Rheumatism, my head was swollen to double its usual size and the Pain was intense. The first application relieved the pain. In two weeks after using two 50 cent bottles of the Liniment I was entirely cured. Those who are familiar with the Inflammatory Rheumatism and the time which it generally runs will agree with me that the Shaker Liniment is a remarkable remedy, and I advise Rheumatics to use it. J. F. SAWTELL.

The Boston Evening Traveller in referring to the above case says:—

"The cure of Mr. Sawtell, the well known grocer, of inflammatory rheumatism, is creating a decided sensation at the West End. Several gentlemen from the Revere House, chronic Rheumatics, called upon Mr. Sawtell for confirmation of the rumors of his astonishing recovery and found that the facts had not been exaggerated. Such cures place Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment at the head of rheumatic remedies."

CROUP.

SAVE THE LITTLE ONES.

"If Faith Whitcomb's directions are followed not one case of croup in a thousand will prove fatal.

"He will give further proof if you will call upon him.

BOSTON, Nov. 1, 1880.

This certifies that my wife who had been a sufferer from Neuralgia for twenty years, was cured by the use of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and four applications cured my back which was so lame from Rheumatism that I could not move without pain. I assure sufferers from Neuralgia and Rheumatism that this Liniment will sure y cure these diseases. I know it to be a fact that Mr. Lord, one of my neighbors at Greenwood who had been on crutches for fifteen years, and had unsuccessfully tried many remedies, obtained relief from less than one bottle of Shaker Liniment and Mrs. Wheeler of the same place another neighbor, a great sufferer from Chronic Rheumatism—is praising the Shaker Liniment in the strongest terms, for it is the only remedy that would help her. I shall be glad to give further proof of the value of this Liniment to any sufferers who will call either upon me in Boston or at my house at Greenwood. A. HANSON.

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER.

You know Physicians are proverbially shy of anything like patent medicines. Doctor Sylvester is no exception to this rule; but when he saw the formula of "Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment" he said "that is all right, that is a good remedy." He prescribed it for me when I was next assailed by my old enemy Neuralgia, or rather Neuralgic Rheumatism, from which I have suffered much, especially from Neuralgia of the Heart. It was a severe attack and I feared a long illness, but I used the Liniment freely and began to find relief very soon. In a week I was WELL. Its effects are almost magical. I will cheerfully recommend it to my friends. C. A. SYLVESTER.

SHERBURNE, MASS., Nov. 2, 1880.

Dr. Sylvester the well-known Physician of Sherborn, gives the following statement:—

SHERBORN, MASS., Sept. 20, 1880.

This certifies that I have examined the formula of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and the ingredients are such that it must be of great value in Neuralgia and Rhumatism. I use it in my family and I recommend it to all sufferers from these diseases, for it is better than any Liniment that has ever come to my notice. W. P. SYLVESTER, M. D.

When regular Physicians recommend a remedy, and use it themselves in their families you may be sure it has unusual merit.

A well-known Sunday School Worker gives his evidence.

WOBURN, Aug. 24, 1880.

The Shaker Liniment cured my wife of an enlarged joint, from which she suffered for months. A few applications cured her. I also received almost immediate relief in a case of acute inflammation and my son received great benefit in a severe attack of rheumatism. As a family liniment I think it has no equal.

E. N. CUMMINGS.

"It cannot be recommended too highly as a family liniment.

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, MASS., Oct. 20, 1880.

I have used Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment for rheumatism with the happiest results, indeed it is the best liniment that I have ever used giving me quick relief. It is not only efficacious for rheumatism, but for strains, sprains, etc. It can not be recommended too highly as a family liniment. C. H. LEWIS.

It always relieves Neuralgia and if the application is continued a cure can be dependedupon.

[From Hon. A. Maynard, the extensive manufacturer and founder of the town of Maynard.]

ASSABET MILLS,
MAYNARD, MASS., Aug 24, 1880

I gladly add my testimony to the value of the Shaker Liniment in case of Neuralgia and Rheumatism. By its use I obtained almost immediate relief, and unhesitatingly recommend it to my friends.

HOW TO GET A WIFE IN INDIA.

When a man in decent rank of life wishes to marry, and can prove that he possesses the means of maintaining a wife, it is customary for him to apply to the mistress of the Byculla School, state his wishes and qualifications, and inquire into the number and character of the marriageable girls. An investigation immediately follows as to the eligibility; and, if all promises satisfactory, he is forthwith invited to drink tea with the school mistress, upon an appointed evening, to give him an opportunity of making his selection. The elder girls are then informed of his intended visit, and its purport; and those who desire to enter the matrimonial lists come forward and signify their wish to join the party. Frequently four or five competitors make their appearance on these occasions in the mistress' room. The gentleman, while doing his best to make himself universally agreeable, yet contrives, in the course of the evening, to mark his preference for one particular lady. Should these symptons of budding affection be favorably received, he tenders his proposal in due form on the following morning. But it oftens occurs that the selected lady does not participate in the inamorata's sudden flame, in which case she is at perfect liberty to decline the honor of his alliance, and reserves herself for the next tea party exhibition.

We have known an instance when an amorous old gentleman from an out-station presented himself three successive times at these soirees, in the hope of obtaining a wife to cheer the solitude of his up-country residence, but all in vain; the young ladies unanimously rejected him with the highest disdain, wondering "how such an ugly old fellow could have the impudence to think of a wife?"

But a different reception is given to the dashing young sergeant or smart-looking conductor; their attentions are never repulsed, and the announcement of the "chosen intendeds," as Miss Squeers would say, is anticipated with the utmost impatience by many anxious young hearts. The wedding speedily follows, the bride's modest "trousseau" being provided from the funds of the establishment, and every girl in the school cheerfully contributing her aid in the manufacture of the dresses.—Life in Bombay.

WEIGHING CATTLE BY MEASURE.

The following rules are given by which the weight of cattle can be ascertained approximately by measurement:

Take the length of the back from the curve of the tail to the fore end of the shoulder blade, and the girth around the breast just behind the fore legs. These dimensions must be taken in inches. Multiply the girth by length, and divide by one hundred and forty-four. If the girth is less than three feet multiply by eleven; if between three and five feet multiply by twenty-three; if between seven and nine feet multiply by thirty-one. If the animal is very lean, one-twentieth be added.

Another way is to take all dimensions as before, in feet, and then multiply the square of the girth by the length, and that product by 3.36. The result will be pounds. If you desire to know what an animal will dress multiply the live weight by the decimal 6.05; the products approximates to the actual weight, very closely.

WHY HE DIDN'T RECIPROCATE.

A gentleman perceived a mason disputing with a young man. This latter having soundly shaken the mason, the mason raised a formidable ruler, which was in his hand, and was about to deal the youth a terrible blow full in the face. To ward off the blow was for the gentlemen only the affair of an instant. Immediately the mason turned his rage against him, and, although disarmed of his ruler, used his fists to good effect in pummeling the newcomer. Finally the police interfered and led the belligerent mason away. Furious, the gentleman turned to the young man, whom he had saved from a frightful wound and disfigurement, and demanded, severely, why, in his turn, he had not helped the one who had helped him against the quarrelsome mason. The young man lowered his eyes piously, as he said: "What! raise my hand against my father?"

WHAT WOULD HAPPEN THEN.

The following story, which is many years old, is located in Methuen, Massachuseets. A young man married and brought his bride home to live with his mother. The two women, as is sometimes the case, did not agree well together, and they quarreled so much that it at last attracted the attention of the Baptist church, of which both were members. Finally the pastor's wife sought the younger woman and remonstrated with her.

"Sister C.," she said, "why do you and your mother-in-law live so unhappily together? You are both members of the same church, worship together, and go the communion table together. What do you expect to do when you get to heaven together?"

"Oh," replied the daughter-in-law "she'll be changed."—Lowell Courier.

The walls of ancient Babylon were so broad that six chariots could drive abreast upon them. They existed for more than a thousand years after their destruction was prophesied; but its destruction came more than two thousand years ago, and from being the glory of kingdoms, it is a picture of desolation. "There the Arabian pitches not his tent; there the sheperds make not their fold; but wild beast of the desert lie there, and there houses are full of doleful creatures."

FAITH WHITCOMB'S

NERVE BITTERS,

Composed of Pure

Shaker Herbs.

AN INFALLIBLE CURE

— FOR —

Dyspepsia, Nervous prostration, Liver Complaint, Indigestion, Lassitude and Weakness, Loss of Appetite, Scrofulous and Cancerous Humors, Salt Rheum, Incipent Paralysis, Kidney Complaints, and the many diseases arising from an impure state of the blood, overwork, worry and indigestion. It renovates the whole system, working upon the Liver and Kidneys. It makes new blood; it builds up the debilitated system, and thousands will testify that it does all that is recommended for it. Do not neglect to try this great Shaker Remedy.

[From the Boston Herald of May 19.]

"The Shakers, as a class, are noted for their uniform good health. Their remarkable freedom from disease is due very largely to their appreciation of the great medicinal value of preparations of roots and herbs. That noble Shaker woman, Faith Whitcomb, has given to her brothers and sisters, and through them to mankind at large, that inestimable boon now so widely known as Faith Whitcomb's Nerve Bitters; and it is in the compounding of these Bitters, and her other Shaker remedies, that the immense quantities of roots and herbs raised by the Shakers are employed. Truly this is such a use of the knowledge gained by long experience for the benefit of mankind as cannot fail to make the word "Shaker" beloved by every sufferer who has found health and strength through the use of Faith Whitcomb's Bitters.

As a spring medicine it is unequalled. Being composed of pure Shaker herbs, comprising Sarsaparilla, Hops, Celery, Chamomile, Thoroughwort, Dandelion, Yellow Dock, etc., it acts directly upon the seat of the disease, and gives speedy and permanent relief. For dyspepsia, nervous prostration, indigestion, lassitude, billiousness, incipient paralysis, kidney complaints, etc., etc., it has proved itself of wonderful efficacy, it renovates the system, cleansing the blood of all impurities, and builds up the patient with every dose.

To obviate all doubt as to the authenticity of Shaker Bitters, attention is called to the language of John H. Sprague in this connection. He says: "The herbs of which Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Remedies are composed are gathered and cured under the personal supervision of the Harvard Community of Shakers, and the public can depend upon their purity. Faith Whitcomb's remedies are Shaker remedies of great value." Elijah Myrick, trustee of the Harvard Community of Shakers, says: "We use Faith Whitcomb's Remedies ourselves in our community, and heartily recommend them for the diseases for which they are recommended." The public can rest assured, therefore, that these Bitters are genuine Shaker Medicine, and will justify by their effects, the strong endorsements already given by thousands who have been benefited by their use. Dr. Geo. F. Brooks, of 122 Eliot street, Boston, a graduate of Harvard College, was asked by the writer concerning his experience with Shaker Bitters. Said the Doctor. "I have no hesitation in recommending them in the strongest terms for general debility, nervous exhaustion, and the like. My patients are highly pleased, and I, as a physician, am both gratified and surprised at the favorable results which have followed their use. You can make any use of my name which you see fit in commendation of these Bitters." The leading wholesale druggists of this city report the most astonishing sales of Faith Whitcomb's Nerve Bitters.—They say that no remedy in the history of the trade has sprung more quickly into popular favor. This, of course, is but natural, since there can be no fear of the patient taking into his stomach, through Faith Whitcomb's Bitters, any of those noxious drugs whith are so often palmed off upon the public. A genuine, honest remedy, of true merit, is bound to succeed.

Testimonials without number might be added to the above. Let it suffice to say that Faith Whitcomb's Nerve Bitters are one of the greatest remedies known to medical science to-day, and that the thousands of bottles which are being daily sold all over the country, afford the most conclusive proof of their popularity."

An Illustrated History of the Shakers, containing an account of remarkable cures effected by this great Shaker Medicine, wil be mailed, postpaid, to any address, or can be obtained free of your druggist.

CAUTION.—See that Faith Whitcomb's portrait is upon each wrapper.

"Just think of it!" exclaimed Jones; "Pingrey's new block is one thousand meters long." "Is that so?" asked Fogg, adding, "By the way, Jones, how long is a metre?" "Blamed if I know," said Jones, "but judging from the distance my gas meter covers every month it must be immense."

"Hi! where did you get them trowsers?" asked an Irishman of a man who happened to be passing with a remarkably short pair of trowsers. "I got them where they grew," was the indignant reply. "Then, by my conscience," said Pat, "you've pulled them a year too soon."

Down the Harbor.

A party of gentlemen might have been seen gathering around Mr. Quint's barge, "Belle of Peabody," at about half-past four on the morning of June 17, as it stood in front of Winslow's Clothing Store. Some were supplied with baskets and fishing tackle, while others amused themselves and the neighbors in the vicinity (who wanted to sleep) with that noisy musical instrument, the horn. The party numbered nearly thirty, and were the "regulars" and their friends bound on a fishing and pleasure trip down Salem Harbor.—Perhaps your readers won't understand who the "regulars" are. They are a party of gentlemen in the vicinity of the Square who go down the harbor every 17th of June and usually get seasick and sometimes "see a whale." After all were comfortably seated in the barge, Dennis the driver was given orders to proceed, and the noisy party was on its way for Phillips' Wharf, where the "Excelsior" was already in waiting. We were soon on board and with a light wind set our course down the harbor. The "Excelsior" is a two-masted schooner yacht, well-known as having belonged to the Custom House for several years, and is a model boat in symmetry of form and ample accommodations. Her crew consists of Capt. Cotter, a veteran in yachting service, Mr. Winslow of Peabody (the present owner), and a steward. We soon found ourselves well down the harbor but making slow progress, with a very light wind, which did not improve for several hours. The novelty of the situation however, a quiet game of whist or euchre, and assiduous attention to the wants of the inner man by most of the party, seemed to make the time pass quickly. After sailing some seven or eight miles the captain informs us that we have reached the fishing grounds. The sails are hauled down, the anchor dropped and the fishermen of the party watch and wait. At this time the hat is passed round, and a collection taken for the party who catches the first fish. After awhile one was rewarded, and safely landed a large cod weighing seven or eight pounds, and so the fishing continued till all were satisfied. The anchor is taken up and we start on our return voyage for Marblehead harbor with a faint breeze which improves as we proceed, and we soon are scudding along smartly, and rapidly passing all the sailing crafts around us. On our return we stop at the Willows and then proceed and anchor off Manataug just in time to see the starting of the seventh annual regatta of the yachtmen of Marblehead and vicinity. A yacht race must be seen to be appreciated. As we saw them at a distance, their white sails well-filled, they presented a wierd contrast to the fleecy clouds that flit across overhead.

After witnessing the race and fishing for some of the more common specimens of the finny tribe, we once more headed seaward; and as we glided over the quiet waters and passed the rock-bound islands in the harbor, our eyes drank in a beautiful sight while our thoughts were such as we could not describe. As we passed Half-way rock, that wild, picturesque and undescribably grand old hero, who stands like a grim, colossal sentinel, guarding with jealous care the vast repository of beauty and grandeur which was then laying so calmly at its base, we could but think of this same place in a storm when the waves dash in angry passion against these huge and invincible boulders. And then we look ahead with nothing but the open sea before us, while on our left and in the distance is Manchester-by-the-Sea, which awakes us from our revery and reminds us we are not irretrievably ingulfed in this grand old ocean.

After sailing outside some two or three miles our course was changed and we were homeward bound and arrived at the wharf about 6 o'clock. Until you have taken a trip in the "Excelsior" and enjoyed its hospitality and imbibed the pure and invigorating atmosphere, glided over those glassy waves and then contrasted it with other trips, you cannot say you know what a sail down the harbor is. Our party left the yacht at this point and returned home by Mr. Quint's barge. It was with regret that we parted from "Excelsior," which had played so important a part in this day of unalloyed pleasure. We trust all her voyages in future may be as prosperous and enjoyable as the one we so feebly endeavored to chronicle.

THE CLOSE OF THE YEAR.

GRADUATING EXERCISES OF THE PEABODY HIGH SCHOOL AT THE INSTITUTE, THURSDAY AFTERNOON, JUNE 30, 1881.

Peabody has always enjoyed the reputation of being among the first towns of Massachusetts in her educational institutions. Our teachers have few if any superiors anywhere, and our students embody equal talent and give promise of as brilliant a future as those of any other place.

The graduating exercises are usually very attractive to our people and to-day the Institute was filled by the large number of parents and friends of the Peabody High School, who listened with generous appreciation to the pleasing words and well arranged thoughts by the scholars who have won by three years of hard study the right to wear graduating honors. It was an audience to draw out the best efforts of a speaker and the class seemed fully to appreciate the fact. A fine programme was arranged and the exercises were opened at 2 o'clock by a piano duet—"Il Corricolo" by Misses Perkins and Tyler, which was rendered in a very pleasing manner. Then Miss Marion Taylor came to the front with the salutatory entitled "Objects and Obstacles" in a voice that could be distinctly heard in all parts of the hall. She spoke as follows:

OBJECTS AND OBSTACLES.

PARENTS AND FRIENDS: In behalf of my schoolmates, I cordially thank you for your presence here this afternoon. Our object in giving this Exhibition has been for the sake of pleasure to our friends, and as a suitable ending to our school-life, while no special regard has been paid to scholarship or rank.

One obstacle which presents itself is the small number in the class. But we hope this will not interfere with the exercises themselves, otherwise than by making them somewhat shorter than usual. As none of us are accustomed to stage life, we hope you will overlook all our mistakes and faults.

All of us who are going forth into the battle field of life should have some purpose in view for which to strive. Difficulties will present themselves on every hand, and many of them, no doubt, will be hard and pressing; but if we persevere and push boldly on, we shall at last overcome these obstacles, and victorious, reach the goal, and, receive a "crown of life."

The object of our school life has been to get our education, and if we have been true and faithful in our studies, to teachers, to schoolmates, and especially to ourselves, and we ourselves can best tell whether or not such has been the case, we have then gained that object. Many of the lessons have been difficult, and often times it has seemed to us that they were useless, but in the end we shall not regret having learned them. For, although we may not have occasion to apply the principles of some of the studies to our every day life, at least it will do us no harm, but rather good, to have studied them, and mastered the most difficult and complicated parts. Perseverance is a good quality to possess, and to gain almost any desired object, it is necessary to persevere.

Thomas Carlyle says, "The man without a purpose is like a ship without a rudder; a waif, a nothing, a no man." We, young men and women just about to commence the struggle, must have a purpose in life, if it is only to chop wood, or to sweep floors. And we must chop that wood and sweep those floors well—not hurry our work through in a slatternly manner, but be thorough, even though it may be disagreeable.—Let us have some ambition, and we shall rise by and by, perhaps, though we may not hold as high a position as our neighbor. If our business in life is to chop wood, we may sometime own a wood-yard, and the neighbor whom we envied for his wealth and high position may cut wood for us. Never doubting that any thing but success would cross his pathway, he has dashed into speculation, and failed; while we have stood by our purpose, and have succeeded.—He, despairing at his failure, has lost all interest in life, and has consequently gone to the foot of the ladder, while we have slowly, steadily, and surely gone up a round.

But now let us take another and an opposite view of this. Some of us may never have the good fortune to own a lumber yard; we may be compelled to chop wood or sweep floors day after day, and rise no higher, however lofty a flight our ambition may take. Then, too, we may be disappointed in our purpose at the outset. At first, all things may seem bright and cheerful, but some physical misfortune may oblige us to give up all our hopes, and we must live on, bearing it as best we can. But, even then, we may be able to do some good at home, to exert an influence, which, though it may be unnoticed by many, will survive, and do others good.

And why should not we regard doing our duty as the highest purpose in our lives? The man or woman who lives a quiet life can do his or her duty as faithfully as a person in public life, and often can exert as much influence, and I think I can safely say, in many cases, a far greater influence. The son or the daughter follows in the footsteps, and imbibes many of the principles, of the parents; hence the latter should live good and Christian lives, if they wish their children to do likewise. A pupil in school exerts a good or bad influence upon the other scholars, according as his character is good or bad. Sometimes, of course, the cases are just the opposite from what I have stated, but, as a general thing, influence is powerful for good or for evil.

A person with a good, true, honest character will always get along well in the world. He will not necessarily rise to a high position, but he will be beloved, trusted, esteemed and respected by all men, and, best of all, by his God.

Albert P. Chute then recited Knowles' "Apostrophe to Liberty," in a clear, manly voice, that left no doubt that he endorsed the sentiment. The School then sang, with good effect, an Anthem and a piece entitled "Greeting Glee."

Miss Helen E. Clothey spoke in a very pleasant voice, and had chosen a very touching piece, "Whistling in Heaven," which she seemed to grasp readily, both tone and expression being in perfect union.

P. A. Mahoney had chosen the piece entitled "Eulogy on America," and now stood forth to demonstrate his ability to carry it out in a manner at once graceful and commendable.

The school sang "Parting from Home," which was followed by Dumb Bells by the Masters in such excellent time as to make it one of the most interesting features of the exhibition.

"The Painter of Seville," by Miss Mattie Wilkins, was spoken with ease, and we have heard the piece recited by public readers with less effect upon an audience.

John Hanrahan followed with an original essay upon "Influence of Newspapers." The subject was very ably handled; and the far-reaching thoughts of the production were well expressed in his tone and gesture.

A piano duet, entitled "La Chasse Infernale," was then very finely played by Miss Wilkins and Master Chute.

Miss Minnie Tyler, excellent in gesture and oratory, with unstudied grace and well rounded tones, presented the beautiful piece by Hubbard, "Ave Maria." And as her rich voice brought out the few strains of singing, she held the undivided attention of the large audience.

W. H. Osgood followed with the class prophecies, which were somewhat different from previous years, and will be found in full in these columns. They were well received.

The school then sang "Sweet Summer Morn," and were followed by the Misses with Dumb Bells. Their exercise was shorter, but fully as good, as the Masters.

Miss Alice M. Perkins recited "On the Shores of Tennessee." The words of this piece convey beautiful thoughts, which were well expressed, and did the speaker much credit.

"The Rising of '76," by Miss Eva D. Raddin, was exceedingly well rendered, Miss Raddin having a splendid voice for the piece. It couldn't have been done better.

"Summer Sunset," a duet, was sung by Misses Tyler and Taylor, while the school joined in the chorus.

The Valedictory followed. Miss Maggie Linehan had won that honor, and went to the front quietly and spoke deliberately. Her production is meritorious, and will be found in full in another column.

At the conclusion of their parts, boquets were handed to Misses Clothey and Tyler, and to Master Chute. Miss Perkins also received a boquet.

The class song is as follows, written by Miss Annie Moulton:

Join in our heartfelt song,
Time swiftly flies along,
Hastening forever
Days that we here have spent,
Days on our tasks intent,
Seem but to pleasure lent
Where memory dwells.

Thanks for the love and cheer
Of our three teachers dear,
Give us each day;
Long may their virtues shine,
Wealth from God's precious mind,
Be added to their shrine,
Joy light their way.

So end these happy days,
Classmates, may all our ways
Shine as a mark.
Hitherto hand in hand,
Joined in a happy band,
Now on life's varied strand,
Each must embark.

After the singing of the Class Ode, in which the audience were invited to join, Rev. Mr. Hudson made a few remarks to the class. He congratulated them on the successful termination of their school career, with good wishes for their future welfare. Then the medals and diplomas were distributed, after which the prizes were given out, as follows:

After the close of the exercises, presents from the class were sent to the residences of the teachers. Mr. Ham received a valuable clock, purchased at the store of Mr. Starr C. Hewitt. To Miss Needham was given ten volumes of Carlyle, and Irving's Sketch Book. Miss Barrows was the recipient of a handsome cabinet album. The following letter was sent with Mr. Ham's present, and similar ones to the other teachers:

DEAR TEACHER:—Please accept this as a partial appreciation of your services rendered to us as a class, and as individuals.

We are no longer your scholars, but the graduating class of 1881.

In the Commencement Exercises of of Yale University in New Haven, Conn., we notice that among the law school anniversary exercises the Betts prize for best examination in junior was awarded to William R. Barbour, B. A., of New Haven. He is the eldest son of Prof. Barbour, Preacher to the University, and formerly of this town. We congratulate him on his deserved success.

We noticed last evening an improvement in the looks of the fountain opposite the depot by the addition of two beds of coleus and white stevia, placed there by our well-known florist, Mr. J. M. Ward, gratuitously; and we hope all citizens will help protect them, as Mr. W. says he put them there as an experiment, and if they are not disturbed, another year he will greatly enlarge on his first effort in beautifying the public gardens of Peabody.

A number of improvements are going on at Monumental Cemetery. The handsome lot of the Abel Proctor family has recently been graded and newly sodded. Handsome granite curbing has been placed around it, and large granite posts at the entrance and at each corner. Mr. Andrew Curtis and Mr. Joseph Poor are adding granite curbstones and grading their lots.

CLASS PROPHECIES.

On the 16th of June, of this year, Prof. Whitington, by my special request, was invited to Peabody, to examine phrenologically the heads of the different members of the graduating class of 1881.

The Prof. arrived on the day stated, and was conducted to the room provided by the class for this occasion. After the introduction and compliments, the Prof. began to exercise his art.

From the first he was attracted by the appearance of Maggie Linehan, and the number of bumps on her head showed that she had not a poor combination of faculties. The most prominent of which is Inhabitiveness; not far behind come Approbativeness, Firmness, Hope and Spirituality.

None of the harsher kind are found in her case. With such a combination as this, a common life will not do; she must go where it is quiet, where she will be alone and out of the bustle of this busy world. Let me suggest a convent, as a quiet place.

We have something rare in Miss Tayor. She is rather different from most girls; she possesses Self-esteem, Firmness, Calculation, and Conjugality in no small degree. Destructiveness is also a prominent feature; she does not have that Individuality common to most girls, and she has not so much weight as many.

These faculties combined seem to promise that she is doomed to the life of a sober maiden lady, despite the Conjugality so prominent a feature in her youth. We see her in her old age with Tabby in her lap, and her spectacles on the end of her nose, while her fingers are making the knitting needles fly.

Master Hanrahan is the next in line. It is astonishing to know to what a high degree he possesses Conjugality, Self-esteem, Caution, and Vitativeness.—When his head was more carefully examined, it was found that the bump signifying Mirthfulness, one of the Self-perfecting group, was a prominent feature. Tune and Language cannot be kept in the shade, except by the lock of false hair, under which we see him after many years of hard toil. He has now arrived at the height of his ambition. He is chief editor of a paper that represents a new political party, with the name of which we shall all be familiar in years to come.

With Miss Wilkins, Firmness is one of the principal features. She is not lacking in Spirituality, Approbativeness or Sublimity, and as these faculties seldom unite without forming a good and efficient matron, she will take her station in some charitable institution where she will reign supreme.

Miss Clothey has no common combination of organs. The most prominent is undoubtedly Mirthfulness. Conscientiousness, Spirituality and Eventuality are also prominent features, this last especially with regard to the stars. This combination is seldom met, but when it is seen, there is but one inference to be drawn.

Such people generally like to hear themselves talk and to make themselves heard. Not having sway enough in this town, she left for a region where she might have a greater range. If one should happen to go that way she might be heard on certain occasions lecturing on "Woman's Wrongs," "The Influence of Women on American Politics," and similar subjects. It is said that she thoroughly understands her subjects, and that her enunciation is excellent.

In Miss Perkins, Sublimity, Imitation, and Individuality, are most prominent. No other of the class has such a combination as this, and it shows that she would need a wealthy partner on life's stormy path.

She has another series quite different from these, among which are Approbativeness, Mirthfulness and Color; the latter is perceptible to even an unpractised eye. Having learned the milliner's trade, she has set up a wholesale house in the millinery and fancy goods line, Jordan, Marsh, & Co., R. H. White & Co., and other large firms having been obliged to suspend on account of Miss Perkins' monopoly in that line.

Master Chute always did like the looks of certain young men about town, and the consequence is that Individuality is one of his prominent features.—One with common eyesight and sense of touch might feel, and perhaps see, more bumps on his cranium, that no one could be ashamed of; among the highest are Vitativeness, Cautiousness, Spirituality and Alimentiveness. With such a combination as this one ought to live long and be good. As he was an ambitious boy in school, he went to Andover and studied for the ministry. After a number of years of preaching, he thought he might do more good among the uncivilized Africans, and immediately set out for his station at Lake Albert Nyanza.

Some time after his arrival he was out walking, when he came across a gorilla; this animal he thought to be an uncivilized native. In hopes of doing some good he extended his hand to welcome him; but in turn he was grasped and squeezed so tightly that nothing was left to tell the tale but his only pair of shoes.

One would not realize at sight what an extent of territory the bumps signifying Mirth occupies on Miss Tyler's head. Friendship, Continuity, Cautiousness and Firmness are also prominent traits. The bumps signifying Ideality, Individuality and Tune are conspicuous.

The phrenologist found some difficulty in determining the future career of this young lady. To use his own words "She may be an expert with the brush or the chisel, perhaps appear on the stage; under some circumstances she might turn elocutionist, governess, or even a school teacher." He might as well have left this statement out, for he could get no member of the class to believe it.

Tune in Miss Moulton is very conspicuous; and Conjugality, Vitativeness and Spirituality are also prominent features. She had a great desire to travel, and it seems as if this has been gratified. For quite a number of years she was neither heard from nor seen by any one of us, and when it became known that she was again in town a member of her old class called on her, who inquired where she had been these few years. She said that about two years after leaving school she was married; immediately she and her husband removed to the diamond region in Africa. He bought extensive tracts of this country, where he was uncommonly fortunate in finding the precious stones.—After staying here for seven years they resolved to return to America. And now

With diamonds on her fingers,
And a diamond in each ear,
She sits by the window,
And never sheds a tear.

The features most prominent in Master Mahoney are Cautiousness, Combativeness, and Alimentiveness. The organs signifying Language and Individuality might be felt if the bump of Policy on his head was only a little smaller. It seems as if one might get along with this combination, which signifies that some active life is in store for him. He got all in-door life he wished at the Institute, and, thinking that one in the family was enough for the navy, took up the trade of a general mechanic.

Having gone West and set up for himself, he might be seen by those traveling this way figuring for contracts, or searching his brain for new and cheaper methods for carrying out his designs.

As to my phrenological characteristics—which, no doubt, would make a long list—the Prof., after mentioning but one peculiar feature, was suddenly called away by a dispatch from home.—He left his card, saying he hoped to come to Peabody again on a similar occasion, when he would be happy to meet the whole class, or any individual member, and departed with the good wishe of all.

VALEDICTORY ESSAY.

READING AND STUDY.

There is a difference in the manner in which books may be read. Some people may read only one book carefully, and in the end will have gained more knowledge than others who read several books without thought, obtaining so little knowledge from the reading that the time is almost wasted.

Ralph Waldo Emerson has given us three practical rules in regard to reading books, from which we may profit, namely: I. "Never read any book that is not a year old. II. Never read any but famed authors. III. Never read any but what you like." Books that are a year old will be more likely to have gained a reputation as they will have been more widely read, and therefore more generally criticized; and it will then be determined whether it would be profitable to read them or not. If we commence to read authors who are not famed we shall be influenced by their style of writing, and acquire the habit of reading such authors, and, consequently, we shall never enjoy the works of standard writers. If we undertake to read any book we do not like we are likely to read it quickly and without receiving any benefit therefrom; while if we like the book we probably shall read it slowly and carefully, endeavoring to obtain from it the greatest amount of knowledge possible. Dr. Johnson said that he always went into stately shops; so, in regard to reading and studying books, we should read famous authors. We can only acquire a taste for literature by always reading carefully the best authors, and it would be better to give close attention to a few excellent authors, as Shakspeare, Milton, Scott and Dickens, than to waste our time over a host of no repute.

Regular study, which tends to strengthen the mind as food does the body, makes us desirous of becoming better acquainted with men, whose books are means by which their thoughts and ideas are expressed. In studying any author, our first endeavor should be to grasp all his thoughts.

Although reading and studying our best authors may be perhaps distasteful at first, still we can gradually acquire a taste for the best literature. Those whose reading and study have been most careful and regular have made vast acquirements in knowledge that will be of benefit to others as well as to themselves.

The mind needs to be refreshed by a change of reading and study. Study develops and increases the powers of the mind as exercise develops the muscles of the physical system; and as frequent, but varied, exercise improves the body, so regular but varied reading and study improves the powers of the mind. One who has read and studied only the best authors in youth will always select for his own reading those books which will benefit him the most. His advantages over others who have not been most careful in the selection of reading matter will be many; he can apply his knowledge to various occupations, and can do better in whatever he undertakes. By means of his reading his vocabulary is increased and he thus acquires an exact use of language.

In reading and study all the powers of the mind should be brought to bear upon the subject in order that we may clearly understand it, as all the physical strength of the system is applied when any difficult task is in progress; and as some kinds of labor demand more strength than others, so some kinds of reading and study require more mental application.

Teachers, we thank you for the patience and the interest which you have manifested in our behalf; for your endeavors to set us in the path towards a true education—and we all desire that your efforts in the future may always be crowned with success.

And now, classmates, we meet here together for the last time as members of the school, where we have spent three happy years. Henceforth our pathways will diverge, and, while looking back with pleasure upon our happy school-days, let us each try simply to do our duty and to perform faithfully whatever task circumstances may bring before us.

Parents and friends of the class, in behalf of my classmates, I thank you for your kind attention to our exercises this afternoon.

Maggie Linehan.

ESSAY.

THE INFLUENCE OF NEWSPAPERS.

The influence which the press exerts over the minds of all educated and enlightened people has reached an enormous extent in this nineteenth century. Those portals which never open to receive their newspaper cannot in this day be called a home. Such a place is more like a prison shut off from all intercourse with society, dark and dreary to all within. The newspaper should find its way into every household, and everywhere should be received with equal joy, for wherever it goes, be it in the palace of the rich or the simple cot of the poor, it carries with it a brighter ray, a higher aspiration than was there before. It is an untiring messenger, ever bringing to us tidings from all parts of the world, and is becoming every day more appreciated. No home is now complete without its paper, and no person reads it who is not influenced in some manner by what he reads. One is almost unconscious of the sentiments deeply planted in his mind by what he has read. Were one to travel, no matter where, he would not feel at rest without this companion to solace his idle moments with thoughts of home and native land.

The clergyman in his pulpit counts his hearers by hundreds, but an editor on any of our large dailies numbers tens and even hundreds of thousands who daily read and share his thoughts. How many people are there who have no other reading than the daily newspaper! These people have no other literature; they daily scan the columns of their little instructor, and receive therefrom their knowledge of the doings of men about them, and from that knowledge so received they judge of the world and its actions. These people are guided almost entirely by what they see in the press; their thoughts are formed by the thoughts of the press; their opinions are based upon the opinions of the press; they actually live upon the press. As the sun in heaven furnishes light to all external things, so the newspaper banishes the darkness of ignorance from the mind, and leaves us benefited by its light. The history of the present is fully as important as the history of the past. In the text books of the schools may be found recorded the deeds of former days, but where will we find a text book of the living present? From the newspaper only can such a knowledge be obtained. And it is becoming more apparent that all future histories shall be compiled from the Heralds, the Suns, the Times, and the Tribunes of to-day. It is thus that the press becomes a great instructor of the age, and a powerful rival to schools.

All great intellects, from the day of the first paper, have felt the importance of the press, and have bowed before their superior. "Four hostile newspapers are more to be dreaded," says Napoleon, "than a hundred thousand bayonets." Thomas Jefferson says, "I would rather live in a country possessing newspapers and without a government, than in a country with a government and without newspapers." A person through this source keeps himself informed of the doings of the world, and here he has the deeds of men laid before him as clearly as if he were an eye-witness. As this medium presents it, so he sees it, and almost unconsciously he falls in with the writers' opinion, and views it by the same light. As thus the press becomes the moulder of the opinions of the world, so journalism has risen in importance until it is now styled "the lever which moves the world." "Great is journalism! Is not an editor a ruler of the world, being a persuader of it?" asks Thomas Carlyle.

In April, 1704, appeared the Boston News Letter, the first paper published in America. To us it occupies the same place in journalism as did the Acta Diurna in ancient Rome, the Gazetta in Venice, and the News of the Present Week in old England. Gigantic have been the strides in journalism since then, and the little News Letter has shrunk to a meagre nothing compared with the giants of to-day. We are amazed when we think of the first papers struggling along, happy in a few hundred readers, when now over a billion and a half of copies are furnished annually to the people of the United States alone! During the Revolution twenty-five newspapers supplied the wants of three millions of inhabitants in the thirteen colonies; to-day over nine thousand live and thrive among fifty millions of people in this country.

Books fail to fill the place occupied by the press; a book once written cannot be changed—its opinions will always remain the same. But the newspaper brings before its readers every day different ideas—it is a world of ideas, a library of books in itself. We have daily emanating from all quarters of the globe papers devoted to science, to art, to religion and to education.—Articles appear in each from the most celebrated pens of every nation. The greatest divines have descended from their pulpits, where their audience is limited and their words are soon forgotten in the ever changing tide of life, to use the press as a medium to convey their thoughts to thousands, and to place their ideas upon permanent record. Lawyers have turned aside from their juries, and through the newspaper have multiplied the twelve a thousand fold. Statesmen have expounded their ideas and spread their beliefs through this medium—in fact the newspaper is the voice of the world, a window through which men look to see what is going on outside.

Great have been the advantages attained by the press through the telegraph. It is placed in almost instantaneous communication with all quarters of the civilized world, and its news is brought up to the latest moment. Thus we might say we are in sight of the last feeble glimmerings of a star fading out of the firmament of eastern nations; we are in hearing of the exulting shout of a down-trodden and oppressed people as they rise in the strength of their despair and shake off the galling yoke of thraldom; we can read and ponder over the ideas of an orator or statesman almost 'ere the thunders of applause, greeting his passionate words, have died away.

The press has become a power in the land; it has risen with the people, and with the people only will it fall. It is a natural preserver of the rights of mankind. While it stands powerful, oppression and wrong cower and shrink away, tyrants tremble in their strongholds, and the crack of the slave whip does not frighten. Curtail its privileges, or abate its liberties one jot or tittle, and the sceptre of power will pass away from the people; one by one the seemingly adamantine props to our government will crumble to the dust, and our nation will become a thing of the past.

John Hanrahan.

Miscellaneous.

SUCCESSFUL TRIAL OF THE MANCHESTER LOCOMOTIVE WORKS' STEAM FIRE ENGINES AT RANDOLPH, MASS.

On Wednesday of last week, as announced in our last issue, Steamer Randolph, No. 2, arrived on the morning freight from the Manchester Locomotive Works, at Manchester, N. H., and was soon after placed in the house of the Pioneer Hook and Ladder Co., No. 1, until the house for the Steamer should be completed. Here the Steamer was put in readiness for the trial that was to take place on Monday afternoon. At the hour appointed, the Steamers were taken to Barry's Brook, on North street, by A. J. Gove, where the trial took place, accompanied by Randolph Hose Co., No. 1, Foreman James Farrell, who laid hose for both Steamers. Weston P. Alden was engineer of Steamer Randolph No. 1, and John T. Cartwright, fireman; John E. Wilson of Manchester, N. H., was engineer of Steamer Randolph, No. 2, and Fred. Howard, fireman. There were present, as distinguished guests, Messrs. Chas. H. Howard, chairman, J. White Belcher and Jona. Wales, of the Steamer Committee, Aretas Blood, Esq., Agent of Manchester Locomotive Works, Israel O. Endicott, of Manchester Locomotive Works, James R. Carr, of Manchester, N. H., Fire Dept., Chief Engineer George Cushing of Hingham, L. D. Shaw, Inventor of Shaw's Relief Valve, Boston, H. H. Easterbrook, Secretary Massachusetts State Fireman Association, Boston, and correspondent Fireman's Journal, New York, C. H. Holt, engineer of Steamer Brockton, No. 1, F. P. Holmes, formerly foreman of the old Columbian, Brockton, Messrs. John T. Flood, John B. Thayer and Royal T. Mann of the board of selectmen, and Messrs. Charles A. Wales, chief, Levi Wilbur, James E. Neary, John B. Wren and Henry H. Francis, of the board of engineers. Fire was started in Steamer Randolph, and in one minute, fifty seconds, steam began to generate. In three minutes, blew whistle.

The first trial was through 100 feet of hose and 1 1-8 inch nozzle, resulting in throwing a stream 296 feet. Second trial was through two line of hose, 100 feet each, 1 inch and 1 1-8 inch nozzles, distance 248 feet. Third trial, four streams, 7-8 inch nozzles, 100 feet of hose, distance 195 feet. Fourth trial, 50 feet of hose, 1 stream, 1 inch nozzle, distance 293 1-2 feet. Fifth trial, through 1050 feet of hose, up hill, 1 1-8 inch nozzle, water reached the nozzle in 45 seconds and was then thrown 201 feet. After a trial of about three hours, every one admitted that they never had seen two engines so evenly mated, and doing their work so nearly alike. It will be observed that we have given only the record of Steamer Randolph, No. 2, and the reason is as has been stated. The Steamer committee, board of selectmen, and board of engineers expressed their gratification in possessing two superior engines, and accepted the Steamer at a cost of $3500, and a 1-horse hose carriage at $500. The exhibition was a pleasure to all who were present, as the many expressions testified The distinguished visitors returned home the same afternoon, with the exception of Mr. Wilson, who remained until Thursday. Further remarks are unnecessary. The two Steamers are superior machines, and the exhibition was highly appreciated and enjoyed by all present.—[Manchester Mirror.

FEMALE MIDDLE CLASS EDUCATION GERMANY.

The culinary art forms part of the education of women in Germany. The well-to-do tradesman, like the mechanic, takes a pride in seeing his daughters good housekeepers. To effect this object, the girl on leaving school, which she does about fourteen years of age, goes through the ceremony of confirmation, and is then placed by her parents with a country clergyman, or in a large family, where she remains one or two years, filling what may almost be termed the post of servant, and doing the work of one. This is looked upon as the apprenticeship to domestic economy. She differs from a servant, however, in this, that she receives no wages; on the contrary, her parents often pay for the care taken of her, as well as for her clothing. This is the first step in her education of housekeeper. She next passes, on the same conditions, into the kitchen of a rich private family, or in that of some hotel of good repute. Here she has the control of the expenditure, and of the servants employed in it, and assists personally in the cooking, but is always addressed as Fraulein, or Miss, and is treated by the family with deference and consideration. Many daughters of rich families receive a similar training, with this difference, however, that they receive it in a princely mansion or a royal residence. There is a reigning queen in Germany, at the present moment, who was trained in this way. Consequently, the women of Germany are perfect models of order and economy. The richest lady, as well as the poorest woman, is well acquainted with the market-price of provisions; and it gives one real satisfaction to see her bustling about from one part of the house to another; now peeping into the nursery to see how the children are going on, then looking into the kitchen to see that the cook is doing her duty, and that everything is perfectly clean, and generally giving an eye to everything and everybody, and keeping all well up to their work. In short, she is the very soul of the house.

OLD TIME VALUE OF GREYHOUNDS.

The existence of dogs which hunted by sight and not by scent is mentioned by Arrian, who is also known by the name of the younger Xenophon. What the precise class of dog was to which he refers cannot now be discussed, but the fact remains undisputed that dogs existed in the second century which hunted by sight, and this is one of the characteristics of the modern greyhound. From the frequent reference, moreover, to this class of dog in the writings of all sporting authors from the most remote periods, it is evident that greyhounds were always the popular dog with sportsmen; and it is further noticeable that they were employed in the capture of animals other than hares in those days. The wolf and the wild boar were both hunted with greyhounds, who must presumably have been both larger and more powerful dogs than those of the present day, or they would have been unable to have coped with such powerful foes. As a proof of the value set upon greyhounds, it is remarkable that prior to the signing of Magna Charta by King John we learn that the destruction of a greyhound was looked upon as an act "equally criminal with the murder of a fellow man." We are further informed that greyhounds were "frequently taken in payment as money by the kings for the renewal of grants, and in the satisfaction of fines and forfeitures." One fine paid to King John, in 1203, consisted of 500 marks, ten horses and ten leashes of greyhound; another, seven years later, was one swift running horse and six greyhounds.

RUNAWAY HORSES.

The horse that has once acquired the habit of running away, says "The Book of the Horses," will bolt on the first opportunity. If you suspect his intention, the best plan is to check it the moment he begins to move, taking hold of one rein with both hands, and giving it one or two such violent jerks that the rogue must pause or turn round. Then stop him, and, if you doubt your being able to hold him, get off. Perhaps a too vigorous "plug" may make him cross his legs and fall—not a pleasant contingency, but anything is better than being run away with in a street. In open country you may compel the runaway to gallop with a loose rein until he is tired, or to move in a constantly-narrowing circle until he is glad to halt. A ten-acre field is big enough for this expedient. But the great point is to stop a runaway before he gets into his stride; after he is once away few bits will stop a real runaway—a steady pull is a waste waste of exertion on the rider's part. Some horses may be stopped by sawing the mouth with the snaffle, but nothing will check an old hand. Another expedient is to hold the reins very lightly, and on the first favorable opportunity, as a rising hill, for instance, to try of succession of jerks. But the cunning, practised runaway is not to be so much feared as the mad, frightened horse. The mad horse will dash against a brick wall, or jump at spiked railings of impassable height. I once saw a runaway horse, after getting rid of his rider, charge and burst open his locked stable door.

Let us remember that no earnest man, in any time, ever spoke what was wholly meaningless; that, in all human convictions—much more in all human practices—there was a true side, a fraction of truth, which fraction is precisely the thing we want to extract from them, if we want anything at all to do with them.

Self-love is at once the most tenacious of our sentiments—a mere nothing wounds it. but nothing on earth will kill it.

THE CLIPPED HORSE.

He was attached to a cutter and hitched to a post in front of the City Hall, and after giving himself a shake to clear off the snow, he said:

"Yes, I'm one of the clipped horses. It's warm enough to-day, but I've been in a constant shiver ever since winter set in. Just you take off your clothing down to your shirt and face the rigors of winter and see how you would feel over it."

"But why did they clip you?"

"Under the idea that I would trot faster, and because my owner was too lazy to care for me when I came in wet. He didn't care for my comfort at all, but looked entirely at his own."

"And do you trot any faster?"

"Not a bit. Can a shivering man run faster than a warm one? I am stiff and sore, my nose runs, my eyes are weak, and I have still further cause for complaint."

"In what?"

"Come over on the avenue this afternoon and see how I am used. Nature gave me a fair gait. My owner goes to work and puts weights and boots and straps on me, bits my head up, clips me, and tries to do what nature couldn't do—make me a fast horse. The weights give me an awkward gait, the check makes my neck ache, and the cold wind prevents my blood from circulating. That isn't all."

"Well?"

"I'm expected to get right down and pass everything on the road. I'm raced up and down till I am out of breath, and then sent flying to beat a fresh horse. You've seen me go? I do my best, of course, but when I'm out of breath I've got to change my gait. The instant I strike a gallop my head is twitched this way and that, my mouth lacerated, and ten to one I get a dose of the whip and hear my driver say, 'Consarn 'er! If she don't stay down I'll cut her to pieces!'"

"That isn't right."

"Right! Why, the law ought to make it greviously wrong! I can trot as honest as a dollar in three minutes, but because I can do this I am matched against horses which can do ten seconds better. Not only that, but I am lashed and ill-used because I can't beat them. If my owner was to run a foot-race, would he fasten half-pound weights to the toes of his boots? Would he wear knee-pads? Would he have his head pulled back on his shoulders? And. then, if he got beaten, would he submit to a thrashing? I tell you, it's wrong."

"Yes."

"And I don't always get a fair show. Other horses get a long start, or I have to travel in the snow, or we meet with an obstruction. My owner never makes any allowances for these things. I am expected to rush to the front and hold the place, and if a faster horse outfoots me, down comes the whip, and the driver growls: 'Take that! and that! and I'll sell you for a cent."

"And what can you do?"

"Only one thing. I believe I'll run away."

"And go to sea?"

"Not hardly. I'll smash the cutter and take myself off into the country. I'll get a rest, anyhow, and if I am picked up as an estray and not reclaimed, I'll fall into some farmer's hands, who'll treat me well for what I can fairly do."

"When will you go?"

"Now—right off—good-by."

A band struck up to furnish a good excuse. One pull broke the strap, a wheel and a kick cleared the cutter, and as the horse flew up the street everybody yelled:

"Stars and garters! but ain't that clipped hoss a clipper!"—M. Quad.

HIS FIRST BRAWL.

My brother, younger than myself by two years, a very bold and hot-headed boy (who was then about 14, and I two years older,) one Sunday, between the Porta San Gallo and the Porta Pinti, got into a quarrel with a youth of 20, sword in hand, and pressed him so closely that he gave him a severe wound, and was proceeding further, but a great crowd had gathered, among which were many friends of his antagonist, who, when they saw things going badly for their friend, began to throw stones, one of which struck my poor young brother on the head, so that he fell down as if dead. I, who happened to be present, though without either friends or arms, called out to my brother to withdraw, as he had done enough. As soon as he fell down, I rushed to him, and, seizing his sword, placed myself in front of him, against many swords and stones lifted against me—nor ever left my brother till some brave soldiers came from the Porta San Gallo and saved me from the crowd, wondering much to find such courage in one so young. I then took my brother home for dead, and it was no easy matter to bring him to himself, When he was cured, the Eight, who had already sentenced our adversaries to years of imprisonment, banished us for six months outside the circuit of ten miles from Florence. I said to my brother, "Come with me," and thus we took leave of our poor father, who, instead of giving us money, which he did not possess, gave us his blessing.—Memoirs of Benvenuto Cellini.

A certain amount of concession to opinions and rights of others is absolutely necessary to a true neighborly relation with those who live near you. If, as the Irishman said, everybody should insist on standing still in the street, how could anyone get by?

Friendship is woven fast by interwoven benefits.

TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.

Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,
Universalist Pastor.

For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.
Peabody, Mass, June 27, 1879.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,
Of Beverly, Mass.

I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, CATARRH, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him; his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.
Beverly, Mass, Oct'r 29, 1879.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,
Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence. Ms.

My dear Dr. Lighthill,—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the larynx into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted, I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.
Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.
Lawrence, Nov. 4, 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,
Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.

The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celbrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.

I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.

I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.
R. S. LAMBERT.
Boston, Nov. 26, 1880.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.

From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,
Piano Manufacturer, 185 Washington St., Boston

Dr. Lighthill,—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.
I have the honor to be very truly yours,
A. M. McPHAIL, JR.

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.

From Mrs. M. A. Emery.

Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends, and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,
Mrs. M. A. EMERY,
359 Lowell Street,
Lawrence, Sept. 21, 1880.

HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES.
A REMARKABLE CURE.

From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.

Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man. G. H. ROBINSON,
Methuen, Nov. 1st, 1880.

Please Remember—Dr. LIGHTHILL'S Office is at 115 Boylston Street, Boston.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

I have this day associated with myself, as Editor and Proprietor of this paper, MR. JOHN P. FERNALD, and the style of the firm will be C. D. HOWARD & CO.

CHARLES D. HOWARD.

Referring to the above announcement, the Junior Editor desires to say, that, in connecting himself with this paper, he will renew the pleasant relations already previously enjoyed with the patrons of the Press through its columns. It has been his privilege to contribute in various ways to the paper, in former years, under different signatures and in its editorial pages. The enterprise and success of the paper has been of interest to him from the commencement of the publication of the So. Danvers Wizard, he having been a compositor in the office in its infancy.

We shall endeavor to make the Press a live, readable paper, and more than ever devoted to the interests and welfare of our own town. We shall uphold and approve all measures and movements tending to the advancement of our town; and while we shall be liberal, just and courteous to our opponents, we shall not hesitate to condemn principles and measures that in our judgment are not conducive to the building up of a town in all that should make it prosperous. This paper will be an independent sheet, in that it will not be connected with any other paper, either daily or weekly.

MR. ALBERT VITTUM, who is so well and favorably known to the patrons of the office, will continue as Manager, and no pains will be spared to make the Press in the future, as in the past, worthy of the patronage of our citizens.

Rev. L. L. Wood furnishes a long article in this issue on the Temperance question—considered especially with regard to the late Citizens' Meetings. It will be read with interest by those who dissent from some of the points he makes, as well as those in sympathy with him. We desire again, in this connection, to state that we are not responsible for the views of our correspondents; we welcome the discussion of any questions of interest to our town in these columns: all we ask is brevity, courtesy, and freedom from personal allusions.

We give place in another column to an able article on the Indian Question, from the pen of Carl Shurz, the editor of the New York Evening Post. Had we space or inclination, the recognized authority of the writer forbids comment on our part. The time is soon coming when our country, with its growing civilization, must meet this issue. We commend the article, as well as one subjoined from the Boston Globe, to the attention of our readers.

It is now sadly evident that not only is the peach crop in this vicinity badly injured, but that many trees are seriously affected, and some even destroyed, by the cold storms of this season.

Last evening as a boy named Riley, about 5 years of age, was playing on Perkins street, near the Naumkeag Mill, he was knocked down and run over by a heavy stone team, the wheel passing over his head, fracturing his skull, and causing instant death. The team belonged to William Hayes, of Peabody, and it is stated by spectators that the driver did not stop to see what he had done but drove on, leaving the lad in the street.

It has been reported that Samuel Mackintire was building a house on Dearborn St. The report is incorrect. It should be that Samuel A. Mackintire is about to build a house on Osborne Street

Messrs. Smith & Smart have just had one of the new telephones put in to connect their shop with their foundry. The bleachery at Peabody has also put one in use. It is claimed that one can now talk two miles with them.

The first jury at the Superior Court before being discharged, at the expiration of the term Friday, presented Deputy Sheriff Osgood with a gold-headed cane, in appreciation of his gentlemanly conduct as officer in charge of said jury. The presentation was made by foreman Galloupe, of Beverly, which was feelingly responded to by Major Osgood, who had been taken completely by surprise.

The committee on celebration have made arrangements for a band concert on the Common by the Cadet Band, from ten to twelve in the morning, and at the same hour by the Salem Brass Band at the Willows. The Cadet Band will play at the Willows from three to five in the afternoon, and the Salem Brass Band on the Common until the regatta on the North River at five o'clock. There will be three entertainments for the children in Mechanic Hall. Fireworks will be exhibited on the Common, beginning at 8.45 in the evening. J. S. Moulton's Juvenile Opera Company will give two performances of "Bells of Corneville" at the Willows during the day.

DANVERS.

Mrs. Wm. Fowle had a "Night Blooming Cereus" in full bloom Friday night, which was witnessed by many friends and neighbors.

A horse driven by Chas Williams in the employ of H. A. Moore, being frightened on the road to Beaver Brook, Tuesday by a cow jumping over a fence shyed and commenced kicking, striking the driver quite severly on the foot giving him quite a flesh wound.

At present there are a number of stores on the square that are vacant. Stores with such good location should not lay idle.

The long summer vacation begins this week, and the school children look forward to it with a good deal of impatience.

A large crowd of people turned out to see Gen. Weaver, Wednesday, and the streets presented a lively appearance. The General was escorted to the hall by the Danvers Brass Band. The meeting was opened by I. W. Andrews, Esq., who made a few remarks, and then introduced the speaker, Gen. Weaver, who made an eloquent speech, which took up the time until 10 o'clock. The band gave very good music, and there is no reason why they cannot make a first-class band, with more practice and perseverance.

BEVERLY.

Schools have closed for a vacation of nine weeks.

Some of the shoe manufacturers will close their factories during the week of 4th of July.

Collector Ober informs us that there are about $13,000 worth of uncollected taxes due.

Mr. Joseph Vickery has his new shoe factory, on Mulberry street, nearly ready for occupancy.

The tickets for the Deaf Mutes' Fair, which is to be held in the Town Hall, next Tuesday and Wednesday, are selling well.

John Carter, the oil clothing manufacturer, intends putting in a thirty horse power steam boiler at his factory, on Park street.

Charles Knox, the veteran expressman, employed by Marshall & Moulton, had one of his feet badly bruised in being run over by a heavy express wagon; fortunately no bones were broken.

Some of the members of the Beverly Cadet Band played with the Danvers Band, which furnished the music at Gen. Weaver's lecture, given in that town on Wednesday evening last.

Mr. Irving W. Allen has commenced the publication of the Beverly Record, a new advertising sheet, which is to be published weekly for gratuitous circulation. It is a small sheet, about the size of the Evening News, and is made up in a tasty manner and finely printed. Experience will soon show its enterprising proprietor the inside working of newspaper work, and prove to him the old saying that "Distance lends enchantment to the view." Success to you, Brother Allen.

ASBURY GROVE.

Messrs. C. B. Hodges and E. R. Moulton are on Fiske Avenue.

Mrs. Kempton, of Stoneham, has re painted her cottage.

There are now here more than fifty families, and still they come.

Rev. Mr. Beekman is making improvements on his cottage on Thompson Avenue.

Mrs. Sumner, of Boston, is here.

Mrs. Rachel Smith, the matron of the Old Ladies' Home in Boston is having her cottage enlarged and improved by Mr Snow of Somerville.

Mrs. Wm. Shepherd, who recently met with a serious accident, is now able to ride out. Mrs. Shepherd is the wife of the proprietor of the Manchester House, Manchester, N. H., and always spends her summers here.

Mrs. Keith of Salem has one of the most expensive and convenient cottages on the ground and always lives here during the heated term.

One who has long known this place and spent several seasons here, says: "There is no more healthy place in New England and no place in the State where more real comfort and pleasure can be found and enjoyed than in this city of the pine-woods. The water is pure and cold, the air fragrant with the perfume of pine and spruce and wildwood flowers. Unlike the fashionable watering places, ladies and children can walk or ride out, or roam the fields, without being "dressed up" and are wholly free from the restraints of sea-shore and other fashionable resorts. And then it is just as cheap living here as at home, and yet you can have all the luxuries of the season."

Indian Education.

From its beginning the Indian Office has been the best abused branch of our public service. But now and then things come to public notice which show that after all some wise and promising work has been done. Two such things attracted public attention last week. One was a public examination of Indian pupils at the government school established at Carlisle in Pennsylvania; and the other was the passage through New York of a number of Indian boys and girls from the Normal School at Hampton, Va., to Massachusetts, where they are to spend two or three months in the families of farmers. There are at present over three hundred and fifty Indian children receiving their education at Hampton and Carlisle. All of them have been voluntarily surrendered to the government by their parents for that purpose, and many hundreds, if not thousands, more could have been had in the same manner, had the Indian Office been able to provide for their accommodation. This proves that the Indians, the wild tribes as well as those more advanced, have begun to understand and appreciate the necessity and value of education. And the surprising progress made by the Indian pupils not only in the rudiments of knowledge, but in the practical occupations of civilized life, furnishes encouraging proof of their desire and capacity to learn and to work. Whoever is still in doubt as to the possibility of civilizing Indians should go to the schools at Hampton and Carlisle, where such doubts will be speedily solved.

These things are of especial importance at a time when thousands of miles of railroad are built year after year, and when the rapid advance of settlement and business enterprise in our western states and territories renders the hold which the Indians have upon their hunting grounds and reservations more precarious every day. To the next generation of our people the picturesque and self-reliant Indian hunter and warrior, with paint and feathers, will be a thing of the past. The necessity of assimilating their modes of life with ours will soon be upon all the Indians, and their preparation for that necessity must not only be wisely conducted, but it must be as expeditious as possible. This necessity may in some respects be called a cruel, in others a beneficent one; at all events it is inevitable. The education of Indian children is one of the most essential parts of their preparation for the great change. We cannot expect to transform old men and women, who have grown up in savage habits, all of a sudden into civilized beings. We can so educate their children that they grow into civilization. The schools at Hampton and Carlisle, where Indian children are instructed under the immediate influence of civilized surroundings, are serving this object under their excellent principals General Armstrong and Captain Pratt with remarkable success.—They furnish the teachers and leaders of the coming generation of Indians.

The school at Carlisle is a government institution; the Normal School at Hampton is supported by private munificence, but the government pays a certain sum annually for each Indian child educated there. These expenses have so far been defrayed from a "civilization fund" at the disposal of the Interior Department which did not depend upon annual appropriations by Congress. Had the latter been necessary, it is probable that the Indian school at Carlisle would never have been established, and Indian education at Hampton would have been limited to a very few individuals. But the "civilization fund" will soon be exhausted, and direct appropriations for the support of the Indian schools in the East will become necessary. It is to be hoped that the public sentiment on the Indian question, which has recently been awakened, will not permit Congress to neglect institutions of so beneficent a character. Appropriations ought to be made for the establishment of at least ten more schools like that at Carlisle. It would be a measure of the wisest economy. It has often been said that, compared with the old way of managing Indian affairs, it would have been cheaper to board all the Indians at the Fifth Avenue Hotel. It will certainly be the cheapest, as well as the most humane method of treatment ever applied to them, so to educate their children that they may be enabled to support themselves and to become orderly and useful citizens.—N. Y. Weekly Post.

It is thought that the key to the Indian problem is found. Captain Pratt of the Indian school at Carlisle, Penn. intends to ask Congress to enlarge his facilities so as to admit 1,000 Indian children to the advantages offered there for their education. A similar school at Hampton, Va., will make a like request, and much of the money which is now virtually squandered on the aborigines could be profitably diverted into other similar channels. It has been found that the most enlightened chiefs favor this scheme for educating their offspring and thus far the work has been fraught with good results. It is estimated that 50,000 boys and girls of a school age can be reached within a few years among the various nations, and the expense of educating them would be but a trifle compared with the cost of an Indian war. If the friends of education in the West will take hold of this project there is no doubt that the condition of the Indians will be greatly improved. Congress can undoubtedly be counted upon to furnish substantial aid when it finds that the plan is heartily indorsed and supported by education.—Boston Globe.

The match game of base ball between the Atlantics and Excelsior base ball clubs of this town at the picnic of the F. M. T. A. Society at Centennial Grove, Thursday, resulted in a victory for the former; score, 15 to 8. Mr. Felix Cassidy won the prize for the best standing jump.

Last Wednesday evening a daughter of William Larrabee, of South Peabody, about five years of age, while barefooted came in contact with a needle, which penetrated nearly its whole length into her foot. Her mother in trying to extract it broke it off. A doctor was sent for, and the child etherized, but he was unable to find the remaining part.

Mrs. Lizzie Reed, residing on Lynnfield St., South Peabody, having occasion to be away on business Wednesday afternoon, found upon returning home that the house had been entered by some evil-disposed person and rifled to a considerable extent. The entrance was effected through a back window, and everything in the eatable line was carried away.

On Saturday, a notorious character named Claxton had more liquor than he could carry, so he dropped down upon the front steps of the residence of a citizen which had just been painted. Claxton wanted to be vindicated from all bad intention, but the painter had to do some brushing on those steps, while no amount of brushing could obliterate the marks on Claxton's habiliments.

Rumor has it that a prominent railroad man from Lynn was in town on Thursday, consulting with and getting the opinion of some of our citizens upon the proposed extension of the Lynn Street Railway to this town. It was further reported that this line would be built this fall. This is the best piece of news that has been vouchsafed to us for a long time, and we only hope it is true.

Miss Stratton, a teacher in the Wallis School, who lives at the farm of Albert Howe in Danvers, gave her pupils one day last week a very pleasant entertainment by sending a barge for them, and after a visit to the Danvers Insane Asylum they returned to the farm where amusements such as swinging, croquet, etc., together with a good supper made the day an enjoyable one.

A young man on crutches was run over on Central street, Friday, by a man who was perambulating the sidewalks upon one of those modern inventions—a bicycle. The party owning the bicycle said he came from Ipswich, and would not give his name. Gentlemen who use the bicycle, and sometimes indulge in races, should make it a point to keep clear of the sidewalks, and do their racing in the middle of the road, otherwise they and their machines may become public nuisances.

The space between the tracks and between the rails of the Eastern Railroad, near the depot, have been filled up with sand and gravel from Chelsea beach.

Workmen were engaged Monday taking up and repairing the turn-table of the Naumkeag Street Railway at the Square. A large standing committee kindly looked on and offered suggestions.

During the shower Monday night large numbers of frogs fell in different parts of this town, and the next morning you could scarcely step in some places without crushing some of them.

The large tannery and currying establishment on the corner of Wallis and Walnut streets, belonging to Atherton & Hall, was sold by Fowler & Kendall, Tuesday, to a Mr. McGowan of Medford for $7,100.

A workman employed at the currying shop of Nelson & Merrill, put a lighted pipe into his pocket Tuesday forenoon and in a few minutes his clothes were all on fire. The timely assistance of his fellow workmen prevented serious results.

Quite a curiosity exists at the house of Henry D. Larrabee, of South Peabody, He keeps a number of cats, one of which had a litter of kittens, and while the mother nurses the kittens the grandmother nurses the mother—all at the same time.

Holten Lodge, I. O. O. F. elected the following officers Tuesday evening:—N. G., O. B Chadwick; V. G., Geo. E. Lewis; Rec. Secy. Irvin Besse; Treas. Geo. F. Sanger. The elected and appointed offices will probably be installed next Tuesday evening.

A couple of young scamps, Jim Claxton and "Monkey" Murphy entered the barn of Mr. A. L. Ames on Central street and stole his team last Monday afternoon. The team was afterward recovered, and Claxton was arrested in the afternoon by officer Ruth, and chief-of-police Peasley succeeded in capturing Murphy late Monday night. They were brought before Justice Merrill and bound over in the sum of $500 to the Oct. term of the Superior Court.

A dog belonging to Mr. Geo. Foan found a human jaw, under the barn of the old Poole estate, on Pierpont street. It is said that it belonged to an adult, male person. The mystery is easily explained by the police and others, who made an investigation. It appears that when Grove St. was laid out, some forty-five years ago, it passed through an old grave yard, and the bones were taken to Harmony Grove and buried, while the earth was used to fill in around the Poole tannery. While workmen were engaged the day before the jaw was found in putting water into the building, it is natural to suppose it was thrown out with the dirt, and was part of the remains from the old grave yard.

Another theory is that the barn was occupied some five or six years ago by one of our doctors, who might have used the jaw for dissection.

It must be apparent to every careful observer that our town is at present increasing at a rate unexampled in her past. We are informed by the School Committee that the pressure of this new growth is beginning to be seriously felt in the schools. The Sub-Primaries are crowded beyond all accommodation, and their condition will soon necessitate other school buildings unless some other means of relief can be devised. If the age of admission or school age as it is known, were fixed at six years, instead of at five as at present, temporary relief at least would be afforded. Inasmuch as the Statute requirements are fulfilled by admission at any age under eight years, and as everyone knows that little or nothing is gained by the attendance of pupils under six, except perhaps the saving of care to their mothers, no serious objections can be urged to this plan. It certainly is the most feasible of any yet suggested to meet the emergency referred to.

Haying has begun.

Livery rigs are in fair demand.

Wild strawberries are ripening.

The boys are all saving their money for the Fourth.

The sun is now doing its best in the way of early rising.

Sufficient cash you should muster and purchase a new spring duster.

Lime can now be used as a disinfectant in alleys and out-houses to a good advantage.

A great falling off in the corn crop is predicted. Corn in these parts isn't getting high. It wants something warm to take.

Our exchanges say there were 42 Irishmen applied for their first naturalization papers and took the oath of allegiance to the U. S. last week.

Mr. Geo. Shove employed at Geo. C. Pierce's cork sole factory found a centipede among the cork the other day, which measured two inches in length.

The reel oven used at the bakery of Mr. Frank A. Bragdon has been removed, and is to be replaced by a square, brick oven. Mr. J. Arthur Trask is doing the mason work.

Mr. Thomas C. Durkee has presented us with a box of unusually large strawberries, raised by him upon his "red" farm. They are called the Crescent, and 25 fill a quart box.

The following will be the inscription on the new Soldiers' monument:

The Town to her Sons who died in the Great Rebellion, that the Union might be preserved and liberty secured to all.

Weston has by this time probably made up his mind to retire upon his past laurels and quit tramping on the tan-bark. Rowell can now justly claim to be champion walker of the world, and it would require a great deal of temerity on the part of any pedestrian to engage in a match with him.

Dr. Haley's horse was left standing on Lowell street last Friday, when two children were allowed to get in. The horse took fright at something, and started on a run toward the square, but coming in collision with a lamppost, he was checked, and the buggy demolished. The children escaped without injury.

All women who have voted for School Committee's men, or who have any interest in this privilege, are invited to meet at the W. C. T. U. Room on Thursday evening at a quarter of eight. Miss Mary A. Varney of Salem is expected to be present to explain to and advise the ladies of Peabody.

This afternoon Union Post 50 G. A. R. attend the funeral of Comrade Enoch Bryant, who served in Co. H., 19th Mass. Volunteers. To morrow they attend the funeral of Comrade Owen Mullane, 2d, a seaman in the U. S. Navy, who served on the gun boat Tennessee.

On Wednesday evening, several lads and misses who are to graduate from Miss Hannan's room in the Wallis school, called upon her and presented her with companion busts of Summer and Winter. Miss Mabel Forness made the presentation speech, and a social hour ensued.

About 12.30 on Sunday, lightning struck the barn of Mr. William Blaney on Vine street. The bolt entered the cupola and passed through the building, setting fire to the hay. The fire department promptly responded and soon had it under control. A horse that was in the barn at the time was rescued. The loss is about $800 and is insured.

Post 50 G. A. R. have just added to their room excellent cabinet pictures, nicely framed, of several deceased comrades, and intend to continue adding as fast as comrades are taken away. Those received comprise portraits of Frank B. Messer, J. Henry Aborn, Nathl. C. Harris, John H. Dodge, and George C. Chase. They were executed by Cross, and are consequently well made.

Last Tuesday the examination of the first, second, and third classes of the Wallis grammer school took place. A large number of visitors was present, and after the examination was over exercises of reading and singing followed. Among those who read were Misses Drew, Flynn, Fowler, Goodwin, McPherson and others. Among those who sang were Misses L. and N. McPherson, Blake and Galucia, who formed a quartette and sung "The Sweet Birds of Spring." The rest of the other exercises were by the class.

The scholars of the first, second, and third classes made presents to their teachers. The first class gave to Mr. Barnes a handsome pickle jar. The second class gave Miss Hill a handsome napkin ring and a gold pen. The third class gave to Miss Stratton a handsome fan. All the teachers were pleased with their presents.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Upton has tendered his resignation, and it is understood that Mr. John M. Carson, Washington correspondent of the New York Times, is to be his successor.

The total population of Boston as finally returned by the United States census superintendent is 362,839.

Nearly 150 buildings were burned by the fire at Tombstone, Arizona, on Wednesday, and the property loss will reach $250,000.

The gambling fraternity of Madrid seek to overawe the authorities for interfering with their unlawful calling by placing dynamite explosives in churches and letter-boxes.

The most disagreeable creatures on the earth are women who neither read nor toil, but spend their lives in asking questions about their neighbors' affairs and retailing gossip. They create misery wherever their tongues can wag and no one can escape them. You may be entirely absorbed in your duties and think yourself safe, as you never intrude on others, but these tongue-stringing beings will find you out and wound you if possible even if compelled to manufacture lies for the purpose. A few suits at law would silence these evil-minded women and give peace and comfort to those who neither wrong nor desire to annoy others good men and women who ask nothing save elbow-room to work in, and a few friends whose faith and love and steadfastness reaches beyond all time. More families have been broken up and more misery, distress and sickness, caused by these pests of society than disease could possibly reach, and yet whole neighborhoods sometimes delight in this vile work on every week day, quite forgetting on Sunday that they have been guilty of "malice and all uncharitableness.'

These gossips know your place of birth better than yourself; your ancestors are manufactured to suit themselves, your bank account is depleted or augmented according to their ideas or their special dislike or jealousy, and as to your age why even the recorded page of the family Bible stands for nothing with these people who "know" everything save the decencies and courtesies of life. It is a thousand pities that such wholesale manufacturers of scandal cannot be made to pay a heavy license fee, for even free rum with all its abundant horrors cannot create more wretchedness and suffering than the tongues of gossips, whether male or female. K. T. W.

Bury all of our statesmen 'way out in teh woods,
In a great, deep, dark hole in the ground,
Where the owl and the rat.
Where the skunk and the bat.
And the straddle-bugs tumble around.
There's a land that is hotter than this,
Where editors never can stand,
They will only bubble and hiss,
O sigh for that beautiful land.

They will sweat bye and by,
They will sweat in that beautiful land.

To a widower: "Is it true that you are going to marry again?" "It's very true." "And whom do you marry?" "My dead wife's sister." "Is she handsome?" "No "Rich?" 'Not at all·" "Then why have you chosen her?" "To tell you the truth, my friend, in order not to change mother-in-law."—[Paris journal.

Robert Ingersoll reviles the Bible and pokes fun at the Creator; but when he came here to speak to the members of the dominant party, a long procession passed through our streets to do him honor; bombs, rockets and Roman candles were thrown about, utterly regardless of life or limb. Now when the patriotic citizen wants his children to remember that 4th of July is of more importance than Robert Ingersoll, he is immediately sat down upon by a veto.—Cor. of Gloucester Advertiser.

Dr. Loring, of this city, will next month take his place as the head of the United States Agricultural Bureau, and by his theoretical and practical knowledge, and enthusiastic interest in the matters pertaining to his office, he will doubtless confer a dignity upon it, and redeem it from its position of a butt of ridicule which it has held, as a hot-bed of impracticable theories, wild speculation and ruinous experiments. It is to be hoped that his conduct of the bureau will be so judicious as to convince the Government of the expediency of elevating it into a department, thus giving our immense agricultural interest the dignity conferred on it in many other countries, and placing the genial and accomplished Doctor in the Cabinet.

We trust the good sense of Dr. Loring will induce him to ignore many of the foolish and expensive pet schemes which have characterized the bureau in times past. Millions of dollars, for example, have been expended in experimenting in silk and tea-raising, the only result being to prove what everybody knew before, that we can and that we can't raise both those adjuncts to civilization. The mulberry tree will grow in this country as well as the oak, and the silk worm will flourish like the caterpillar, but we can't make silk at a profit and pay two dollars a day for labor, as against a shilling in the silk districts of France and Italy. So while Mr. Le Duc's recent grand tea party proved that tea, of a fair quality, could be grown here, with no trouble, it is certain we cannot compete with the Chinese, who live on rats and rice, and work for a few cents where Americans must have dollars.

Worldly Trifles.

It is expected that the next census, which is nearly completed will show that the population of England will exceed 35,000,000, an increase of more than 4,000,000 in a decade.

The reduction of the national debt during May was a trifle over eleven millions. But that can be easily remedied when congress meets.

General Brady is desirous of an early consideration of the star-route allegations by the grand jury of the District of Columbia, but the government authorities propose to move with proper caution in the matter, where so much is at stake.

Superior articles in universal request are always counterfeited, and the pirates of trade, who pick up a living by depredating upon the rights of others, are constantly trying to cheat the public by substituting, imitating and falsifying Simmons' Liver Regulator; but beware! take none except under our copyrighted, engraved label, with seal, signature and stamp of J. ---

If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver, or "biliousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as to take SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR OR MEDICINE.

The Cheapest, Purest, and Best Family Medicine in the world!

A Effectual Specific for all diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Spleen

Regulate the Liver and prevent

CHILLS AND FEVER MALARIOUS FEVERS, BOWL COMPLAINTS, RESTLESSNESS, JAUNDICE AND NAUSEA.

BAD BREATH!

Nothing is so unpleasant, nothing so common as bad breath, and in nearly every case it comes from the stomach, and can be easily corrected if you will take Simmons' Liver Regulator. Do not neglect so sure a remedy for this repulsive disorder. It will also improve your Appetite, Complexion, and General Health.

PILES!

How many suffer torture day after day, making life a burden and robbing existence of all pleasure, owing to the secret suffering from Piles. Yet relief is ready to the hand of almost any one who will use systematically the remedy that has permanently cured thousands. SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR is no drastic, violent purge, but a gentle assistant to Nature.

CONSTIPATION!

SHOULD not be regarded as a trifling ailment—in fact, nature demands the utmost regularity of the bowels, and any deviation from this demand paves the way often to serious danger. It is quite as necessary to remove impure accumulations from the bowels as it is to eat or sleep, and no health can be expected where a costive habit of body prevails.

SICK HEADACHE!

This distressing affliction occurs most frequently. The disturbance of the stomach, arising from the imperfectly digested contents, causes a severe pain in the head, accompanied with disagreeable nausea, and this constitutes what is popularly known as sick headache.

Portrait of FAITH WHITCOMB, the Shakeress, the most successful nurse of the age, who is now accomplishing more good through the distribution of her medicine than all the doctors in the country.

SPECIAL TO LADIES!

FAITH WHITCOMB'S Shaker Liniment is a Sure and Certain Cure for Inflammation of the Womb and for the distressing Lame Back, from which the majority of American women suffer.

A Boston gentleman, well known in business circles—in fact, one of the largest advertisers of the city whose wife has suffered for four years with inflammation of the Womb with constant lameness in the back—employing the best regular Physicians—and afterwards the best Female Electric Physicians, expending vast sums of money with but little effect, has had no occasion to employ a Physician since commencing the use of last July. She is now well. She never has the Backache from which she was hardly ever free during the previous four years.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S SHAKER LINIMENT.

LADIES:—Instead of filling the stomach with wishy-washy medicines for so-called "Female Complaints," apply the proper remedy—externally—and you will obtain certain relief. Every regular Physician will tell you that the only wise treatment for the Inflamation of the Womb is by the external application of the proper remedies, and if you ask your Family Physician he will advise you to use FAITH WHITCOMB'S SHAKER LINIMENT, (to whom the recipe is open for examination.

INVALID LADIES

Who will send a postal card, simply bearing their address, will receive, prepaid by mail,

"FAITH WHITCOMB'S ADVICE TO MOTHERS," which every mother should read. Address, FAITH WHITCOMB'S Agency, Boston, Mass.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S

LINIMENT.

THE GREAT SHAKER REMEDY

FOR

Neuralgia, Rheumatism. Pains in the Spine, Inflammation of the Kidneys, Enlarged Glands, Toothache, Croup, Earache. Sprains, Chronic Diseases of the Joints and Muscles, Bruises, Backache, Soreness of the Chest, Gout, Quincy, Sore Throat, Swellings, Burns and Scalds, Headache, Frosted Feet, Chilblains, and all diseases of an inflammatory order.

FOR TOOTHACHE.

Boston Dentists use it in their practice and recommend it to their patrons.

FROM THE CELEBRATED SURGEON DENTIST, U. K. MAYO.

337 TREMONT ST. BOSTON, Aug 30, 1880.

I congratulate you upon the merited and enviable renown attained by your really valuable liniment. It is the most effective remedy for toothache that has ever come to my notice and I cheerfully recommend to my patrons. U. K. MAYO.

IT WORKS LIKE MAGIC IN INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM.

For proof of which please read the following:—

214 CAMBRIDGE ST., BOSTON, Sept. 20, 1880.

I am astonished at the wonderful properties of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment. Three weeks ago I was attacked with Inflammatory Rheumatism, my head was swollen to double its usual size and the Pain was intense. The first application relieved the pain. In two weeks after using two 50 cent bottles of the Liniment I was entirely cured. Those who are familiar with the Inflammatory Rheumatism and the time which it generally runs will agree with me that the Shaker Liniment is a remarkable remedy, and I advise Rheumatics to use it. J. F. SAWTELL.

The Boston Evening Traveller in referring to the above case says:—

"The cure of Mr. Sawtell, the well known grocer, of inflammatory rheumatism, is creating a decided sensation at the West End. Several gentlemen from the Revere Houte, chronic Rheumatics, called upon Mr. Sawtell for confirmation of the rumors of his astonishing recovery and found that the facts had not been exaggerated. Such cures place Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment at the head of rheumatic remedies."

CROUP.

SAVE THE LITTLE ONES.

"If Faith Whitcomb's directions are followed not one case of croup in a thousand will prove fatal.

"He will give further proof if you will call upon him.

BOSTON, Nov. 1, 1880.

This certifies that my wife who had been a sufferer from Neuralgia for twenty years, was cured by the use of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and four applications cured my back which was so lame from Rheumatism that I could not move without pain. I assure sufferers from Neuralgia and Rheumatism that this Liniment will surely cure these diseases. I know it to be a fact that Mr. Lord, one of my neighbors at Greenwood who had been on crutches for fifteen years and had unsuccessfully tried many remedies, obtained relief from less than one bottle of Shaker Liniment and Mrs. Wheeler of the same place another neighbor a great sufferer from Chronic Rheumatism—is praising the Shaker Liniment in the strongest terms, for it is the only remedy that would help her. I shall be glad to give further proof of the value of this Liniment to any sufferers who will call either upon me in Boston or at my house at Greenwood. A. HANSON.

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER.

You know Physicians are proverbially shy of anything like patent medicines. Doctor Sylvester is no exception to this rule; but when he saw the formula of "Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment" he said "that is all right, that is a good remedy." He prescribed for me when I was next assailed by my old enemy Neuralgia, or rather Neuralgic Rheumatism, from which I have suffered much, especially from Neuralgia of the Heart. It was a severe attack and I feared long illness, but I used the Liniment freely and began to find relief very soon. In a week I was WELL. The effects are almost magical. I will cheerfully recommend it to my friends. C. A. SYLVESTER.

SHERBURNE, MASS., Nov. 2, 1880.

Dr. Sylvester the well-known Physician of Sherborn gives the following statement:—

SHERBORN, MASS., Sept. 20, 1880.

This certifies that I have examined the formula of Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment, and the ingredients are such that it must be of great value in Neuralgia and Rhumatism. I use it in my family and I recommend it to all sufferers from these diseases, as it is better than any Liniment that has ever come to my notice. W. P. SYLVESTER, M. D.

When regular Physicians recommend a remedy, and use it themselves in their families you may be sure it has unusual merit.

A well-known Sunday School Worker gives his evidence.

WOBURN, Aug. 24, 1880.

The Shaker Liniment cured my wife of an enlarged joint, from which she suffered for months. A few applications cured her. I also received almost immediate relief in a case of acute inflammation and my son received great benefit in a severe attack of rheumatism. As a family liniment I think it has no equal.

E. N. CUMMINGS.

"It cannot be recommended too highly as a family liniment.

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, MASS., Oct. 20, 1880.

I have used Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Liniment for rheumatism with the happiest results, indeed it is the best liniment that I have ever used giving me quick relief. It is not only efficacious for rheumatism, but for strains, sprains, etc. It can not be recommended too highly as a family liniment. C. H. LEWIS.

It always relieves Neuralgia and if the application is continued a cure can be dependedupon.

[From Hon. A. Maynard, the extensive manufacturer and founder of the town of Maynard.]

ASSABET MILLS,
MAYNARD, MASS., Aug 24, 1880.

I gladly add my testimony to the value of the Shaker Liniment in case of Neuralgia and Rheumatism. In its use I obtained almost immediate relief, and unhesitatingly recommend it to my friends. A. MAYNARD.

A BOHEMIAN OF PARIS.

Emile Durandeau, who died a short time ago at Asnieres, was a typical Bohemian to the very last day of his life. He had enlisted in the Zouaves, and when he left the army he brought with him all that sharpness which enables the Zouave to live better than the rest of his comrades on the same pay, while his habits of industry had not received any remarkable stimulation during his period of military service. His capacity for drawing caricatures was undeniable, but, like the rest of his friends, he did not believe in earning his livelihood until stern necessity compelled him to execute orders given him and neglected by him. He was one of the few who could boast of having boarded gratis at the famous establishment of Dinocheau, who provided the meals of artistic and literary Bohemia, and had a talent for extorting payment from even the most recalcitrant or impecunious customer.

When he went round after breakfast or dinner to collect the money, and found that neither threats nor persuasions could extract a single coin from the pockets of one of his customers, he appealed to the company present to subscribe the sum due among them and spare their comrade the shame of going away with a dinner for which he had not paid. Usually this stratagem was crowned with complete success, but Durandeau was the most difficult debtor the astute Dinocheau ever had to deal with. For fifteen long years Durandeau patronized the establishment of his friend Dinocheau, whose mother, who was his cashier and bookkeeper, is said never to have got over her surprise when she found that Durandeau owed nearly £800 for breakfasts and dinners which had been placed against his name. Dinocheau one day persuaded him to give him a bill at three months for £20 on account. His consent was wrung from him with some difficulty, and was only given in exchange for a promise that the bill should not be discounted.

Each day he was reminded of the time when the bill fell due, and as it drew nearer and nearer, and he was quite confident of doing what he had promised to do, his credit increased, and the restaurateur regularly petted him. On the appointed day Dinocheau took the bill out of his portfolio, and, placing it in his pocket, called on his debtor. He entered the apartment of Durandeau and asked him if he was ready to carry out the engagement. Durandeau said he was, and telling his friend to sit down, began to talk about the money he owed him. The restaurateur acquiesced in every remark made, but at last, anxious to return home, he asked for the sum named on the bill. The caricaturist expressed surprise at such a remark, and begged his interlocutor to read the promise written on the stamped paper. The word "parlerai," had been put in instead of "paierai," consequently the signer of the note had only promised at the end of three months to "speak" to M. Dinocheau of the £20 he owed him. The latter was furious at first, but soon cooled down, thanking his lucky stars that all his customers were not Durandeaus.

MAKING FLAD BROD.

We dismounted at Gjelde, and found ourselves in a mountain hut or cottage, the interior so dark that we could scarcely distinguish the long deal table and a rough chair or bench here and there, and a bed in the recess. A woman, the sole occupant, appeared glad to see any one coming up from the world, though that world might be no larger or more important than Aardal. Opposite this hut was another, where sat a woman and a girl near a braize fire in a chimney almost as large as the hut itself. The woman was rolling out some oat-cake dough into the thickness of a sixpence, large and round, about two feet in diameter. When rolled it seemed tough and hard, more like paper than anything else. This, with acrobatic dexterity and the aid of a long thin stick, she tossed upon a large flat piece of iron, a sort of frying-pan without sides, and placed it upon the embers. When baked it is tossed again on to a pile lying beside her. This was called "flad brod," and flat it certainly was in every sense of the word; tasteless, and containing, one supposed, a small amount of nourishment. But the Norwegians seem able to keep life in the body with what would be gradual starvation to other people. No doubt their free, healthy life, which calls for the smallest possible wear and tear of the nervous system, counts for a great deal in the matter. For, with it all, they are hardy and contented. The old woman sitting near her braize fire, baking her bread, was a veritable picture; a strange picture of life, full of rough power; a certain silent eloquence that carried its lesson, if one choose to see the application. She looked at us in a kindly manner, and nodded, but never moved from her position, or ceased from her work.—Good Words.

AN ELEPHANT TAKES A WALK.

A large elephant escaped recently from a circus at Versailles, and indulged in a short promenade through the streets, to the dismay of the passers-by, who hastily took refuge in the nearest houses. The animal walked into the garden of the Hotel de France before steps could be taken for his removal to the circus. A whole body of police tried in vain to coax him from his retreat, and the voice of his tamer, who soon arrived on the scene, was equally ineffective. At length it became evident that force would have to be used. Accordingly a number of stout ropes were fetched, and the elephant, being firmly bound in them, was with a great deal of trouble partly pulled and partly pushed to his stable.

FAITH WHITCOMB'S

NERVE BITTERS,

Composed of Pure

Shaker Herbs.

AN INFALLIBLE CURE

— FOR —

Dyspepsia, Nervous prostration, Liver Complaint, Indigestion, Lassitude and Weakness, Loss of Appetite, Scrofulous and Cancerous Humors, Salt Rheum, Incipent Paralysis, Kidney Complaints, and the many diseases arising from an impure state of the blood, overwork, worry and indigestion. It renovates the whole system, working upon the Liver and Kidneys. It makes new blood; it builds up the debilitated system, and thousands will testify that it does all that is recommended for it. Do not neglect to try this great Shaker Remedy.

[From the Boston Herald of May 19.]

"The Shakers, as a class, are noted for their uniform good health. Their remarkable freedom from disease is due very largely to their appreciation of the great medicinal value of preparations of roots and herbs. That noble Shaker woman, Faith Whitcomb, has given to her brothers and sisters, and through them to mankind at large, that inestimable boon now so widely known as Faith Whitcomb's Nerve Bitters; and it is in the compounding of these Bitters, and her other Shaker remedies, that the immense quantities of roots and herbs raised by the Shakers are employed. Truly this is such a use of the knowledge gained by long experience for the benefit of mankind as cannot fail to make the word "Shaker" beloved by every sufferer who has found health and strength through the use of Faith Whitcomb's Bitters.

As a spring medicine it is unequalled. Being composed of pure Shaker herbs, comprising Sarsaparilla, Hops, Celery, Chamomile, Thoroughwort, Dandelion, Yellow Dock, etc., it acts directly upon the seat of the disease, and gives speedy and permanent relief. For dyspepsia, nervous prostration, indigestion, lassitude, billiousness, incipient paralysis, kidney complaints, etc., etc., it has proved itself of wonderful efficacy, it renovates the system, cleansing the blood of all impurities, and builds up the patient with every dose.

To obviate all doubt as to the authenticity of Shaker Bitters, attention is called to the language of John H. Sprague in this connection. He says: "The herbs of which Faith Whitcomb's Shaker Remedies are composed are gathered and cured under the personal supervision of the Harvard Community of Shakers, and the public can depend upon their purity. Faith Whitcomb's remedies are Shaker remedies of great value." Elijah Myrick, trustee of the Harvard Community of Shakers, says: "We use Faith Whitcomb's Remedies ourselves in our community, and heartily recommend them for the diseases for which they are recommended." The public can rest assured, therefore, that these Bitters are genuine Shaker Medicine, and will justify by their effects, the strong endorsements already given by thousands who have been benefited by their use. Dr. Geo. F. Brooks, of 122 Eliot street, Boston, a graduate of Harvard College, was asked by the writer concerning his experience with Shaker Bitters. Said the Doctor. "I have no hesitation in recommending them in the strongest terms for general debility, nervous exhaustion, and the like. My patients are highly pleased, and I, as a physician, am both gratified and surprised at the favorable results which have followed their use. You can make any use of my name which you see fit in commendation of these Bitters." The leading wholesale druggists of this city report the most astonishing sales of Faith Whitcomb's Nerve Bitters.—They say that no remedy in the history of the trade has sprung more quickly into popular favor. This, of course, is but natural, since there can be no fear of the patient taking into his stomach, through Faith Whitcomb's Bitters, any of those noxious drugs whith are so often palmed off upon the public. A genuine, honest remedy, of true merit, is bound to succeed.

Testimonials without number might be added to the above. Let it suffice to say that Faith Whitcomb's Nerve Bitters are one of the greatest remedies known to medical science to-day, and that the thousands of bottles which are being daily sold all over the country, afford the most conclusive proof of their popularity."

An Illustrated History of the Shakers,

containing an account of remarkable cures effected by this great Shaker Medicine, will be mailed, postpaid, to any address, or can be obtained free of your druggist.

CAUTION.—See that Faith Whitcomb's portrait is upon each wrapper.

Citizen's Temperance Meeting

AT THE VESTRY OF THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, AND THE THINGS WISE AND OTHERWISE DONE THERE.

BY REV. L. L. WOOD.

THE MEETING,

like the one which preceded it in the Baptist vestry, was another hopeful indication that high-minded citizens are slowly coming to view the liquor traffic and its fruits as a moral pestilence, involving the peril of the commonwealth and nation, and combating the traffic as defending a great moral principle.—We are gradually relinquishing the old idea, worn thread-bare by half a century's usage, that the temperance question is simply a question of a man's personal liberty to drink or let it alone, to make a man or something else of himself—we cannot say "to make a beast of himself," because beasts never touch intoxicating beverages.

SOME OF THE WISE THINGS DONE THERE.

There was a disposition manifested to do something in the matter besides talk. Too long have law abiding citizens wasted their breath in idle wishes that the supremacy of law might be maintained, and in vain regrets as they have daily seen law and order trampled under foot.

It is understood that the committee of nine, chosen to execute the wish of the citizens, are to expend the funds raised in the employment of a special officer for the enforcement of law. It would have pleased some to have had this purpose of the executive committee come directly before the meeting, in a positive form, for the discussion and endorsement of the large body of responsible citizens present, in order that they might commit themselves to it, count the cost, and abide by the consequences. But it was thought best by those who had pre-arranged how the meeting should go, to keep this purpose sub rosa. Taking it for granted, however, that the citizens fully understood this purpose as the ultimatum of the meeting, their unanimous concurrence in the appointment of the committee was all that could be wished for in this direction. And whether the better way is to do this work through a citizens committee and private subscriptions, or through the board of selectmen and the town funds, all right minded citizens will rejoice to have something done, and so far the effect of the meeting can be only beneficial.

THINGS OTHERWISE.

It would have interrupted the meeting less had the participants in it been permitted to free their minds. An intelligent and respectful difference is far preferable to an unthinking and blind union. The disposition of some to discuss principles rather than methods, however ill-timed the discussion, was not more manifest than the disposition of a few not to hear anything contrary to their own views. It is not the mark of a broad mind to refuse to look at all sides of truth. If we know it all and have long known it, it is safe to infer that everybody is not so well informed. Representatives of the liquor traffic and its patrons were out in force. It was a meeting in which they were personally interested, and the meeting meant business. This is the class of people we often most desire to reach. We seldom have the opportunity. They will not come to us, and if we go to them they will not listen. It would have done them no harm to have heard some of the reasons why all citizens can not endorse a liquor-license board of selectmen.—Even rum sellers may not be wholly impervious to the truth if they could be fairly reached. More than seven eighths of the liquor sellers of the country are foreigners. Only one in forty of them in New York city are Americans. They have been reared with their own views of the business, and regard all restrictions of it as an invasion of their personal liberties. It would no doubt do good if they would sometimes come out in a public discussion and defend their business. But the liquor traffic, like its father, the prince of darkness, shuns the light, and few respectable men can be found willing to openly defend it. Yet candor compels the admission that the disgruntled rum sellers of our town have just cause to complain of the invidious distinction of the selectmen in licensing some and not others. If it be for the interest of the town of Peabody that anybody be legalized and protected in this business, there is no valid reason why everybody should not be who will accept the conditions imposed and pay the price demanded. The same principle should apply here as in the sale of sheeting or molasses or any other commodity deemed essential. "It is a poor rule that does not work both ways."

Although mainly for the purpose of perfecting measures to enforce law, the meeting virtually was an endorsement of a license administration. It is not strange that some slightly mistook its purpose for an endorsement of the policy of the selectmen, since this was the purpose for which the first meeting was distinctly called, and since this was really the effect of the second meeting.—At the time of the first meeting the very few licenses which the selectmen had decided to grant had been refused by the licensees, and the date fixed beyond which the traffic was to be declared illegal. Apparently we were on the eve of a prohibitory administration. At the second meeting, one week later, it was reported, by those who assumed to know, that the selectmen had granted more licenses. In the interval between the two meetings, the selectmen had evidently deemed it for the best interests of law and order, of which they are the appointed custodians, not to wait for the citizens who were hastening to their support; they changed their position, and exceeded their original intention to grant "a very few licenses," and issued additional ones. The conditions had changed from practical prohibition to open license, and those citizens who conscientiously and vehemently oppose the granting of a single license, and who paid their money and gave their signatures, under the conditions of the first meeting, have just cause for dissatisfaction. Quite a number who did not pledge money, were willing to give liberally as soon as they were convinced that the selectmen would not waver from the position they had taken. As it is, enough will doubtless come forward to give the citizen's movement a fair test. But the more the better, in such a measure. A hundred dollars from a hundred men is better than the same amount from one man, because it carries the moral support of a hundred men. In speaking for himself, the writer of this article neither expects nor wishes the return of his money, but he does not feel disposed to boast of his slight investment in a license administration, which he can not conscientiously endorse. Would that he could have given his signature to it without this explanation! While he hails with joy—as all right minded citizens should—any measures looking toward the suppression of the liquor traffic, whether under a license or an anti-license administration, he regards the system of license as a defective moral principle, and a complete farce, so far as remedying the evil is concerned, as has been abundantly shown in this and every other town which has tried it.

Eighty-five per cent. of the crime and its cost, in the state of Massachusetts, during the past year, according to the recent and authoritative report of the State Bureau of Labor, was due to intemperance. This crime and misery and expense is sanctioned and endorsed by the broad seal of this commonwealth which covers the twelve thousand dram shops of the state, more or less. From this logical sequence there is no escape.

To license one dram shop is to endorse the principle of license as much as to license one hundred and one.—We may squirm as much as we will, we may "rise to explain" a thousand times. These are unalterable facts. Rum we shall undoubtedly have in any case, and free rum is bad enough, as Heaven knows. But to license rum is immeasurably worse, for this sends it forth on its mission of death and ruin, stamped with our approval and endorsement. And so far as restricting the traffic is concerned, the history of license for six consecutive years shows it to be simply a farce.

Were the respected clergyman, who spoke for the citizens' committee before the board of selectmen, and who said, "We believe twenty licenses better than forty, five better than ten, and none better than five," to preach the gospel on that principle, he would be indicted for heresy by the Methodist Conference. And if they did not do it, he would indict himself, for he is too pious a man and too consistent a Christian not to know that such a gospel would be subverting with one hand the very principles he established with the other. Although there was no vote to accept the report of the committee in the last meeting, it is highly probable that nine tenths of the intelligent and high minded citizens present gave it their mental assent. Why, in grappling with this greatest evil of the age, are men so loth to accept the principles taught by Omniscience?

The selectmen of this town can say that they are endorsed by our most respectable citizens, in granting licenses to the liquor traffic, and we cannot deny it. They were waited upon by a citizens committee on two separate occasions. On neither of these occasions was that committee instructed to express their absolute disapproval of any licenses. On both occasions they did say that they should be pleased with a few licenses rather than many. In so doing, they begged the whole question, and conceded the very point at issue.—They did not say that they should be displeased if the board granted one license. They could have served the cause just as efficiently in the latter case as in the former, and far more consistently. And, although the storms of wrath would descend upon them, from some quarters, in any case, their house would stand, in the latter case, because "founded on a rock." While the contrary is true—as the Bible assures us—when our house is "on the sand."

Last year the law abiding citizens of the town instructed the selectmen, in clear majority vote, not to grant any licenses. The selectmen considered it for the highest interests of the town to obey the instructions of the minority vote, the quality of which vote was evinced in the general appearance of those who cast it. This year we have virtually asked the selectmen to grant licenses. "Tell it not in Gath, lest the daughters of the Philistines rejoice." Time is to show which course is the wisest, saying nothing of consistency. In case the principle upon which we are acting this year proves a success, and some enthusiast, next year, proposes to carry it to its legitimate conclusion, and to license the most respectable murderers and criminals, in our state, for the suppression of crime, let us not go back on our principles, let us not deny our own offspring. But in case it does not prove a success, let us come up, like good children, and say we have done wrong, and that we will not do so any more.—Alas! we shall do nothing of the kind. We shall be like unto a man beholding his face in a glass, "who goeth his way and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was."

To have made these friendly strictures in the meeting would have caused discord, which should ever be avoided. Hence their appearance in these columns.

SCHOOL SUFFRAGE FOR WOMEN.—The law granting this privilege was somewhat altered last winter, and some new forms are to be gone through with by the voting women of this town. An oath as to amount of real and personal property is now required from women who would register. When once thus registered there will not be required any re-registration, but the names will continue on the Assessors' list as long as the conditions are unchanged. The poll tax is now fifty cents, and no larger amount will be asked on the bills. This change simplifies matters somewhat, and makes the privilege seem more of an established thing. It may have the appearance to some women of being unnecessary fuss, and intended to be perplexing and hindering to women, but this opinion must not be entertained. The oath and registration is a very simple matter after all, and when women stop to consider all that the acceptance of this privilege, under these terms, must open up to them, they will be ready to avail themselves of it. It is an open door to a vote on the liquor question which must come to women in time, and only by this antagonism to the foe and curse of our race will it be overcome.

All women interested or curious on the subject should attend the meeting in the W. C. T. U. Room to-morrow evening.

ANNUAL EXCURSION.

The editors and publishers of the Massachusetts press have just returned from their twelfth annual excursion, which included a trip to Portland, Bangor, Mount Desert, Newcastle, and Isles of Shoals. The number this year was not so large as on former occasions, owing perhaps to the season and the expense attending such a journey; yet some sixty in all availed themselves of the occasion to visit the coast of Maine and New Hampshire at a time when Nature is clad in her most beautiful attire. Among the party were President John S. Baldwin and C. C. Baldwin (with their wives and aged mother) of the Worcester Spy; L. L. Holden of the Boston Journal; N. A. Horton and wife, of the Salem Gazette; John K. Tarbox of the Lawrence Sentinel; Justin Jones of the Yankee Blade; C. W. Slack and wife, of the Boston Commonwealth; George M. Whittaker of the Southbridge Journal; the venerable George Foster and wife, of the Andover Advertiser; E. A. Hill and daughter, of the Greenfield Gazette; James Cox of the Cambridge Press; H. C. Hall and wife, of the Waltham Record; Benjamin Lillard of the Wide Awake, besides many others.

The company started from Boston, Monday, June 20, via the Eastern railroad, in a specially assigned car, newly constructed and elegantly appointed, through the courtesy of Mr. Lucius Tuttle, the general passenger and ticket agent of the road. Mr. Tuttle also sent as special agent for the party Mr. Edward Sands, for some time representative of the road at the White Mountains, who added much to the amusement of the party as well as being a very handy man "to have round."—His good nature and exuberance of spirits made the landlords unusually agreeable and even a rainy day seem pleasant.

The party arrived in Portland at five o'clock, where they were met by Mr. Elwell of the Portland Transcript, who, in behalf of the press of the city, invited them to a sail, on the following morning, down the harbor and among the beautiful islands of Casco Bay.—Carriages took the company to the Falmouth Hotel where they spent the night, and in the morning, accompanied by members of the Portland press, the steamer "Gazette" took them on their way down the harbor. The view of the city from the "outer harbor" is a very fine one, the limits of the great fire of 1866 being distinctly marked by the entire absence of trees in that quarter.

Returning in time for an early dinner, at twelve o'clock carriages were in waiting to take them to the depot for Bangor, 136 miles distant, over the Maine Central railway. The route lay through a beautiful country, the seat of many of the most lovely villages and towns in the state. At 6.30 in the midst of a pouring rain the train steamed into Bangor. Mr. Beal of the Bangor House entertained the party for the night, where, among other guests, they met Hon. Eugene Hale, Judges Barrows, Simons, and Virgin, and Att'y. Gen. Cleaves. At eight o'clock the next (Wednesday) morning they take the steamer "City of Bangor" for a trip down the Penobscot to Mt. Desert, under the care of Mr. Pullen, the general agent of the company. The freshness of the morning scenery, after the copious shower of the preceding evening, together with the many objects of interest to be found on the river banks, conspired to make this one of the most delightful rides of the whole trip.—Through the narrows at Bucksport, with the village on one side and the grim walls of Fort Knox on the other, past Fort Point, out into the clear waters of Penobscot Bay, touching at the beautiful village of Castine, the site of the old French fort, past Fort George, built by the English during the Revolution, wending its way among the islands of the bay, the steamer "rounds up" to the wharf at Bar Harbor, Mt. Desert, at 6.15 P. M., a distance of seventy-five miles from Bangor. Mount Desert Island is situated in Frenchman's Bay, about one hundred miles east from Portland, and comprises an area of nearly one hundred square miles. On the south side it is pierced by an outlet of the sea some seven miles long. The whole island seems to be a mass of mountains crowded together into several ridges, rising in some places very abruptly from the water, Green Mountain, the highest peak, being about two thousand feet above the sea-level. Scattered here and there among these mountain cliffs are several beautiful lakes abounding in trout, which furnish excellent sport for the summer tourist. The principal attraction of the island is Bar Harbor, which has lately become a noted summer resort and is, in fact, a village of hotels, boarding houses and cottages. Conspicuous among the latter are those of Mr. J. Montgomery Sears, C. J. Morrill and President Eliot, of Harvard University.

The forenoon of Thursday was spent in an excursion to the top of Green Mountain. The ascent is made in "buckboards," which will carry from four to eight persons each beside the driver. These vehicles are light, easy-riding and admirably adapted to this purpose. From the mountain's summit the view is grand beyond conception.—Away to the south and east, as far as eye can reach, stretches the great "limitless expanse of ocean," broken only here and there by a white sail, some near at hand and others only a speck seemingly in the distance. To the north is seen the broken and irregular coast line of Maine, the landscape, farther inland, being dotted with towns and villages, while a hundred miles away, grim and hazy, Mount Katahdin limits the view. To the west a beautiful view of the sea, islands and landscape greet the eye, and in clear weather, one hundred and forty miles away, Mt. Washington may be seen standing out, clear and well-defined, against the western sky. The afternoon was given to a ride to Otter Creek Cliffs, the road being between Green and Newport Mountains, the wildness of whose scenery is not surpassed even by the countries of the old world.

Friday morning the party left by steamer "Richmond" for Portland, where, after having enjoyed an all-day's sail, they arrived about five P. M., and immediately took a special train for Portsmouth. Here they were met by several others, among whom were representatives of the Danvers Mirror and Peabody PRESS. After a few hurried words of greeting, we were packed, some into, others on the outside, of two large coaches, each drawn by four horses, and in a few moments we are whirled away through the narrow streets of this quaint old town to the Hotel Wentworth, at Newcastle, three miles away. This house, kept by F. W. Tilton & Co., is one of the best, both as to situation and appointments, that can be found on our eastern coast, as all who enjoyed its hospitalities on this occasion can abundantly testify. While at supper we received an invitation to join in the festivities of the Portland Commandery of Knights Templar, who with their ladies were celebrating St. John's Day by a trip thither.

Saturday morning we took carriages for Rye and Hampton beaches. The day was pleasant and the ride could not be otherwise than delightful. As one rides through the old town of Rye he cannot fail to notice the evidences of thrift which meet him on every hand. The old, unsightly dwellings are giving way to modern cottages, so that nearly every farm house is a summer boarding house. Fathers divide the profits of the farm with their sons, while in the house mothers and daughters share in the profits of summer boarding. Were this practice of interesting children in home affairs more common among our farmers we believe there would be fewer desolate farms all through our New England towns. After a ride of some eight miles we come to Rye beach, while to the south for several miles stretches the coast in full view to Hampton beach and beyond. Here for several miles we find the sea walled in, as it were, by a barrier of small stones nearly fifteen feet in height, which, our driver informed us, were washed up by the storm which destroyed the light-house on Minot's ledge several years ago. Notwithstanding this seemingly "impassable barrier," we were told that the sea often sweeps over it washing away the road and whatever else comes in its way. A short stay at Hampton beach and we return in season for dinner. This over we again take carriages for the Aquarum where we get an idea of some of the denizens of the deep. We then call at old Fort Constitution, first built in 1808, and partially rebuilt in 1863, the whole structure now utterly useless as a means of defense, and fast going to decay. A social gathering in the hotel parlor in the evening and a fine view of the comet fittingly closes this day much enjoyed by all.

Sunday morning dawns fair and bright but the sky is soon overcast with clouds. A few answer the summons of the church bells of Portsmouth; others remain at the hotel, and others enjoy a short sail in the harbor. After dinner a council is held in the parlor as to whether we shall brave the rain and go to the Isles of Shoals or remain and terminate our trip at the "Wentworth." The ladies vote almost "to a man" to go, and after a three mile ride we are on board the "Appledore," and off for the famous Isles. We find here some seventy-five guests, among whom was ex-Gov. Gardner; also Celia Thaxter who is passing the summer here at her residence near the hotel. The islands with their scant foliage and rugged cliffs present little attraction save freedom from all effort and relaxation from care. In the evening a meeting of the Association was held, at which speeches were made and resolutions passed commemorative of those members of the fraternity who have died during the past year. Monday morning dawned gloomy and foggy, which however did not prevent the party from carrying out their plan of visiting Star Island, where we visited the old stone church thirty-six by twenty-four feet on the outside with its walls two feet thick. The church was built in 1800 when the island contained some three hundred inhabitants. A church had previously been built on the same spot early in the 18th century, from the timbers of Spanish ships wrecked on the coast, and which was burned in 1790 by a gang of fishermen. A fine hotel is situated on this island besides which it contains but few inhabitants. Upon the summit of the eastern part of the island is a monument erected to the memory of Capt. John Smith, the discoverer of these isles. It consists of a triangular prism of marble set upon the landing of a three cornered flight of steps, and containing long inscriptions setting forth the virtues of Capt. Smith, while some carvings at the top are supposed to illustrate his exploits with the Turks, of which exploits he was always very proud. Near by is Smutty Nose Island where occurred the Wagner murder, the scenes of which we visited. In the little bedroom where the act was committed, the paper has nearly all been torn off to be carried away by curious visitors, and the floor still shows where the blood spots were hacked out to be produced as evidence in court.

At 3.30 we bid adieu to the Isles and turn our faces homeward, where we arrive in good time, feeling that the excursion of 1881 is not behind any of its predecessors in interest, profit and pleasure to all who were so fortunate as to enjoy it. H. R. B.

WE direct the attention of our readers to the advertisement of E. N. Tufts, the proprietor of the old line of express between Danvers, Peabody and Lynn. It goes without saying that Tufts is the right man in the right place, and all work entrusted to his care will receive prompt and careful attention. His office in Peabody is at Newman & Symonds' store.

The Peabody Firemen was what appeared in the Antique and Horrible parade in Salem. This represented a steamer, with the mottoes, "Peabody firemen going home tired, wet and hungry." "Dollar a day and a warm shop." This was a very nice representation of a steam fire engine, and a take-off on the absence of refreshments at the Treadwell fire.

Last Sunday forenoon, at the Baptist church, Rev. L. L. Wood preached a Children's sermon which was very entertaining to the little ones. It was an object lesson, and the different points were well brought out by anecdotes and other illustrations.

A lad named Charlie Forness was struck in the eye on the morning of the Fourth, by a wad from a pistol in the hands of a companion.

Foster's Philadelphia candy store, 224 Essex St., continues to be the popular place for all kind of candies. His UN-X-LD old fashioned molasses candy is truly UN-X-LD.

One of Capt. Fentress' Stories.

Most of our readers remember the genial and jovial Capt. Fentress, canvasser for Johnson's Encyclopedia. The Marblehead Statesman had a visit from him recently, when he related the following story which is so characteristic of the Captain that we give it place in our columns:

Sometime since, when Gen. Butler was a candidate for the Governorship of Massachusetts, I expressed my determination to vote for him. A gentleman of the company said, "Well, Captain, if you can give any satisfactory reason for such a vote, I will not say a word against it." "Well," says I, "draw up your chair and I will tell you." So I began. Sometime during the fall of 1863, while a prisoner at "Libby Prison," a great cheering was heard one morning proceeding from the "West Room." Men were seen with papers entering the prison. A table and pens and ink were also seen to have come in. "We are all to be exchanged," was the cry; "these papers are our paroles." About seven o'clock A. M., "Dick" Turner came upstairs and cried out, "Fall in, all you Yankee Captains, for exchange." What a row! Everybody wanted to prove that they were captains, and a certain naval officer was so afraid that they would not understand that a lieutenant in the navy ranked with captain in the army, that he cried out continually, "look at my bars." Soon one hundred and sixty captains were marched down stairs and drawn up in two or three lines. There stood the table, pens and ink, also a large pile of slips of paper and a black box. Soon Major Thomas Turner, commanding Libby Prison, entered and commanded "silence! attention to orders." To our horror he then read an order from Gen. Winder, commanding Richmond, to select by lot, or otherwise, from Federal captains under his command, "three to suffer death by hanging, at Castle Thunder, on Friday" of that week. "This," he said, "is in retaliation for three Southern gentlemen hung by Burnside, at Knoxville, Tenn." The faces of the crowd were pale as we proceeded to the drawing. Three prizes were in the lot, all the rest were blank. We proceeded to draw, and with trembling hand each officer drew out his slip and looked for the fatal 1—2—3. The lots fell on Capts. Sawyer of New Jersey, Flinn of Michigan, and Ralph O. Ives of New York. It was Tuesday. The flag of truce left at 10 o'clock. Lieut. Col. Irwin of New York, was specially exchanged, and took the news to Fortress Munroe to Gen. Butler, who was in command there. What did the old man do? Why, he merely wrote a despatch to Mulford, of the truce boat, and a fast steamer caught him before he was far up James River. This was the despatch:—"I will hang from the ramparts of Fortress Monroe, on Friday, Gen. Fitz Hugh Lee, Captain Robert Winder and Major Anderson, a nephew of Jeff. Davis. We have these men at Fort Delaware."

My friends were not hung.

MR. JOHN P PEABODY, of Salem, is one of the few men whose business suffers no perceptible diminution during these summer months—who knows no dull season. The reason is Mr. Peabody thoroughly understands his business. He always is ready to take advantage of the opportunity to buy his goods at a sacrifice—and always has some new bargain to put before his customers. The people understand this, and therefore a shopping tour without an early visit to his store would be incomplete. Just now he is offering some Spanish Laces at a very great reduction from their real value. These goods have been very scarce, and it is only the great enterprise of Mr. Peabody, and the fact that he is a cash buyer in the market, that enables him to place these goods on his counters at the prices he asks for them.

MR. EDITOR,—While wishing well to the numerous little dailies with which we are favored, and approving in general the small army of boys who circulate them, we do hope they will be instructed not to ring our door bells to get custom. It is annoying to be summoned half a dozen time of an evening, only to be greeted with "Star, Item, News, Argus." We want the boys to do well, but we don't want them to ring our door bells so often.

Poet's Corner.

The Old Edition.

It is only a plain old Bible.
But lay it away with care,
For my mother used to read it,
Each verse so sweet with a prayer.
Your new one may be more perfect,
Revised by the learned of the age,
But give me my hallowed treasure,
With the self-same words on each page,

That in childhood's hours fell sweetly
Upon my listening ear,
Of God and His wondrous mercy—
Through many a weary year
It has stood the test of the scoffer,
And where is the heart to-day
That will turn to the new edition
And banish the old away?

Why, the prayer that my mother taught me,
If a change in the words were made,
Would jar on the rhythm of memory,
And its mighty power would fade.
You may turn in your search for knowledge
And say that the new is best—
For me, I can only wonder
That man should have made this test.

So give me the plain old Bible,
That I read when I was a child;
'Tis the one that my mother treasured,
And never was saint more mild,
I cannot turn from its verses,
To words that are cold, estranged;
No, give me my grand old Bible
With never a letter changed.

Beginning Again.

When, sometimes, our feet grow weary,
On the rugged hills of life—
The path stretching long and dreary
With trial and labor rife—
We pause on the toilsome journey,
Glancing backward in valley and glen,
And sigh with an infinite longing
To return and begin again.

For behind is the dew of the morning,
In all its freshness and light,
And before are the doubts and shadows,
And the chill and gloom of the night.
We remember the sunny places
We passed so carelessly then,
And ask, with a passionate longing,
To return and begin again.

Ah, vain, indeed, is the asking!
Life's duties press all of us on,
And who dares shrink from the labor,
Or sigh for the sunshine that's gone?
And, it may be, not far on before us
Wait fairer places than them,
Life's paths may yet lead by still waters,
Though we may not begin again.

Forever more upward or onward
Be our paths on the hills of life,
And soon with a radiant dawning
Transfigure the toil and the strife,
And then our Father's hand will lead us
Tenderly upward then;
In the joy and peace of a fairer world
He'll let us begin again.

Selected Story.

A Story With a Moral.

It was not long ago that a gentleman said to me—he was in wine—"Johnny, I will take your best bouquet—that big one on a tray, fit to be the bridal bed of Eve—if you will carry it to this address."

"All right, boss," was my response, as I took his $10 bill, and observed a devilish light in his eye, while he wrote a name on a card. It was a beam of the light that shone in the eye of Cain as the discriminating flame of heaven shot past his offering and blazed on Abel's altar. However, I wasn't particular about what was going on in his mind, and he slipped the card in the bouquet, and I started off to deliver it. Stopping close by to change my note and eat a bit of lunch, a good many people gathered near the great prize bouquet and began to talk about it and to smell it, and so, whether some jealous rival stole that card or whether I had dropped it on the street, the card was missing when I took up the salver of flowers again.

I hastened back to the place where I had met the gentleman. He had gone away in a carriage. I told my trouble to the hotel clerk, the genial Gillis, and he said, "Pshaw! take it to his wife.—He is no sporting man."

Now that gentleman I knew, by accident of passing his house, and I had often admired the inflexible, the solitary, the lofty and self-reliant quality in him. He was kind to his inferiors, manly to his equals, haughty to his superiors. About once or twice a year he showed liquor in his eyes, as if Cain had bred on Abel's stock, and a little liquor had brought out the consanguinity. I said to myself: "These flowers will wither for which I have been paid. I believe he meant to send them to his wife, and I will take them."

I rang the door bell of his house and asked for the lady. Shown into the parlor I saw my buyer's picture over the mantel. The house was not expensively furnished, but looked like the abode of perseverance in some moderately compensating profession, and slow but gaining conquest of half fortune.—A lady entered the parlor and beheld the flowers. She turned to me and said: "Who are these for?"

"For you, madame."

"For me?" Her face flushed.—"Who has dared to send flowers to me?"

I saw I was in for it somewhere, and there was no safety but in consistent lying. "Your husband sent them, Mrs. ——." I had heard his name and felt that she was his wife.

"My husband?" Her voice faltered. "How came he to send me flowers? Have you not made a mistake?"

"No, madame. He never bought flowers from me before. He is not a customer of gallantry. There is no mistake about it."

She seemed all fluttered, like a widow told that her husband had returned to life. Looking now at the flowers, and again at his portrait, her eyes dilated, her temples flushed. She walked to me like a woman of authority and under high mental excitement. Looking into my eyes she said:

"What did my husband say?"

"He said, madame, 'I have not made a present to my dear wife for years. Business cares have come between us. Take her these flowers, that their blossoms may dispel the winter from our hearts and make us young again.'"

She turned to the bouquet and rained her tears upon it. An orange bud she took, all blinded so, and hid it in her bosom. She sank upon her knees, and laid her head among the flowers to let their coolness refresh her parched, neglected heart, and sobbed the joy of love and confidence again. I stole away like a citizen of the world.

As I went up the street and stopped at the same hotel, the husband was there. "Johnny," said he, "did you deliver the bouquet?"

"Yes, I took it to your wife."

"To my wife?"

"Yes, boss. You are too good a man to wander as you wished to go.—Go home. The ice is broken. Your wife is full of gratitude. Saved by a mistake, embrace the blessed opening made for both of you; plant those rich blossoms on the grave of estrangement, and in the words of the great, good book, 'cling to the wife of your youth.'"

He staggered, looked as if he ought to knock me down, and rushed from the place.

Next day I met her upon his arm.

"Johnny," he said, "bring her as big a bouquet every week, and save one scarlet rose for me!"

Anecdotes.

How Eye-Brows Are Made. "Item—two eyebrows, indifferent, badly put on." concluded a young lady, talking with true feminine charity of a fair sister then going through the mazes of a lancers on the middle of the floor.

"What do you mean?" said the reporter.

"Why, they are a misfit."

A long look, a steady look, and a look altogether at the eyebrows in question did, indeed, indicate something wrong about them, but what it was, was not so evident.

"Do you really mean that they are false?"

"I do."

"And that the resources of civilization have put within the reach of lovely woman the means of circumventing nature when the good dame is parsimonious in the matter of eyebrow?"

"Yes, that is what I mean."

"But how are they put on and how are they kept on?"

"You never would understand it if you did not see how it was done; the process is called reinforcing the eyebrow You know girls have eyebrows as far as they go, but especially in blondes, this feature is defective, while even brunettes would generally wish to have more eyebrow than they can grow naturally."

"Why?"

"Because it sets off the eye, and takes off an appearance of boldness or bulginess which an unbrowed eye always has. If you ever see a young lady at her toilet, which of course you haven't, you will notice that the very last thing she does is to light a match and burn it so as to have as much charcoal as possible. This little crayon is then wet with—with the dew on her rosebud lips, and drawn lightly and skillfully across her brows in the true arch of Juno. The black deposit is then rubbed in beneath the tiny hairs, having only the effect of darkness, and the result is enough to make the eyebrows stand out to the proper relative place in the precision of the features."

"I get that effect with charcoal: Jennie gets it with more hair. When they do not fit there is a look about them which is very unnatural, and by which they can be detected at once.

"But how are they put on?"

"It is a very complicated process and an elaborate one. The eyebrows must be parted down the centre, and this false bit, which is just an edge of hair carefully bandolined along the bottom, stuck in and combed lengthways with the eyebrows. It is extremely difficult to do this properly, taking a great deal of time and trouble, and then when it is done the whole business may be brushed out by accident. A girl has to take a lot of chances, anyhow, if she wants to look pretty."

A couple of Englishmen, captains of steamers on which emigrants are arriving, have expressed their views on the large immigration to this country, and their views are very unique. They say, "The way you Americans are letting emigrants come here, almost by nations, you will one of these days have a tremendous revolution among yourselves. Every dangerous race in Europe is landed here without objection and they are filling up your large cities, and the first sign of hard times and dear subsistence these chaps, who have not the least idea of your government, and hardly conceive it to exist except as a geographical expression, will be trying their nihilist and communistic schemes on your people." There is where these Englishmen are off their feed. Nine out of every ten of these emigrants acquire property, which was denied them in the old country, and they at once become citizens whose interests lie in the direction of preserving order. This is proved by the sums of money they bring over, one banking house in New York, one day last week, paying out over $100,000 to less than 3,000 emigrants on drafts. When those emigrants get that money into farms, or any other business, they are not likely to join a gang of communists and go about waking people out of a sound sleep, to cut their throats. It does not stand to reason. Besides, it is hardly proper for Englishmen, whose government is nearly a thousand years old, and which with all its study and legislation on the social question, has been unable to lay the ghost of famine, discontent and riot to be giving another country advice. They should pluck the saw-log out of their eye before calling the attention of Americans to the piece of square timber that is in theirs. Englishmen, we understand, regard the land league as traitors, or communists, and upon their own showing they have enough of this "dangerous element" notwithstanding their great wisdom about emigrants. We will guarantee that this country can stand all this emigration if Europe can. —Peck's Sun.

Tried on its Merits.—A good story is going the rounds, credited to the well known wit of the Essex bar from the rocky wilds of Cape Ann: a liquor case was being tried in court and as a part of the evidence a pint of whiskey was produced by the commonwealth, and it was clearly shown that the identical whiskey was seized from the premises of the defendant, who had it there with intent to sell, and whom we will call Michael McCarty. It was not a very extensive seizure but still the intent was just as bad. When the district attorney arose, he stated the case and said that no doubt but that his brother on the other side would make fun out of it as he was wont, and ending by charging the jury to dispassionately try the case simply on its merits. As he sat down Michael's attorney arose. "G-g-gentlemen of the ju-jury," he said, "the learned d-d-district attorney s-s-says he w-wishes you t-t-to try this c-case on its m-merits.—So do w-we. M-Michael McCarty t-t-take the stand." Michael did so. He was a great, burly Irishman, with a jolly countenance and exceedingly red nose. "M-Michael," continued his lawyer, "l-look upon the jury. G-g-gentlemen of the jury, l-look upon Michael McCarty. N-notice his beaming countenance, his rubicund face; and now, g-g-gentlemen of the j-jury, do you believe and are you prepared to state on y-your oaths, beyond a reasonable doubt t-that if Michael McCarty had a p-p-pint of whiskey he would s-sell it?" It is needless to say that they didn't.

Two negroes were put on the auction block, much in the style of slavery days, at Lexington, Ky., a few days ago. They had been sentenced to a year's servitude apiece for vagrancy, and their labor for that term was what was offered for sale. A cattle auctioneer was the salesman, and the men were critically examined, with many pokes and pinches, just as slaves used to be. The first to be put up was a fat old fellow, and the bidding advanced very slowly to $20. "Bless my soul," cried the auctioneer, "I recollect the time when he'd bring $500—a hale, hearty old nigger like him. Twenty, twenty, tweuty; any advance on twenty Go up and examine him, gentlemen. He's able to do a good day's work yet, breaking rock or breaking hemp, or even working on a railroad. Look how sleek and fat he is. Look at his arms and legs." He was knocked down to Col. Craig, a railroad contractor, for $34. The other negro was younger and stronger. Craig wanted him, but he was bought for $112 by a man who meant to put him to work at street sprinkling. This sale was the first held under a new Kentucky tramp law.

A comforting conclusion is that which leads us always to choose the best.—Mr. Andrew Ulmer, Bluffton, Ind., says: I have thoroughly tested St. Jacobs Oil, and find for rheumatism and neuralgia it has no equal.—Evansville Daily Courier.

Miscellaneous.

One of the most curious railroads in the world is the ten-inch guage road running from North Billerica to Bedford in this State. It was at first hooted at by the people, but the road was completed, making a length of about 8 1-2 miles.—There are 11 bridges on the road, one of which is over 100 feet long. The rails weigh twenty-five pounds to the yard. The road is well built and equipped. One grade is of 125 feet. The cars and engine at first sight create wonder and admiration. Their perfect proportions give them a handsome appearance. They are constructed very near the ground, giving them great advantages of safety. The cars have an aisle with one seat on each side in the same manner as ordinary cars have two seats, each person having a seat to himself. The cars are supplied with closets, water tanks, are heated by steam, and have all the modern improvements. They weigh but four and a half tons, ordinary cars weighing on an average eighteen tons. The trains run at the rate of twenty miles an hour with perfect safety. The engine is placed behind the tender, giving it greater adhesion to the track. They weigh eight tons and draw two passenger and two freight cars. The cost of the railroad was $4500 per mile.

The following, from Mr. Vaughn, the gentleman who did the repairing of the Baptist Church spire, serves to give the public an idea of the curious freaks of lightning: The first appearance of damage was on the base of the urn, on top of the steeple, some pieces being split off. Next, it split out one of the short ribs just below the girt that the vane steps into, near the top, and inside the steeple; it then ran diagonally across the easterly post of the steeple downward, cutting a groove in the post, until it reached the corner opposite of post; it then champered the post for a few feet downward, increasing the size of champer until it split the post into small pieces at the bottom; the ribs on each side were all forced outward and clear of the injured post, leaving an opening nearly the entire length of steeple; it then passed down through the belfry without leaving a mark, into the tower below; here in this part of the building seems to be the most singular part of its work. It would take to a nail driven from the outside and pass out on the nail tearing up the sheet-lead, or splitting a clapboard, or forcing off a portion of the corner board, and not a mark of it could be found on the inside, opposite to these damages. In one post it followed two nails driven from the outside, about two feet apart, and split a large piece out of corner board between the nails. The posts are twelve inches square, (there are marks inside) one stud was splintered to pieces, a rafter split, and a piece thrown from it, pieces split out of posts in different places, but not near the places damaged outside. A small hole was forced through the plastering in the gallery, throwing the plastering over the carpet; this is the last place that it made its appearance, and no place where it hit are there any marks of fire or smoke, except where it followed the nails to the outside, tearing up the lead—in these places it looked as though powder had been burned. The cost of repairing is about $125.00.

The July number of the International Review is ready and presents a variety of excellent articles. "The Army Question in Europe" is discussed by H. Von Holst, who concludes that to realize the dream of eternal peace the size of armies must be reduced, and the defences made more perfect. Edward Atkinson asks "What makes the Rate of Interest?" and answers the question in his well-known lucid and interesting manner. Robert P. Porter, under the title "Eight Decades of a Century," considers some of the problems raised by the late census regarding the growth and character of our population. William Myall makes "The English Evolutionists" a subject for a most interesting article. "The Reform in Pronouncing Latin," and "Colonizations," are articles which will be of special interest and value to college students and authorities. "The First San Francisco Vigilance Committee," by Thomas' C. Cary, is an article with the flavor of the early and turbulent days of the Golden State about it, and will surely be read among the first in the number, which is, as a whole, a good and worthy one; not, perhaps, as brilliant as some of its predecessors, but well up to its high standard. Published by A. S. Barnes & Co., New York.

We have received from H. R. Stevens of 464 Broadway, N. Y., a copy of his excellent work on Ensilage, or the Preserving of Green Forage crops in Silos. In it the subject is well explained by practical workers so that any farmer can build a silo and have perfect success with ensilage by simply following the directions in the book. It is a work which should be read by every progressive farmer as there is no doubt that the practical workings of ensilage will create a revolution in the whole system of farming. The book is elegantly bound in cloth and is sold by all book-sellers, at the low price of 50 cents, or if sent by mail 60 cents.

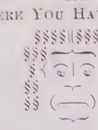
The Essex Institute will visit West Point, the Catskill Mountains, Manhattan Beach, and New York City, leaving Salem and Boston on Wednesday, July 13, returning on Thursday, July 21. Rooms are secured at Cozzen's Hotel, West Point, at the new Hotel Kaaterskill, and at the Grand Central Hotel in New York City. The routes travelled are believed to be the best, viz.: The Fall River line to and from New York; the Day steamers on the Hudson river, and the Bay-Ridge line to Manhattan Beach. It is not intended to make this a large party, and the tickets are limited in number. The price of tickets, forty-two dollars, which includes all expenses of the excursion. Tickets for the excursion and all needed information may be obtained of Geo. M. Whipple or at the Rooms of the Essex Institute.

A War Relic.—In a very full report recently published in the Philadelphia Ledger, reference is made to the case of Mr. George I. Graham, a prominent politician and active journalist, connected with the Philadelphia Sunday Mirror, who, by using the great German remedy, St. Jacobs Oil, was cured of a troublesome case of rheumatism, contracted during the war. He closes his statement with—"to those who are afflicted with that complaint, it is worth its weight in gold."

The Lynn Transcript deserves great credit for being the first to denounce the Globe Company of Boston. The Boston papers are convinced that it is a big swindle, and it looks as if there would be a thorough overhauling of its pretended business affairs. Mr. Curtis of the Transcript has been sued for libel, but it looks as if he had little to fear in that direction. If all editors would expose shams as fearlessly as he, bogus concerns would not thrive so well.



The intelligent advertiser keeps his announcement running in the columns of the local papers all through the year. Even spasmodic, or intermittent advertising is worth a good deal more than handbills, dodgers, gutter snipes, fancy cards, and that class of valueless stuff, but to get his money's worth the true man of ideas and thrift keeps his name and business before the public continually and wins the cake.—Woburn Journal.

While it is true that the American people do not take a very great interest in the revision of the Bible, when it comes to an American winning the Derby race you will find that our flag is still there. If a book publishing firm could get a corner on the news of the horse race as it did on the publication of the Bible, it would make an everlasting fortune.

The number of elementary substances recognized in chemistry has now reached over 64, though for many years past it has been expected that this would be diminished rather than increased, by the discovery that these supposed elementary are really various compounds of a few. Spectroscopic observation and chemical mathematics can be made to demonstrate that probably the four remarkable substances, oxygen, hydrogen, nitrogen and carbon, constitute the whole earth, and its inhabitants.

The fact that Gen. B. F. Butler was in Woburn last week is one of the straws which signify that Uncle Benjamin will be a candidate for governor next fall, and will give the Republicans a long pull, and a good deal of trouble. Of course we know why the general was in town, but we are not going to give it away.—Woburn Advertiser.

Here You Have Her.

This is the maiden all forlorn,
Who knows just when her neighbors were born.
Just what they eat, drink and wear,
And how many times they comb their hair.

Her face is broad, her head is thick,
Her tongue keeps up a clackety click:
She attends to every business but her own,
Is a nuisance abroad and a pest at home.

Some fools in England treat Iroquois as many Frenchmen have treated Wellington, they trying to make it appear that they have been beaten by a poor stick.

"She may be a star actress," muttered an old lady, as she read the description of a new theatrical candidate for public favor—"she may be a star actress, but I'm sure she isn't a heavenly body!"

Before marriage,
With wondrous care,
She seeks the mirror
And bangs her hair.
After marriage,
With angry glare,
She grabs her slipper
And bangs her heir.

The City of Malden—the twenty-first in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts—May its shadow never be less nor its taxes larger.—Malden Mirror.

"What do you ask as a salary?" asked an American hotel keeper to a young man whom he proposed to engage to attend his bar. "Five dollars per week with the run of the till," he replied; "or fifteen dollars without."

An exchange says that "up in New Hampshire you can, for $2.50, purchase a barrel of cider with a yellow dog thrown in." Yes—but, hang it, who wants a barrel of cider into which a yellow dog has been thrown?

A man should enter and graduate from college early in life, if at all. He then has ample time to look around and find out what he ought to learn to enable him to make a respectable living.—New Orleans Picayune.

"My case is just here," said a citizen to a lawyer; "the plaintiff will swear that I hit him. I will swear that I did not. Now, what can you lawyers make out of that if we go to trial?" "Five dollars apiece," was the prompt reply.

The Locomotive publishes engravings in each issue, showing how boilers look just after they have exploded. This doesn't seem to hit the case at all. What is needed is a picture showing how a boiler looks just before it is going to explode. We could then learn when to get out of the way.—New Haven Register.

"Yes, sah," said the old colored man, "de firs' yeah, when I giv fifty dollars to the church, dey call me Mistah Richad Johnson, Esquah; de secon' yeah times was bad an' I couldn't giv no moah than twenty-five dollahs, an' dey call me Bruddah Johnson; de next yeah I couldn't giv nuffin', an' dey call me ole niggah Johnson."

A blacksmith was summoned as a witness in court in a case between two of his workmen. The Judge, after hearing the testimony, asked him why he did not advise them to settle, as the costs had already amounted to three times the disputed sum. He replied, "I to-t-told the fo-f-ools to se-e-e-tle, for I said the co-o-onstable would ta-k-k-ke their coats, the lawyers their sh-ir-ts, and if they got into your Honor's court, you'd sk-k-kin 'em."

There is a sharp trader developing among the Oldtown boys. A growing boy the other day sold a companion two pairs of brown pigeons as "dun tumblers." The purchaser watched the birds for a week, and was disappointed in the tumbling part of the programme. So he went to the boy who sold him the birds, and complained of having been cheated. "Why," said the seller, "they are just what I warranted—they are done tumbling, and won't do it any more."—Newburyport Herald.

As a colored bootblack was passing a down-town barroom and fruit store in Richmond, he picked up a stump of a cigar from the gutter, and went into a store and asked for a match. He was met with the reply: "We don't keep matches to give away." The boy started out, but stopped at the door and asked the proprietor: "Do you sell 'em?" He purchased a box, paid his two cents, and lighted the stump; after which he closed the box, and asked the proprietor to put it on the shelf, and said: "Next time a gem'an asks you for a match, give him one out of o' my box."

Strolling leisurely about a shipyard, says an English paper, one day recently, we observed a regular hard-weather sailor-looking tar from a man-of-war, who, in turn, was watching two men dragging a seven-foot cross-cut saw through a huge live-oak log. The saw was dull, the log very tough, and they went—see-saw, see-saw, pull, push, push, pull. Jack studied the matter over awhile, until he came to the conclusion that they were pulling to see who would get the saw, and as one was a monstrous big chap, while the other was a little fellow, Jack decided to see fair play; so giving the big one a clip under the ear that capsized him end over end, he jerked the saw out of the log, and giving it to the small one sung out, "Now run, you beggar!"

TO SUFFERERS FROM CATARRH.

Statement of Rev. E. W. Whitney,

Universalist Pastor.

For several years I have been troubled with Catarrh, which seriously interfered with my public speaking, and which baffled all my attempts to get permanent relief. Experienced surgeons operated upon me, and I was under the care of a Boston physician for two years, but obtained no lasting benefit. I applied various remedies, but failed to get relief, and was led, by advice of friends, to consult Dr. Lighthill. My faith was at the lowest ebb, but am happy to say that after a few months' treatment, no trace of my old trouble appears, and I have every reason to believe that the cure is permanent. I cordially recommend Dr. Lighthill to all who may be afflicted in a similar manner. E. W. WHITNEY.

Peabody, Mass, June 27, 1879.

From the Rev. E. C. Butler,

Of Beverly, Mass.

I most heartily recommend any one afflicted with that troublesome disease, CATARRH, to Dr. Lighthill. I have full confidence in him; his treatment has had the most gratifying results in my own case, which was severe and of long standing. E. C. BUTLER.

Beverly, Mass, Oct'r 29, 1879.

Letter from W. R. Pedrick,

Of the firm of Pedrick & Glosson, Lawrence, Ms.

My dear Dr. Lighthill,—The fall of 1878 found a member of my family suffering severely from chronic catarrh, extending from the posterior nasal passages through the larynx into the bronchial tubes. Perhaps for three years or more the disease had been making slow but sure inroads, not only locally, but also upon the general health, until it became evident that relief must speedily be obtained, for the symptoms told too plainly what the result would be if longer neglected. I was led to consult you in the matter by the advice of those whom I personally knew you had cured of similar complaints.—Your treatment resulted, I am happy to say, in a complete cure, and all the dreaded symptoms, such as extreme throat suffering, distress in the head, and nasal and vocal organs, pains in the lungs and a constant susceptibility of severe colds, attacking the head, throat and chest, have entirely disappeared. I am very grateful to you for your very kind and gentlemanly deportment, and am most thankful for your skilful and successful treatment and care of this much beloved member of my family. You are at liberty to refer to me or mine.

Yours, truly, W. R. PEDRICK.

Lawrence, Nov. 4, 1878.

A Card from Mr. R. S. Lambert,

Butter Merchant, 12 Washington Market, Boston.

The remarkable cure which Dr. Lighthill performed in my case, after other celbrated physicians failed to even relieve me, demands a public expression of gratitude.

I was a great sufferer from Catarrh in its worst form, to such an extent that my friends thought me in consumption; but thanks to Dr. Lighthill's skill, I am now perfectly well, and free from all those loathsome and disgusting symptoms attending such a disease, and weigh twenty pounds heavier than I ever did.

I would earnestly advise all similar sufferers to apply to Dr. Lighthill, 7 Somerset St., near Beacon St.

R. S. LAMBERT.

Boston, Nov. 26, 1880.

PERMANENT CURE OF DEAFNESS.

From Hon. A. M. McPhail, Jr.,

Piano Manufacturer, 185 Washington St., Boston

Dr. Lighthill,—Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in saying that your professional efforts in my case of deafness, some years since, resulted in a permanent cure, and were in the highest degree satisfactory.

I have the honor to be very truly yours,

A. M. McPHAIL, JR.

CURE OF HEART DISEASE AND CATARRH.

From Mrs. M. A. Emery.

Mr. Editor,—Allow me to express my gratitude to a real benefactor through your columns. For six years I have suffered from Heart Disease and Catarrh so very intensely that my life was despaired of by my physician as well as my friends, and when I first consulted Dr. Lighthill, I myself feared that my lease of life was fast drawing to a close, for I was extremely debilitated, in great state of suffering, and withal greatly discouraged; but my first interview with the Doctor inspired me with hope, and ere I had been under his care but a few weeks I began to improve in health, strength and spirit, and this improvement has steadily continued until I was completely restored. My wonderful recovery astonished all who knew how great a sufferer I was. In gratitude to Dr. Lighthill, and for the benefit of other sufferers, I make this public statement. Yours, truly,

Mrs. M. A. EMERY,
359 Lowell Street,

Lawrence, Sept. 21, 1880.

HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

A REMARKABLE CURE.

From G. H. Robinson, of Methuen.

Dr. Lighthill has done wonders for me. My case was a serious Throat and Lung Trouble, pronounced by several physicians Consumption, for I had many of the worst symptoms of that disease, but from the beginning of Dr. Lighthill's treatment I commenced to improve, and now I am happy to be able to call myself a well man. G. H. ROBINSON,

Methuen, Nov. 1st, 1880.

Please Remember—Dr. LIGHTHILL'S Office is at 115 Boylston Street, Boston.

The Assassination.

It is a cause for heartfelt gratitude to be able to record, at the time of our present writing, that the dastardly attempt on the life of President Garfield seems to have failed. The loss of a chief magistrate in office, under any circumstances, can only be regarded as a national calamity. And when struck down by the hand of the assassin, it is doubly terrible. For the more hopeful news which the wires are continually bringing us, the nation will rejoice; and let us hope that the earnest prayers of our people for his recovery will be answered, and that he may be spared.

We have no desire to speculate at this time on the possible results to our nation of his death; there are a few lessons suggested by the attempted tragedy, to which we will briefly refer. As in the assassination of Lincoln, the bullet of Booth represented the power of the enemies of our republic, so the party strifes and factions which have been engendered during the past few months have as surely caused this attempt on the life of our President. Whether he was the victim of a conspiracy or of the disordered brain of a lunatic, is of small moment now. We need no stronger argument against the continued strife at Albany, and in favor of a purer civil service, and the abolition of the spoils system than the bullet of this would-be-destroyer.

The attention of our people is also again drawn to the necessity of putting no man in the second place on our presidential ticket whom they would not cheerfully vote for as President. It is a disgrace that there should ever be need for such a reflection. It would be the duty of our people to rally cheerfully around Arthur, should he be called, in God's providence, to the presidential chair, and we doubt not he would receive their sympathy and support. But they could not forget his past record, for which he is alone responsible; and the very uncomplimentary remarks of the general press of the country arise mainly from his subordination of the high office to which the nation called him, to become a lobbyist and trickster.

Should the hopes of all classes of our citizens, without respect to party, be realized, and the life of President Garfield be spared, it will bring about a firmer and more united union of the party and nation. It is encouraging to note the approving words of sympathy and sense of bereavement, which this tragedy has called out from the southern press. All sectional feeling, all party strife has been merged in the nobler devotion and loyalty to our whole country. Now is the time to still stronger cement these bonds. May God help us to rise above these temporary clouds to the clear sunlight of prosperity and union.

FILE YOUR NEWSPAPER.—In looking over the old files of the So. Danvers Wizard, runing back over twenty years, it is surprising to find what a history of local events is connected therewith.—Items that seemed of small account then, bring back vividly to the mind thoughts of other and greater transactions occurring then and there, and a complete epitome of the time is before us. We cannot over estimate their value. As we look back upon the once familiar names in our advertising and reading columns,—men who walked in and out before us and with us, and who have long since gone to their rest, we feel that their history is in a great measure recorded there. Such is the power and value of the weekly local newspaper. It will be our effort to make the paper such as that in time to come, this and more can be said of its columns.—We therefore say to our subscribers: Keep your papers. File them away in order, and at the end of the year have them bound. The trifling labor and expense will be more than compensated for, when, in after years, you shall have occasion to refer to them. It ought to be a matter of pride to our citizens to refer to the files of their local paper. And if you are not a subscriber, by all means become one. The welfare and interest of your own town should be yours also, and in no way can you help its prosperity so well as to aid and encourage its local press.

Shore-ward and mountain-ward, the tide of travel swiftly flows.

Conrad vs. Abbott.

A case of considerable importance to shop-keepers, was recently decided in the Salem Superior Court, in which our friend, Mr. David Conrad, was the plaintiff. The wife of the defendant, without his knowledge, went into the plaintiff's store and ordered a bill of goods, which included handkerchiefs and hosiery, the latter purchased for her husband, according to her statement to the plaintiff, and she indeed telling the employee waiting upon her that she was sent by her husband to buy the goods. She incurred a bill of $27 worth of goods, which were delivered, and ordered also goods to the amount of $30 more, for which it was necessary to send to Boston. These latter were not delivered to her because of knowledge coming to the plaintiff's ears that there was some trouble in other stores about her purchases. The Court ruled that any store-keeper who trusts a wife upon her husband's credit without his consent, does so at his own risk. The decision of the Judge on the point is undoubtly based on a similar case in England, not long since, where the Court ruled that a husband was not liable for the purchases of the wife, without an agreement of the husband to be bound thereby, excepting for articles of necessity to her, and which he had neglected to provide for her. In such case the bill could be collected. In this case the jury found for the defendant, under the instructions and ruling of the Court, as the plaintiff could not prove that the goods were such as to come within the actual necessities of the wife.

It has generally been accepted as a fact, both by the store-keepers and the patrons themselves, that a man was liable in any and all cases, for whatever purchases his wife might make, and that the bill could be easily collected. These two decisions put a different light on the matter, and it behooves our store-keepers to be careful in opening accounts. We presume that in cases where accounts had been running, and several settlements had been made by the husband, thus endorsing the right of the wife to contract for him, the precedent would hold, and there would be no loophole in case of an intended fraud. But in new accounts, it would seem there was more than an equal chance for the store-keeper to be defrauded, unless he uses extra care in satisfying himself as to the willingness of the husband to be bound by the purchases of his wife. At all events, it is wise to know the law on the subject, and thus avoid serious errors, which might result in financial loss.

SOME time since, a survey was made in the interest of the Boston & Maine R.R., through this town. Whether or not this will amount to any more than previous ones of like nature in former years, remains to be seen. Such a road would be a rival to the patronage now enjoyed by the Eastern R.R., and as such is to be welcomed. For the amount of travel from this town, and the extent of our population, we think the accommodations are very limited. The easiest and most direct route to Boston, as any one knows, is on the line of the Wakefield branch; our people are equally familiar with the reasons for the small travel that way, and the larger proportion of passengers carried by the Eastern R.R. via Salem. Being thus on a branch, as it were, we are debarred from many privileges that would be accorded to us on a direct route.—Our neighboring town of Danvers is more favored than we, because they have the same number of trains that we do, and are also on the direct line of the Boston & Maine R. R. The town of Woburn is situated similarly with reference to the Boston & Lowell R.R., it being nearly the same distance to Winchester as it is from Peabody to Salem. Yet they have over 30 trains a day, and the Journal states that even more trains are to be put on. They also have a late train from Boston every night as late as 11.30 P.M., a luxury that we have not enjoyed for a number of years. Inasmuch as we have to depend almost exclusively on Salem for our amusements, and as we feel positive that the late trains would be well patronized if put on, we think the Eastern R.R. are doing our town great injustice in depriving our citizens of the advantages to be derived from them.

WE publish in another column an article on Marking System in Schools, taken from the N. Y. Observer. It ought to be read by every one interested in the welfare and health of our scholars and students. There is much that might be said on either side of this question—and we think the time is soon coming when our educators must take a decided stand in regard to it. It is brought into especial importance at this time by the course recently adopted by Amherst College, in abolishing almost entirely the rank system, and which has thus far proved a decided success.—How far such a policy could be adopted by the lower grade of schools, or whether one year is sufficient time to judge accurately of its merits, is of course a question. It opens a wide field for discussion,—which we hope will be ultimately of great benefit to our school system. We commend to our readers the perusal of the article, and shall be glad to welcome to our columns the views of any whose experience and interest in the matter entitle their opinions to weight.

WASHINGTON, 4.30 P. M.

The extreme heat has affected the President very much; but if fever don't set in before to-morrow morning, he will undoubtedly live through it. 1.30, the President's pulse, 96; temperature, normal.

The following remarks of Gen. Garfield in the U. S. House of Representatives, at the time of the assassination of Abraham Lincoln, are of especial moment at this time. After moving the adjournment of the House, and eulogizing in fit terms the career and life of the martyr President, Gen. Garfield said:

"It is no one man who killed Abraham Lincoln; it was the embodied spirit of treason and slavery, inspired with fearful and despairing hate, that struck him down in the moment of the nation's supremest joy. Ah, sir, there are times in the history of men and nations where they stand so near the veil that separates mortals from the immortals, time from eternity, and men from their God, that they can almost hear the beatings and feel the pulsations of the heart of the Infinite. Through such a time has this nation passed. When 250,000 brave spirits passed from the field of honor, that thin veil to the presence of God, and when at last its parting folds admitted the martyr President to the company of the dead heroes of the republic, the nation stood so near the veil that the whispers of God were heard by the children of men. Awe stricken by his voice the American people knelt in tearful reverence and made a solemn covenant with Him and with each other that this nation should be saved from its enemies, that all its glories should be restored, and on the ruins of slavery and treason the temples of freedom and justice should be built and should survive forever. It remains for us, consecrated by that great event and under a covenant with God, to keep that faith, to go forward in the great work until it shall be completed. Following the lead of that great man and obeying the high behests of God, let us remember that 'He has sounded forth a trumpet that shall never call retreat;

He is sifting out the hearts of men before his judgment seat.
Be swift, my soul, to answer him; be jubilant, my feet,
Our God is marching on.'"

Fine Residence.

We had the pleasure of visiting, yesterday, the fine residence of Mr. George H. Poor, on Lowell street, which is nearly ready for occupancy. Both this house, and that of his brother, but a short distance this side, add very materially to the beauty of the street, and are an ornament to that portion of the town. The high ground and magnificent view to be obtained from the upper story of Mr. Poor's house give further evidence of the judgement and taste displayed in the selection of the sites. It should be a matter of pride to our town that dwellings like these have been erected.

Entering the large and spacious hall in the center of the house, we step first on the left into the parlor, a magnificent room 22 by 18. The floor and finish of this room, as of all the rooms, is of pine. The floor of the lower hall is of hard wood. In the rear of this is a small room, but very neatly and tastily arranged, designed as a sewing room for the ladies. On the right of the main hall and fronting on the street is the library. This room is not as large as the parlor opposite it, but is equally pleasant, the fireplace and mantel being of Pyrenees green marble. To the rear of this room we pass a small and finely set bowl, and enter the dining room which is 13 by 17 1-2 feet, the mantel here being of Tennessee marble of a very ornate pattern. From this room is obtained as fine a view of the street and surroundings as from the library. In the rear of the house, not connected with any of the other rooms save the dining room, and extending the whole width of the house, is the kitchen, pantry and closets, finished in pine, and shelacted and varnished. Here are marble set bowls, hot and cold water, spacious closets and every convenience known to the modern housewife. In the cellar, directly under the kitchen proper, is a wash room, with large set tubs and range, for convenience in the warm weather, and the apparatus is so provided that hot water can always be obtained whether the heat is derived from the stoves in the kitchen above or below. In the center of the cellar in front of the wash room is set a large size Anthony's furnace, and it is arranged that the heat from one of the large pipes shall be subdivided as it reaches the first floor, heating two rooms on that floor and two on the second story.

Ascending the front stairs the posts and rails being of black walnut, we reach the upper hall, almost a room by itself, commanding a view of the street each way. We were particularly struck with the fine finish and elegant paper on the walls, the color being in beautiful contrast with the delicate tints of the wood finish, and making a fitting entrance to the chambers in the upper portion of the dwelling. In the second story are five chambers of nearly equal dimensions, all high studded rooms, heated by furnace, ventilated, and with marble bowls with hot and cold water. The paper on the walls is of different colors with matched borders and gilt moldings. In the rear is space for a large bath room and water closet arranged near the heating apparatus to prevent damage to the pipes in cold weather.

In the third story Mr. Poor has finished but two attic rooms, but has a large space left for any purpose he may desire. From the east window of one room is a commanding view of the whole town to the eastward of his house, extending even to Salem, the tall spire of the Tabernacle Church being distinctly visible.

The architects of the building were Lord & Fuller of Boston, and the building was done by James R. Wingate, on contract, and he has certainly completed the job in a thorough and substantial manner, and we are informed by Mr. Poor, to his entire satisfaction. It is a pleasure to record such evidences of care and fidelity, and the value given to them. The mason work was done by C. A. Derby of Salem, the plumbing by D. B. Lord, Jr., the tin work, registers and furnace were put in by Norton & Gilman, and the painting and papering by C. H. Pulsifer of Salem.

We congratulate Mr. Poor on the fine residence which he is so soon to occupy and the PRESS wishes long life and prosperity to him and his companion in their new dwelling.

We notice that there are several other fine residences in process of erection among them those of Mr. Leverett Poor and T. H. Wilson on Lowell St., Mr. W. P. Clark, Geo. A. Whitney, Denison W. Osborne and Chas. E. Teague, an extended account of each of which will appear later in our columns as they approach completion.

THE USES OF LEMONS.—The lemon tree is a native of Asia, although it is cultivated in Italy, Portugal, and in the south of France. In Europe, however, it seldom exceeds the dimensions of the smallest tree, while in its native state it grows to over sixty feet in height. Every part of this tree is valuable in medicine, though we rarely employ any of it but its fruit—that is the lemon itself. And every one knows how to employ this as in lemonade; to squeeze the juice into cold water—this is the shortest way; or to cut it in slices and let it soak in cold water, or to cut it in slices and then boil it. Either way is good.

Lemonade is one of the best and safest drinks for any person, whether in health or not. It is suitable to all stomach diseases, is excellent in sickness—in cases of jaundice, gravel, liver complaints, inflammation of the bowels, and fevers. It is a specific against even worm and skin complaints. The pippins, crushed, may also be used with water and sugar, and taken as a drink. Lemon-juice is the best anti-scorbutic remedy known. It not only cures the disease, but prevents it. Sailors make a daily use of it for this purpose. We advise every one to rub their gums daily with lemon-juice to keep them in health. The hands and nails are also kept clean, white, soft and supple by the daily use of lemon instead of soap. It also prevents chilblains. Lemons are used in intermittent fever, mixed with strong, hot, black coffee, without sugar. Neuralgia may be cured by rubbing the part affected with a cut lemon. It is valuable also to cure warts and to destroy dandruff in the head by rubbing the roots of the hair with it. In fact, its uses are manifold, and the more we employ it internally the better we shall be ourselves.—Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.

THERE is no pleasanter resort in this hot weather than a trip to the Willows. Those of us who were in the habit of visiting this place in days when there were no special attractions—before the horse cars had extended their track there, can look now at a great transformation. It may seem different to the Editor of the PRESS, as it has been our fortune to be absent from this vicinity during most of the improvements in its surroundings. To those who have made frequent journeys thither in the midst of the various additions to the pleasure attractions, the change seems scarcely perceptible. Still we are of the opinion that there are many of our readers who look upon the Willows as a sort of a home resort, and who are strangers in a great measure to the many advantages which this resort possesses. As a cheap, easy and speedy method of recuperation from the toil of the day, it is the best place on our coast. Other places require time, absence from work or business, besides considerable expense to enjoy them.—This obviates all of these difficulties, and one can take the cars from the Square after supper and return in good season. The enterprising managers of the Street Railway have made extra efforts to accommodate their patrons this season by their open cars and frequency of trips, and the cafe of Messrs. Davis & Fay, proprietors also of the Essex House, Salem, cannot fail to tempt one to partake of the fine fish dinners provided there. With the further inducements of dancing, the music by the band, and an occasional display of fireworks, we do not see why our own Willows should not continue to be the principal resort for the people of this neighborhood.

The steamer Empire State will make all-day fishing trips both to-morrow and Friday, at the urgent requests of its patrons. Lovers of fishing should bear this in mind. A prize of $1 per pound is paid to the party securing the largest fish. Lines and bait are furnished on board. Leaves the wharf in Boston at 10 A. M., and returns at 5.30 P. M.—On Saturday, a voyage in the bay, leaving at 2.30 P. M., to which the fare is only 50 cents. On Sunday a trip will be made to the Isles of Shoals.

EDWIN BOOTH IN LONDON.—American triumphs in England have become familiar since the victory of the yacht America, but even John Bull must have been aghast when an American horse won the Derby. It was a success which followed hard upon that of Edwin Booth at the theatre. But they were all triumphs in the family. Iroquois had been under English training, and was ridden by the most noted of English jockeys; and Edwin Booth is the son of an Englishman. "The greatest of American tragedians," as the Biographical Dictionary says "was born in London." The father of Edwin, the elder Booth, did not come to this country until he was twenty-four years old. The stage, too, is here largely English. Its traditions, and many, perhaps most of its great names are English. In a very obvious sense Edwin Booth, playing in London, is going home; and indeed the English-speaking race everywhere goes home when it returns to the British island. It was with an instinctive affection, which did not show him less an American, that Hawthorne called his book of English sketches Our Old Home, and the truest and most faithful American heart often recognizes its own feeling in Boughton's pathetic picture of the return of the Mayflower.

The welcome of the younger Booth in London recalls the permanent welcome which the elder Booth commanded in this country. He led a wild and wayward life, and toward the end it was always doubtful whether he would be in a condition to appear when he was announced. But it was a prodigious appearance when there was no disappointment. The Easy Chair saw him long ago in a small city where an old barn had been transformed into a theatre, and where the accessories were amusingly imperfect and unsatisfactory. The barn held but a few hundreds of persons, and was very much the kind of playhouse in which the Crummles company appeared, and Mr. Folair intoned deep tragedy. But to inexperienced eyes it had all the charm which Charles Lamb found in Drury Lane or the Haymarket—a charm which the perfectly appointed metropolitan theatres of a later day do not rival. To the young mind the name Booth was merely that of the most famous actor of the time. But to the elders who had seen Edmund Kean, and whose rapt delight and awe had been fitly expressed by the elder Dana in the first number of the Idle Man, he was interesting as the one man who had rivalled Kean in the favor of the English audience. Cooke, also, and Conway, they remembered, and now they were to scan critically an aspirant to a crown which their favor had already allotted.

That first evening in a theatre was absolutely unique, until long afterward in Paris Rachel passed across the stage. The play was the Iron Chest, and Booth as Sir Edward Mortimer was harrowing. He was overwhelming. It is an unrelieved sombre tragedy, and it is unconceivable that people should deliberately go to see it for pleasure. But its effect upon that audience was indescribable. There were gusts of passionate action which swept the actor about the stage as if whirled by a tornado, and the Easy Chair recalls the feeling of satisfaction in its young life that, whatever happened, the terrible man could not be whirled into the balcony where it was sitting, holding very hard by a protecting hand. The deep, penetrating, and infinitely pathetic tone of Booth's voice was exquisite. As sometimes in fine oratory, it was the music of the intonation, more than the words spoken, which went ringing and thrilling to the heart. The intense gloom of the play was an atmosphere which always recurs when the name of Sir Edward Mortimer or of the elder Booth is mentioned. What Dana said of Kean is singularly true to the recollection of Booth in this dismal drama: "In his highest-wrought passion, when every limb and muscle are alive and quivering, and his gestures are hurried and violent, nothing appears ranted or overacted, because he makes us feel that, with all this, there is something still within him vainly struggling for utterance." Powerful as the action was it was felt to be inadequate to the actual passion.

The younger Booth resembles the elder only in an occasional intensity of feeling and expression. For the rest, he would be described as graceful, refined, classical—words which would not naturally occur in speaking of the elder. He contrasts with him as Macready would contrast with Edmund Kean. The whirlwinds of passion, without mere declamation and rant, vanished with the elder Booth.

The English welcome of the younger has been so cordial that Mr. Irving ought to give America the opportunity of showing him how heartily also America would welcome the Englishman.—EDITOR'S EASY CHAIR, in Harper's Magazine for August.

Mrs. Mary T. Chandler, widow of the late Joseph Chandler, died on the 11th inst., at Hot Springs, Arkansas, and her body was forwarded to Salem for interment at her own request. She had been an invalid for a long time, and it would seem as if she anticipated her death, as she left papers directing that her body should be sent to her sister. Her maiden name was Mary T. Baker, and she formerly resided here. When young she learned her trade and worked with Mrs. Buxton, who then had a millinery and dressmaking store in Peabody. From an anonymous letter received by her brother in Boston, suspicions of foul play were aroused, and at his request a post mortem examination was held by Medical Examiners Carlton of Salem, and Osborn of Peabody, aided by Drs. Shreve, Kittredge and Johnson of Salem. Dr. Osborne advises us that from the examination they found nothing to indicate that her death was produced by other than natural causes, but the stomach, liver, etc, was placed in a sealed jar and forwarded to Dr. Woods of Harvard College, for a chemical analysis. The sister to whom her body and effects were directed to be sent was Ida M. Baker, formerly a pupil in our High School, and who is now teaching in a private school in Charlestown. She has several other brothers and sisters living.

MR. EDITOR,—Last Thursday Mr. D. B. Lord's workmen, acting under orders from the clerk of the Water Board, commenced trenching in front of Mr. S. Edson Casino's house, on Stevens street, in order to sever the water connection, Mr. C. having failed to pay his water bill within the required time of the by-laws. Mr. Casino with his family has been out of town for a number of weeks, and therefore he never received a summons. A relative of the family, noticing the proceedings, immediately paid the bill with the cost of summons, and the trenching ceased; and the question is now being asked, "Is it a legal proceeding to send a summons to a gentleman's house, when he is absent, and not finding him, to bring back said summons to the Water Board office, instead of putting it in the Post office and making some further attempts to serve it?" FAIR PLAY.

MR. EDITOR, — I noticed in last week's PRESS an article on our Post Office, advocating that it be kept open later in the evening. On making enquiry of our worthy postmaster, I learned from him a few facts in relation to the time of keeping open the offices in the different towns in our neighborhood, and find that the Post Office here does not suffer in comparison. For instance,

Gloucester P. O. is open	11 1-2	hrs.
Salem P. O.	" 12 1-8	hrs.
Marblehead P. O.	" 12 1-2	hrs.
Lynn P. O.	" 12 3-4	hrs.
Beverly P. O.	" 13	hrs.
Peabody P. O.	" 12 1-2	hrs.

The average number of hours being 12 1-2. So it will be seen that the Peabody post office overruns the average of the above offices. VETERAN.

POLICE NOTES.—Thos. H. Lillis appeared for examination for keeping liquors with intent to sell. His case is continued.

Daniel Hogan, proprietor of the Fall River House, was found guilty of keeping intoxicating liquors and fined $50 and costs. He appealed.

James E. Millea appeared for the same offence and was discharged.

18, Wm. Hayes waived an examination upon his case, and was put under bonds for appearance at High Court.

19, Wm. Irwin, drunkenness, paid a fine of $5.85.

Patrick J. Ronan, made notorious by bad conduct, and by being shot by Officer Parker, was arrested at Jacob P. Goodale's place in West Peabody, near the Danvers line, by Chief Peaslee, Officer Parker and two of the Salem night watch, last night. He was wanted in Salem on a charge of assault. He, with two or three companions, recently took possession of a bar-room in Salem, and after assaulting the bar tender, helped themselves to liquor, etc., and absconded.

Quite a number of people assembled near the Wyoma House, Sunday, to witness a bowling match between Lynn and Peabody parties, who, after the match, participated in a practice of their skill down through South Peabody and up Lynnfield street, where they made much trouble for Mr. William Vittum, Superintendent of the Alms House. The police were sent for, but when they arrived the crowd had departed, and although several names were taken, no arrests were made.

A clerk in one of our grocery stores was packing away goods the other day, and mounted to the top of a pork barrel about half full of brine, and had got fairly to work when the head gave way and the young man found himself standing waist deep in the brine. The amusing appearance he presented when he emerged from that barrel, and the salt water smell that still clings to him, are the subject of many a joke yet. It is expected that he will shortly be engaged to warble, "A Life in the Briny Deep."

Stephen K. Blaney, a well-known citizen of Concord, N. H., died on Tuesday evening, after a short illness. He was born in Marblehead, Mass., June 15, 1814, and his father, Jonathan Blaney, was a Sheriff of Essex county. The son learned the trade of carriage painting of Walter Frost of Boston, and was afterward in business in that place and also in Charlestown and Nashua. He went to Concord in 1844 and was connected with the Abbot & Downing factory from then until a few days before his death. For many years he was an active fireman, and when a youth served in the Boston department. The deceased left a widow and two adopted daughters, and has one brother, John C. Blaney, formerly of Peabody, but now a resident of Lynn.

Mrs. Sarah A. Stevens of West Salisbury, N. H., died suddenly at the residence of Mr. Edward Kavanagh on Main St. Sunday morning. She had been in failing health for some time; she came to Peabody on a visit to relatives here about two months since, and gaining somewhat in strength returned to her home in New Hampshire, when finding that the climate in this vicinity was better suited to her disease she came again to this town.—Since her arrival here the second time, she has been gradually growing more feeble and had decided to return home on Saturday, but was not able to do so. Her body was taken to West Salisbury on Monday for interment. She leaves a husband in West Salisbury, two sisters, Mrs. Edward Kavanagh and Mrs. Stephen Fernald, and one brother, Mr. Paul Tibbetts, all residing in this town. Her age was 73 years.

On Wednesday evening last, a brilliant wedding took place at West Peabody. Homer Brooks, M. D., a skillful young physician of Haverhill, and Miss Minna P. Needham, not unknown to fame as a gifted artist, were the parties united. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. John W. Colwell of Peabody, and a large company assembled at the house of the bride's father, Joseph S. Needham, Esq., to express their good wishes for the prosperity of the happy couple in their new departure. There were present ladies and gentlemen from Salem, Lynn, Boston, Haverhill, Wakefield, and several other towns, including many art friends of the bride, and professional friends of the bridegroom. Numerous presents were bestowed, some of them quite valuable and all exceedingly appropriate. A feature of the wedding feast was an abundant supply of delicious strawberries fresh from the vines.—Register.

Danvers has a new paper—the Review.—Lynn Sunday Mail.

This is certainly new, if not news, to us. We had the impression that Brother Cheever's paper had been in existence over a year, certainly. Perhaps the Mail reporter has struck some paper in our neighboring town, of which we are in ignorance. How is it?

Poet's Corner.

"Der Abend ist der Beste."

BY SUSAN COOLIDGE.

The morning hours are joyful fair,
With call of bird and scent of dew;
And blent with shining gold and blue
And glad the summer noontides are;
The slow sun lingering seeks the west
As loth to leave and grieve so soon
The long and fragrant afternoon;
But still the evening is the best.

Day may be full as day may be,
Her hands all heaped with gifts, her eyes
Alight with joyful prophecies;
But still we turn where, wistfully,
The veiléd evening, dimly tall,
Stands in the shadow without speech
And holds her one gift out to each—
Her gift of rest, the gift of all.

Ah! sweetly falls the sunset glow
On sunset hairs, all peaceful bent
To catch the last rays, and content
To watch the twilight softly grow;
Content to face the night and keep
The peaceful vigil of the eve,
And like a little child to breathe
A "Now I lay me down to sleep."

Ah! close of life! Ah! close of day!
Which thinks of morn without regret;
Which thinks of busy noon, and yet
Grieves not to put its toils away;
Which, calmed with thoughts of coming rest,
Watches the sweet, still evening fade,
Counting its hours all unafraid—
Surely the evening is the best.

"Come Home."

BY SARAH DOUDNEY.

It was a golden Summer world, and birds
and bees were gay;
How merrily the children played amid the new-mown hay!
But one ran onward through the field, and up the ferny lane,
While all his blithe companions bade him
linger there in vain;
A mother's heart was waiting, and the schoolboy would not roam
Afar from that beloved voice that said,
"My child, come home."

Years passed, and on her grave the grass
was green for many a day,
And strangers crossed the fragrant field
and trod the ferny way;
The little lad had grown a man, and comrades gay and bold Called back the eager feet that sought the truthful paths of old:
They told him of their higher dreams;
they flattered and beguiled,
But still the mother seemed to say, "Come home, come home, my child."

And we who bear the Christian's cross,
and strive with doubts and fears,
What tone shall tempt us from the path
we loved in early years?
Oh, by the true and "living way" access to God is found,
And angels warn the pilgrim feet from life's enchanted ground;
The strife is hard when earth and sin are luring us to roam,
But clearly speaks the Father's voice,
"Come home, my child, come home."

Selected Story.

MR. ROBERTSON'S VILLA.

AND THE FAIRY-LIKE GIRL WHO WAS VISITING THERE.

"Walk out to my house and have breakfast with me some morning."—Such was the invitation given me one day by Mr. Robertson, a genial, middle-aged solicitor, to whom I was articled, in the thriving town of Abbeyton.

Now, I had only been articled for a few weeks, and what I had seen of Mr. Robertson in business made me want to know him and his in their private life; hence I was much delighted to have this opportunity of gratifying my wish.

A few days afterwards, waking up and finding a glorious summer sun streaming into my room, I speedily decided that this was just the kind of morning on which I should accept the invitation to breakfast at Abbey Grove; and in a few minutes I was on my way thither.

Abbey Grove was situated about two miles from the town, and consisted of a small cluster of villas, built in a prettily situated spot, which, generations ago, had formed part of the grounds of an old abbey. The only remains of this ancient building, however, were a few yards of crumbling wall, with here and there vestiges of what at one time had been traceried windows; these, with numerous mounds of stone and masonry, were all that was now left to tell of what had been there centuries ago.—Most of these mounds were now covered with grass and shrubs and trees, and thus formed a delightfully secluded retreat, which the inhabitants of Abbey Grove enjoyed in common.

The invigorating charms of an early walk on a summer's morning need no description. The pure air, the genial sun, the twittering birds, the sparkling dew and soft, low breeze, all tend to exhilarate one's spirits and to make the day pleasanter and happier throughout. All these experiences were mine on the day I write of.

As I approached Abbey Grove and saw the houses peeping from out the surrounding trees, I commenced wondering as to what kind of a residence would be occupied by Mr. Robertson; how it would be furnished, what kind of people his wife and family would be like, and the kindred things that you speculate upon when going to visit a house for the first time. Last, but not least, as my walk continued I wondered what kind of breakfast there would be to appease the appetite stimulated by the morning breeze.

I walked down the short avenue leading to the houses, and began to wonder which of the half dozen villas I was bound for. This small community dispensed with numbers to their houses, nor did they even distinguish them by the ambitious and ridiculous names which you see stuck up on most suburban residences. No; nothing savoring so of the town for this group of country residents; they all called their several houses by the common name of Abbey Grove, and the stranger had to take his chances of having to go to each of the houses in turn before he found the particular one he sought. Fortune favored me, however, by sending across my path a traveling directory in the shape of the local milkman; and in response to my inquiry as to which house was Mr. Robertson's, I received the straightforward reply:

"This 'ere one as I've jist come from, sir."

Walking up the path I found the door invitingly open and the housemaid putting the finishing touches on the bell handle.

"Master is not down yet," she replied to my inquiry as to whether he was at home, which, considering the time of day, really appeared an absurd question to ask the girl; but we get accustomed to use stereotyped phrases under some circumstances.

"Oh, then I will come in and wait," I replied.

"What name shall I say, sir?" asked the girl.

"Just tell him Mr. Brooks has called, and he will understand."

So saying, the girl showed me into a snug little breakfast room, where the sunbeams and fresh morning air seemed to be vieing with each other as to which should hold possession of the room, with such friendly rivalry were they streaming through two open French windows, which opened upon a tastefully arranged lawn and flower beds outside. While noticing these things, the housemaid had gone upstairs to announce me; when something like the following dialogue ensued:

"Please, ma'am, Mr. Brooks is down stairs."

"Mr. Brooks! Who is he!" was the response in a muffled female voice.

"I don't know, ma'am," the maid replied. "I've never seen him here before. But he's a young gentleman, and says he'll wait till master comes down."

"Whoever can it be, and what can he want, bothering here, at this time of day?" continued the muffled voice, and thereupon the door was shut.

Now, this was not exactly pleasant to me, but when I reflected that most probably Mrs. Robertson would be unacquainted with her husband's invitation to me, I thought it best not to be offended, so I commenced examining the pictures on the walls. They were not very interesting, and I soon concluded my inspection, and looked around for something else to occupy the moments, which began to hang rather heavily. The newspaper of the previous day was upon a small table by the window, so I took that up, just to pass away the time, and was soon listlessly perusing the advertisements. I had not been sitting thus above a minute or two, when I heard a slight rustling, as of a woman's dress; simultaneously came light foot-steps through the window into the room, and before I could look up from my paper, or rise from my seat, a musical voice accosted me with "Good morning, uncle; here is your buttonhole."

I started up in no little surprise at this greeting, which was evidently not intended for me, and there stood before me a fairy-like maiden of sixteen summers, her brown hair falling loosely from a daintily shaped head, her cheeks aglow with the healthy morning air she had been enjoying, and deepened, too, by a rosy blush, when she discovered her greeting had been unwittingly addressed to a stranger. She was standing before me, holding out the little knot of flowers destined for her uncle's buttonhole—how I envied her uncle!—a very picture of health and life and happiness and beauty.

Her expression of unrestrained enjoyment had changed in a moment to one of embarrassment and dismay, mingled with a gleam of amusement in her bright eyes as the humor of the awkward situation we were in broke upon her. An instantaneous mutual agreement seemed to flash upon us.

We both broke into a merry little laugh and I have often wondered what would have happened if we had not adopted this course; if, for instance, the young lady had passed on with a dignified coldness, and simple apologies and bows had passed between us. Our sudden introduction was, however, not destined to have this sudden ending. In a few minutes we were chatting away like old friends. I fancied my fairy seemed actually pleased when I announced that I was going to stay to breakfast, and I had almost summoned up courage to ask her to present me in reality with the flowers she had undesignedly offered to me, when the entrance of the servant with the completing dishes for the breakfast table served as an excuse for her to leave the room.

She had scarcely gone through the door when I heard again the greeting, "Good morning, uncle," followed this time by an unmistakable sound, which made me long more than ever to be the girl's uncle. The door opened once more. I stepped forward to meet my employer, but suddenly paused as a tall gentleman entered the room whom I had never seen before in my life.

He stood looking inquiringly at me after a sharp "Good morning." I was too embarrassed to make any response. My first thought was, "He is some visitor," but in a few moments the awful truth dawned upon my mind, that this was in reality the owner of the house I was in, and that by some means or other I had got into the wrong one. The situation was tremendous.

I am naturally a cool character; but I was taken by surprise and chagrin that I could only mutter some confused apology about having been invited to breakfast with Mr. Robertson; that I had been directed to this house by some miserable misunderstanding; that I humbly apologized for my intrusion and hoped he would pardon it. So speaking I made a frantic dash at my hat, maddened at my stupidity, at the loss of my breakfast, and still more at the thought of never seeing or speaking again to that charming little lady, who, in less than five minutes, I found I was absolutely in love with.

I said a hurried "good morning," and was trying to make a ghastly attempt to smile as I left the room—when, would you believe it, that tall, dark man burst out into a loud laugh. I felt ready to knock him down. I knew how my stupidity would be gaily discussed at that breakfast table before her, and I felt my discomfiture and humility deeply; but this open merriment at my expense maddened me.

A strange calm succeeded the storm. It was caused by some words uttered by my tormentor. "You really must forgive; I could not refrain from laughing. My name is Robertson. Your friend Mr. Robertson lives in one of the other houses. We frequently get parcels and letters and even callers coming to the wrong house; but in all my experience we never had so amusing a mistake so early in the day as this one."

Now, this explanation toned down my anger considerably, but the words which followed were like balm to my troubled heart. "Mr. Robertson will have finished breakfast by now. I cannot think of allowing you to go. Do me the favor of remaining here and breakfast with us this morning." So saying he took my hat out of my hand and led me into the room again. Of course it did not need much persuasion to make me stop. Two minutes before I had been ready to knock this man down; now I thought him the kindest and most considerate fellow in the world.

Of course the breakfast was delightful. I found Mr. Robertson and his wife sensible, genial, kind-hearted people. I found their niece even more sensible, more genial and kind-hearted than they were; and when, after breakfast, I accompanied her and Mr. Robertson into their pretty flower garden, I received from her a rosebud for my buttonhole, which I kept for some years afterward. When saying good-by, I was perplexed by thinking how I should manage to see her again; it must be contrived somehow, I mentally resolved.

Upon returning to town I lost no time in explaining the situation to my worthy employer, Mr. Robertson, who rallied me good-naturedly upon the mistake and what the consequences might be! Next week I was invited to a picnic at Mr. Robertson's and went, not only to it, but likewise to Mr. Robertson's house again and again before the niece returned to her home.

Four years have passed since that invitation to breakfast was given me, and that "fairy-like girl" is now my wife. The local milkman, bless him, got a handsome "tip" upon our wedding day.

Miscellaneous.

O'CONNELL AND THE SCOLD.—Most persons have heard of the celebrated encounter of Daniel O'Connell with the famous scold, Mrs. Moriarty, the huckster, of Dublin. There was, at that time, in Dublin, a certain woman, Biddy Moriarty, who had a huckster stall on one of the quays, nearly opposite the Four Courts. She was a virago of the first order, very able with her fist, and still more formidable with tongue. From one end of Dublin to the other she was notorious for her powers of abuse, and even in the provinces Mrs. Moriarty's language had passed into currency. It was mooted once whether the young Kerry barrister could encounter her, and some of the company (in O'Connell's presence) rather too freely ridiculed the idea of his being able to meet this Madame Moriarty. O'Connell never liked the idea of being put down, and he professed his readiness to encounter her, and even backed himself for the match. Bets were offered and taken, and it was decided the matter should come off at once.

The party adjourned to the huckster's stall and there was the owner herself, superintending the sale of her small wares. A few lawyers and ragged idlers were hanging around her stall, for Biddy was a "character," and in her way was one of the sights of Dublin.

O'Connell commenced the attack.

"What's the price of this walking-stick, Mrs. What's-your-name?"

"Moriarty, sir, is my name, and a good one it is; and what have you to say agen it? And one and sixpence's the price of the stick. Troth, it's chape as dirt, so it is."

"One and sixpence for a walking-stick—whew! Why, you are no better than an imposter to ask eighteen pence for what only cost you twopence."

"Twopence your grandmother," replied Biddy. "Do you mane to say it's chatin' the people I am? Impostor, indade!"

"Ay, impostor, and it's that I call you to your teeth," rejoined O'Connell.

"Come, cut your stick, you cantankerous jackanapes."

"Keep a civil tongue in your head, you old diagonal," said O'Connell, calmly.

"Stop your jaw, you pug-nosed badger, or by this or that," cried Mrs. Moriarty, "I'll make you go quicker nor you came."

"Don't be in a passion, you old radius. Anger will only wrinkle your beauty."

"By the hooky, if you say another word of impudence I'll tan your dirty hide, you bastely common scrub; and sorry I'd be to soil my fists upon your carcass."

"Whew! boys, what a passion old Biddy is in. I protest as I am a gentleman—"

"Jintleman! Wisha, that bangs Banagher. Why, you potato-faced pippin sneezer, where did a Madagascar monkey like you learn to pick up enough of common Christian decency to hide your Kerry brogue?"

"Easy, now; easy, now," cried O'Connell, with imperturbable good humor. "Don't choke yourself with fine language, you old whiskey drinking parallelogram."

"What's that you call me, you murderin' villain!" roared Mrs. Moriarty, stung to fury.

"I call you," answered O'Connell, "a parallelogram; and a Dublin judge and jury will say it's no libel to call you so."

"Oh, tare-an-ouns! oh, holy Biddy! that an honest women like me should be called a parrybellygrums to her face. I'm none of your parrybellygrums, you racally gallows-bird; you cowardly, sneakin', plate-lickin' bliggard."

"Oh, not you, indeed!" retorted O'Connell. "Why, I suppose you'll deny that you keep a hypothenuse in your house?"

"It's a lie for you! I never had such a thing in my house, you swindling thief."

"Why, sure all the neighbors know very well that you keep not only a hypothenuse, but that you have two diameters locked up in your garret, and that you go out to walk with them every Sunday, you heartless old heptagon."

"Oh, hear that, ye saints in glory! Oh, there's bad language for a fellow that wants to pass for a jintleman. May the devil fly away with you, you micher from Munster, and make celery sauce of your rotton limbs, you mealy-mouthed—"

"Ah, you cannot deny the charge, you miserable similitude of a duplicate ratio."

"Go rinse your mouth in the Liffey, you nasty tickle-pitcher. After all the hard words you speak it ought to be filthier, you dirty chicken of Beelzebub."

"Rinse your own mouth, you wicked-minded old polygon—to the deuce I pitch you, you blustering intersection of superfices."

"You saucy tinker's apprentice, if you don't cease your jaw I'll—"

But here she gasped for breath, unable to hawk up any more words, for the last volley of O'Connell had nearly knocked the wind out of her.

"Whilst I've a tongue I'll abuse you, you most inimitable periphery. Look at her, boys! There she stand, a perpendicular in petticoats! There's a contamination in her circumference, and she trembles with guilt down to the extremities of her corollaries. Ah! you're found out, you rectilineal antetecedent and equiangular old hag! It's with you the devil will fly away, you porterswiping similitude of the bisection of a vortex."

Overwhelmed with this torrent of language, Mrs. Moriarty was silenced. Catching up a saucepan she was aiming at O'Connell's head, when he very prudently made a timely retreat.

"You have won the wager, O'Connell; here's your bet," said the gentleman who proposed the wager.

A SLIGHT DIFFERENCE.

Old Pinchem sat in his private office the other day figuring up his profits for May, when his head clerk, looking as pale as a sheep and as red as a cow by turns, entered and began:

"Mr. Pinchem, I—I——"

"Have you got those goods off for Kalamazoo?" interruptod the old man.

"Yes, sir, they are off. Mr. Pinchem, I have long——"

"And about that order for starch?"

"That has been attended to, sir. Mr. Pinchem, I have long wanted to speak to you."

"Ah! speak to me. Why, I thought you spoke to me fifty times a day."

"Yes, sir, I know, but this is a private matter."

"Private! Oh! Ah! Wait till I see how much we made on that last 10,000 pounds of soap, Six times four are twenty-four; five times two are ten, and two to carry are twelve; three times seven are twenty-one and one—ah, well, go ahead; I'll finish this afterwards."

"Mr. Pinchem, I have been with you ten long years."

"Ten, eh? Long years, eh? Any longer than any other years? Go ahead."

"And I have always tried to do my duty."

"Have, eh? Go on"

"And now I make bold"—

"Hold on! What is there bold about it? But, never mind; I'll hear you out."

"Mr Pinchem, I want to ask—ask—I want to ask"—

"Well, why don't you ask, then? I don't see why you don't ask, if you want to."

"Mr. Pinchem, I want to ask you for—for—for"—

"You want to ask me for the hand of my daughter? Ah? Why didn't you speak right out? She's yours, my boy! Take her and be happy. You might have had her two years ago if you had mentioned it. Go 'long, now—I'm busy."

"Mr. Pinchem."

"What, you here yet; Well, what is it?"

"I wanted to ask you for, for—"

"Didn't I give her to you, you rascal!"

"Yes, but what I wanted to ask you for was, not the hand of your daughter, but for a raise of salary."

"Oh, that was it, eh? Well, sir, that is an entirely different matter, and it requires time for serious thought and earnest consultation. Return to your work, and some time next fall I'll see about giving you a raise of a dollar a week. Six times four are twenty-four and two to carry; and three times——"—[Detroit Free Press.

VERDICT IN THE HATHAWAY MURDER CASE:

Trial Justice William Nutting, Jr., has made up his finding upon the result of the inquest upon the Hathaway murder and has made his official return to the proper authorities. A copy of the return is given below.

The crime passes into the catalogue of those unrevealed mysteries that trouble and perplex the officers of the law. No labor has been spared to ferret out the assassins and every possible clue has been patiently followed. There are some very strange facts that have been developed that may be shown at some future time to have a bearing on the case, and it is almost unnecessary to say that officers will not in the slightest relax their vigilant investigation. The return of Judge Nutting is as follows:—

Commonwealth of Massachusetts
ESSEX S. S.

At an inquest, duly holden before me, William Nutting, Jr., a Trial Justice within and for the Countyof Essex, at Marblehead, in said County of Essex, on the, by continuance, first day of July, 1881, in accordance with the provision of Chapter 200 of the acts of 1877, to inquire into the cause and manner of the death of William F. Hathaway, whose dead body has been found lying in said Marblehead, the undersigned said Trial Justice, having been duly notified of the death of the said William F. Hathaway, and of circumstances attending the same, by C. A. Carlton, one of the Medical Examiner of said County of Essex, after hearing the testimony relating to the cause and manner of said death, finds that the said William F. Hathaway, late of Marblehead, came to his death at said Marblehead, on the night of the second day of May, 1881, in consequence of being murderously assailed by some person, or persons, to me, said Trial Justice, unknown, who after inflicting a wound upon the head of the said William F. Hathaway, with some blunt instrument, or missile, cast him into a ditch, filled with filthy water and mud, running through the "Reynold's lot," so-called situated by Green Street, in said Marblehead, and there held, pressed down and confined him until death ensued through suffocation.

Among the railway travellers eating dinner at a hotel in Baltimore, the other day, was a fellow from Fayette, Ohio, who swallowed meat, potatoes, and bread as if he had been a week without eating.

A second cup of coffee was brought to him, and in his hurry he picked it up and took a large swallow. It was considerably hotter than pepper, and in his excitement he opened his mouth and shot the liquid across the table against a young man's shirt bosom.

"Gosh—whoop—hot—beg pardon—and blazes!" he exclaimed, reaching after water.

"You are a hog, sir!" replied the young man, "a regular hog!"

"I am, eh?"

"Yes, sir."

"And I've got bristles?"

"Yes, you have."

"And I grunt?"

"Yes."

"Stranger, said the Ohio man, as he reached across after another slapjack, "stranger, I'm not a hog—I'm only a politician, bound for Washington—[Exchange.

A lady who was in the habit of spending much of her time in the society of her neighbors, happened one day to be taken suddenly ill, and sent her husband, in great haste, for the physician. The husband ran a few rods, but soon returned, exclaiming, "My dear, where shall I find you when I get back?"

HOW A MAN SHOULD BE JUDGED

Who shall judge a man from nature?
Who shall know him by his dress?
Paupers may be fit for princes.
Princes fit for something less.
Crumpled shirt and dirty jacket
May beclothe the golden ore
Of the deepest thought and feeling—
Satin vest could do no more.

There are springs of crystal nectar
Ever swelling out of stone;
There are purple buds and golden,
Hidden, crushed and overgrown.
God, who counts by souls not dresses,
Loves and prospers you and me;
While He values thornes the highest
But as pebbles in the sea.

Man, upraised above his fellows
Oft forgets his fellows then;
Masters—rulers—lords, remember,
That your meanest hands are men!
Men of labor, men of feeling,
Men by thought and men by fame,
Claiming equal rights to sunshine
In a man's ennobling name.

There are foam embroidered oceans,
There are little web-clad rills,
There are feeble inch-high saplings,
There are cedars on the hills;
God, who counts by souls, not stations:
Loves and prosper you and me.
For to him all vain distinctions
Are as pebbles in the sea.

Toiling hands alone are builders
Of a nation's wealth or fame:
Titled laziness is pensioned,
Fed, and fattened on the same;
By the sweat of other's foreheads,
Living only to rejoice,
While the poor man's outraged freedom
Vainly lifteth up its voice.

Truth and justice are eternal,
Born with lovliness and light:
Secret wrongs shall never prosper
While there is a starry night.
God, whose world-heard voice is singing
Boundless love to you and me,
Sinks oppression with its titles,
As the pebbles in the sea.

GOLDEN SHOES.

May bought golden shoes for her boy,
Golden leather from heel to toe.
With silver tassel to tie at the top.
And dainty lining as white as snow.
I bought a pair of shoes as well,
For the restless feet of a lad,
Common and coarse and iron tipped—
The best I could for the sum I had.

"Golden," May said, "to match his curls,"
I never saw her petted boy;
I warrant he is but a puny elf,
And pink and white, like a china toy.
And who is he, that he should walk
All shod in gold on the king's highway,
While little Fred, with a kings own grace,
Must wear rough brogans every day?

And why can May from her little hand
Fling baubles at her idol's feet,
While I can hardly shelter Fred
From the cruel stones of the broken street?
I envy not her silken robe,
Nor the jewels' shine nor the handmaid's care,
But, ah! to give what I cannot,
This, this is so hard to bear.

But down I'll crush this bitter thought,
And bear no grudge to pretty May,—
Though she is rich, and I am poor,
Since we were girls at Clover Bay,—
And ask the Lord to guide the feet,
So painfully and coarsely shod,
Till they are fit to walk the street
That runs hard by the throne of God.

"Good-bye, friend Ellen;" "Good-bye, May;"
What dims her eyes so bright and blue,
As she looks at the rugged shoes askance?
"I wish my boy could wear these, too,
But he will never walk, they say."
So, May, with a little sigh has gone,
And I am left in a wondering mood,
To think of my wicked thoughts alone.

It needs not that I tell you how
I clasped my sturdy rogue that night,
And thanked the God who gave him strength,
And made him such a merry wight;
Nor envied May one gift she held,
If with it I must also choose
That sight of little crippled feet,
Albeit shod in golden shoes.

ITCHING PILES — SYMPTOMS AND CURE.—The symptoms are moisture, like perspiration, intense itching, increased by scratching, very distressing, particularly at night, as if pin worms were crawling in and about the rectum; the private parts are sometimes affected; if allowed to continue very serious results may follow. Catching Polar Bears.

THE LATEST PATENT FOR SPRINGING A BEAR TRAP.

"I do so pity those men on the Rodgers," remarked Mrs. Max, passing the Major the honey, which he always insisted upon having with his rice cakes.

"Yes, indeed," replied the Major, who was a trifle cynical that morning, having burned his mouth with coffee. "Yes, indeed, my dear, the life of an Arctic explorer must be hard. They are so isolated from the world. Just imagine, if you can the horror of living for three years out of the dust and wind and fog and rain of our glorious climate; of not meeting all that time the man at your club who thinks the oftener a story is told the better it is; of being without the consolation afforded you by the busted stock operator who knows you are glad of an opportunity to lend him a twenty; of being where millinery and Japanese decoration stores do not daily entrap one's wife; of being—"

"Why Major how you talk! I was only thinking of the horrid things the Rodger's crew will have to do to get their bear steaks."

"How's that?" asked the Major, instantly interested over the subject of steaks which he holds of much greater importance than the Irish land troubles.

"What I know about it," responded Mrs. Max, "I read in a fashionable paper, and it ought to be true."

"It certainly ought to be Mrs. Max, if only on account of its old age."

"Well the article said," continued Mrs. Max, pretending to ignor the Major's slur on her favorite reading, "that Arctic explorers, when they want to kill a polar bear, plant a big knife in the ice with the blade sticking up. They daub the blade with blood, and the bear comes along and licks it and cuts his tongue. It is so cold that he don't feel the cut, but tasting his own blood, continues to lick the knife until his tongue is all frayed, and he bleeds to death. Isn't it dreadful?"

"Quiet your fears, my dear," said the Major when his wife had finished. "That is the way they killed the bear when that story was first published, but in the last twenty years an improvement has been made, which I will tell you about, if you will kindly give me just a drop more of coffee, with cold milk this time. The way the thing is done now is as follows: When Capt. Berry of the Rodgers wants a polar bear for dinner he gives a midshipman a copper bed spring and a chunk of salt pork. The midshipman compresses the spring perfectly flat, wraps the pork around it tight, and holds it so until it freezes solid. Then the frozen pork, stuffed with the bed spring, is thrown out to the nearest ice burg, where it is promptly swallowed by a polar bear. When the heat, of the bear's stomach thaws out, and the bear soon dies from a pain in his side."

"Major," said Mrs Max, with much warmth, "I don't believe that story is true."

"No, my dear, and you won't until in a few years, you see it in some fashion paper, and then you will swear to it.

ART AND OIL.—The Norfolk Virginian of January 16, 1881, refers to the remarkable cure effected by St. Jacobs Oil in the case of Prof. Cromwell, known the country over for his magnificent Art Illustrations, who has suffered excruciating torments from rheumatism until he tried the Oil whose effects were magical.—Reading, (Pa.) Times and Despatch.

The only daughter and heiress of the late Dr. Ayer, the millionaire pill manufacturer, is in Paris. A correspondent of the San Francisco Chronicle says that she received an offer of marriage from a Bourbon prince, a cousin of Don Carlos of Spain. She refused and when the importance of the honor was urged she replied: "I don't want a title half as much as he wants cash."

A Brooklyn man suffering from rheumatism was advised by his physician to try the waters of some hot spring. "What's the use," he returned, "I've been in hot water ever since I was married."—Brooklyn Eagle.

An Iowa tailor whose front name is William got himself nicknamed "Iowa Bill" so that customers who owe for the clothes they have on cannot address him without being reminded of that fact. It saves a heap of dunning.—Philadelphia News.

The best people will vote for the best man everytime. And we judge by the number of the St. Jacobs Oil constituency, that it is the best remedy for the rheumatesm known. Prof. Tice, of St. Louis, among others, says so.—Rural New Yorker.

The New Haven Register has come to the conclusion that the moon's greatest mission is to bring about marriage engagements and give the asparagus crop a start.

A New York miss of sixteen summers, who attends a private school in that city, was told by her teacher to translate into French the sentence "I do not wish for a silk dress." The teacher was astonished when the pupil promptly replied: "But you may bet your sweet life that I do."

New York Herald: Village Postmaster to his wife: "Here is a postal card to Mr. Jones saying that his brother and five children will be here on Saturday. Now keep that card back till then and I will be at the depot, and when they find no one to meet, I will take them all over for three dollars."

The Attitude of the Mormons.

The attitude of the Mormons since the assassination of President Garfield surely deserves comment and attention at this time. Since the morning of July 2d we have heard expressed no feeling save that of intense sympathy and earnest longing for the speedy recovery of the President. And when now it seems assured, as far as human knowledge can foresee, that the extreme danger is passed, the rejoicing is echoed from all hearts. Here parties have laid aside their differences; there has been no North, no South, no East, no West, and some of the bravest words of cheer have come from those who have been politically opposed to him. In this general current of sympathy there has been one exception. President Garfield, in his inaugural, took a very radical and decided position against the Mormons, and as was also the case at the time of the death of Lincoln, they take no pains to conceal their desire and hope that President Garfield may not recover.—They even offer special prayers that he may die. Says the Newburyport Herald: "On special occasions they hold a prayer circle at the altar of prayer at the Endowment House. The leading priests and elders lock arms and join hands in a circle about the altar, and the officiating high priest joins the circle with his left hand and raising his right hand toward heaven, prays fervently. It is believed that an electrical current of prayer passes from the circle through the high priest straight to the throne of heaven, and that it is the most powerful form of invocation which can be offered, and that in fact it is sure to be answered. This queer and horrible ceremony, a mixture of misapprehended science, of spiritualistic method and of the most abominable Voudoo superstition, has been used against President Garfield from the time of his expression on the Mormons in his inaugural address. When the news of the attempt at assassination reached Salt Lake City there were great rejoicings and the saints believed their prayers had been answered. Since there have been furnished good hopes that the President would recover, that one spot in the United States has been disappointed while everywhere else has been rejoicing."

It would seem that there could be no fitter time than the present for the expression of the opinion of the people, in language that could not be mistaken, that this curse should be uprooted from the land. Some of the Mormon leaders have stated that they looked with disfavor upon polygamy—but it deceives no one. It is the most powerful argument which they use in gaining converts; and the class of people from the old world whom they succeed in bringing to this country as immigrants and disciples of their faith, are mainly those to whom this doctrine comes with peculiar force. Only a few weeks since over eight hundred emigrants passed through New York city on their way ot Utah—mostly from the coast of England. The laws of this nation make polygamy a crime; it tolerates their mode of religion as it does others that are not in harmony with the principles of the government. But when there is added this relic of heathenism—an outrage against the home, the marriage relation, and the sentiment of the Christian religion—the law should be vigorously and promptly enforced. The downfall of polygamy is the death of Mormonism. Let the press and the people uphold and strengthen our President in his manly opposition to it; and let Congress take steps which shall lead to the conviction of polygamists, and the enforcement of the law in Utah as it is in the rest of the land. There should be no half-way measures here; it is no less a slavery than that in the South before the war, and is upheld by them, like the African bondage, under the pretended sanctity of religion. The time has come for a vigorous war, by the undivided sentiment of the country, against this blot upon our civilization; and their recent attitude in relation to the tragedy that has befallen our country furnishes an additional pretext for its inception.

WHY don't the Eastern R. R. give us an opportunity to attend some of the Fire Works and Band Concerts at Revere Beach and at Point of Pines which they so extensively advertise, by running some excursion trains and return in the evening from Peabody? At present there is no way of getting back at night. If we succeed in coming to Salem, we must walk to Peabody. If this company would show a more liberal spirit in dealing with its patrons on this branch, we think it would be for their advantage.

About 18,000 passengers were transported on the Narrow Gauge road Monday, between Boston and Lynn.

THERE are two suggestions called out by the dastardly attempt on the life of President Garfield, both of which have been freely discussed by the press.—One is that the person of the President should in some manner be protected in public—either by a staff or body guard which should accompany him on all occasions; the other the enactment of a law making the penalty for an attempt upon the life of our chief magistrate punishable by death. The first of these propositions is certainly not in accordance with the spirit of our free government: it has been our boast that, save in his official capacity, our President is one of the people—that no form, paraphernalia or insignia of office should surround him, to distinguish him from any other private individual, in his intercourse with the citizens of the land, by whose suffrage he had been placed for a time only, in the office which he holds; that although he wields an influence greater than the queen of our mother country to-day, he is amenable to the same laws and given the same protection as the humblest of the people. To change this is to take a step toward monarchy. And we fail to see in what way it would have been of advantage in either of the two assassinations which our history will be obliged to record. Would the martyr Lincoln have been any more shielded from the bullet of Booth, had he been surrounded by a body guard of armed men? Would Garfield have been any more secure on that July morning had there been others than his chief premier at his side? To ask these questions is to answer them. In spite of all the guards around the crowned heads of Europe, the assassin's hand is still felt.

In regard to the penalty for such attempts upon the life of the President being made more severe, there is much to be said in its favor. To deprive us of our chief magistrate while in office, is more to us than the loss of any other citizen. It opens anew the strife for office which is now fortunately restricted within the limits of the presidential election. In a case like the present it would change in a great measure the course of the administration, and in many cases, if followed up, would lead to entire change of the party in power. Again, an assault upon the chief magistrate might be the signal for rebellion, and as such would surely be treason.—It is in any case a matter of grave import; and the grief and indignation so general at the present time shows to what a degree it is so regarded. We see no objection, in strict conformity to the democracy of our institutions, to making such attempts high treason and punishable by death. The punishment provided by the District of Columbia is surely inadequate, and it behooves Congress to settle the penalty for such an offense, so that we may be saved if possible a repetition of the crime.

WE have no sympathy with the attempts that are being made at this stage of the liquor excitement to persuade our Selectmen to grant more licenses—petitions in favor of which are in circulation. The parties in whose favor licenses are invoked made proper application for them, and were refused, at the time when the other liquor dealers petitioned for their licenses. There is no stronger reason in their favor now than then. The Selectmen have taken a decided stand in the matter; have said just how many they would grant; and the moment they swerve from it they open the whole question, and render void in a great measure their efforts to enforce the law. As we said last week, it is not a question of license or prohibition; and the fact that such petitions are in circulation shows conclusively that the law is being enforced to a certain extent, at least. The Selectmen thus far have the moral support of our best citizens in their firm action in this matter. If they now decide to grant more licenses, and increase the number to ten, they might just as well increase it to twenty, or even license everybody. The advocates of the new licenses know this perfectly well. And we believe the sentiment of this community will sustain them in carrying out their original intention.

We trust that in their attempts to enforce the present liquor law, our town officers will not overlook the fact that a great deal of liquor has been, and undoubtedly is now, sold on the Sabbath, both by licensed and unlicensed dealers. In our judgment, the Sunday law has been more strictly enforced in this Commonwealth in cities than in country towns. Let all law-abiding citizens aid by their voice and influence the closing of all dram-shops on Sunday.—We think a special effort should be made in this direction. We think no one, whether in favor of the present law or not, whether a supporter of the action of our Selectmen or not, will contend that the saloons for the sale of intoxicants should be kept open on the Sabbath. Enforce the law as it stands, and let us judge it by its fruits.

The war on the railroad to the West still continues, and tickets were sold from New York to Chicago yesterday for $9.00.

IT has been questioned to how great an extent the telephone will supersede or rival the telegraph in sending messages through the country. For sending messages at short distances, where the parties wish a more extended communication than would be possible by the telegram, it is surely of much greater advantage. We can also, in many cases, hold a direct conversation with the person whom we desire to address—while by the other method more or less delay is occasioned by the delivery of the message and obtaining a reply.—And it seems to us that the telegraph companies could counteract this advantage over them, if they would be more prompt in their business. Telegraphing is becoming a monopoly in this country, and while its superiority is still great over other means of communication, we have known many instances where the mail would have answered the purpose equally well. We recently had occasion to send and receive messages from Boston and our own town to several places not twenty miles out of the city, and were surprised at the length of time consumed in the dispatches reaching their destination.—One, for instance, was taken to the telegraph office at 9 o'clock A. M., reaching us at Peabody shortly before 3 P. M. On examination of the dispatches we found that it remained in the office receiving it for several hours, and this, too, in a place where the amount of telegraphing was so small as to leave no excuse for such delay.—These things ought not so to be. There are many improvements that could be made by these companies—and very satisfactory ones to the public. And the day is not far distant when it will have to be done.

IF the Eastern R. R. intend to run their trains into our station from Boston on the outer track, some sort of a platform should be built between the tracks for the accommodation of passengers as they alight from the cars. It is strange that they have been allowed to continue as they are so long without complaint. It is a decided inconvenience, to say the least, to the ladies.—And why should not this corporation do everything they can for the ease and comfort of those who travel on its line? Before the change was made, the trains coming into our depot from Danvers were run in to the station on the inside track, and then switched off below the depot on to the outer track. Why don't they do it now on the trains coming in, if they can't or won't build a platform? One or the other of these things they should do—and at once.

IT IS REPORTED

That the season for sea-shore bathing has at last set in.

That there is much dispute as to the proper costume to be worn on such occasions.

That it will not interfere with the usual amount of obituary notices.

That prudence dictates preparations for a park in Peabody.

That the time to lay it out is now.

That the town should buy the land extending from Warren street to the rear of Bowditch school for the purpose.

That an excursion ticket to the Willows and return costs but 25 cents.

That it admits to the skating rink or dancing.

That as "small and modest as the understrawberry," as a figure of speech has passed.

That this did not refer to the kind where there were only fifteen in a box.

That our neighbor don't approve of the course of the Selectmen on the liquor question.

That we didn't expect that he would.

That our condolence is hereby extended to the Selectmen under the severe (?) blow.

That Proctor's wind-mill attracts considerable attention.

That it can be seen from all parts of the town.

That Conductor Skinner must be about embarking in the patent medicine business.

That he thinks no paper can be genuine without a picture of the "widder" Pinkham.

That the PRESS will have to "brace up."

That the sea serpent has not yet been seen this season.

That we will ask the "regulars" all about it.

That the reporter of the Salem Handbill can't tell a picket from a tooth-pick.

That we are sorry for the poor youth.

That his reportorial imagination may in time suggest the distinction.

That a Philadelphia man says the sun never sets on American soil.

That before it ceases shining on the flag off Alaska it kisses the broad stripes and bright stars at Calais, Maine.

That this is a great country—but we believe that is a campaign lie.

That the PRESS is the largest weekly paper in Essex county.

That we mean to make it the best.

That tornadoes are not the only means of destruction in the West.

That there were 80 deaths from sunstroke in Cincinnati in two days last week.

That Griscom has broken his fast.

That financially it was a failure.

That it ought to be.

That we don't believe there will be any less eating on his account.

That a number of Peabody people are contemplating buying up farms in New Hampshire.

That it is probably a good enough country if a man has a lease of life long enough to get all the stones off the land.

That brook trout grow there about as well as anything we know of.

That we have had no accidents thus far from overcrowded excursion boats.

That Secretary Windom should have the thanks of the country for his strictness in enforcing the law limiting the number of passengers in steamers.

That the New York Sun complains of glue in ice cream.

That we prefer ours without.

That we therefore patronize Nador & Goodwin.

That the Sabbath School of the Congregational Church in Woburn don't believe in picnics.

That they wouldn't find much sympathy hereabouts.

That the Woburn Journal compares Sunday School oratory to lemonade.

That they think the quality of each is about equal.

That they are not far from right.

That since the recent liquor raids the number of shawls worn in certain portions of the town has been on the increase.

That it is warm weather for shawls.

That there is something warmer under them.

That the law moves the "evil spirit" to hide its head in secret places.

That the PRESS office has the best facilities for all kinds of job printing in the county.

That our friends should not forget it.

The new steamer for the Providence line to New York, to take the place of the wrecked Rhode Island, now building at Noank, Conn., will be launched about the first of August. The general model of the new boat is similar to that of the Rhode Island, though she will be considerably longer, having a length over all of 345 feet, a depth of 15 1-2 feet, a width over all of 83 feet 6 inches; width on hull 46 feet. Her tonnage will be about 2700 tons. She will probably not begin her work until the summer season of 1882, though she will be ready for duty in December, and Capt. Babcock may order her to be run a few trips at ouce to get her machinery working smoothly. The new steamer will have two air-tight bulkheads forward, while her engine and boiler rooms are to be inclosed in sheet iron to prevent fire from catching the adjoining woodwork.

Scott Brothers completed laying the first base of the Soldiers' Monument, last Saturday. Another base with greater bevel will be placed on this before the shaft will be put in position. At the last meeting of the School Committee, Master A. M. Noyes was declared admitted to the High School. The "blonde and brunette" in a conspicuous team were distributing small pieces of tobacco to the small boys, and making contracts with our store-keepers to sell the Horse Shoe Cross Bar tobacco. We tried to interview them, with the following result: "Horse Shoe tobacco is good; so is the team. Watchmen, watch the team! Never—what? Never take the Horse Shoe from the door." They leave to-day for Gloucester.

Charles Kimball, of Lynn, sixteen years of age, met with nearly a fatal accident while he and his companion, Ezra Brown, were gunning near Bartholomew's pond, last Friday, by the hammer of his gun getting caught in the bushes, and discharging the contents into his side. The whole charge, wadding and all, entered his side, setting fire to his clothes. He was conveyed to his home, a doctor was summoned, and the wound dressed.

We have seen one man—slightly under the influence of King Alcohol—who seemed terribly grieved because one of the new lamp-posts, which are being erected, was not placed opposite his residence. "I'm a citizen," he exclaimed in his wrath, "and it's an awful row I'll raise if that thing ain't moved up here." After a while he calmed down, and now, no doubt, takes his fate as inevitable. We would advise him to change his quarters to a more congenial clime.

Most of those whose business or pleasure called them to Boston to-day, experienced considerable difficulty in getting there. The draw of the bridge over the Mystic at Somerville was found to be out of repair, and all trains were delayed in consequence. Tug boats were pressed into service and helped out on the other end. Everything seems to be blocked at the present writing, and a general confusion of picnic, mail, freight and passenger trains ensued.

Carpenters are at work refitting the shop on the corner of Wallis and Walnut streets, for the manufacture of grain leather. Mr. Thomas E. Wilson has overhauled the engine and boiler, and thoroughly repaired and put in order all the machinery. The business will be carried on under the firm name of Atherton & Co. They will put in a new bark mill and do their own tanning on the premises. At present they are at work on a lot of crop leather while the alterations are going on. This will make three grain leather manufactories in town. We hope success will attend their enterprise.

Liszt always has been petted by everybody, but the last tribute of admiration, a set of furniture worked by the fair hands of Hungarian ladies, is rather pretty. Think of the piano king surrounded by curtains and chairs upon which his admirers have been at work for months, and upon which their monograms are worked, so that he can gaze upon them and recall the givers in turn.

On some parts of the Yang-tse-Kiang River ottos are used in catching fish. They are caught when young and trained to obey to a certain extent the human voice, though they must always be chained up. They are fed entirely on fish and bean curd, and appear to become very affectionate. A trained otto is worth twenty or thirty taels. The animals must be treacherous, for many an otto owner has lost tips of fingers.

At "a doll's party," in Baltimore, among the children's treasures exhibited was a doll in a good state of preservation, that was brought from Paris twenty years ago, and one from Richmond, Va., which was dressed at Fortress Monroe, forty years ago, by the grandmother of the little girl who brought it. The company present numbered over one hundred of both sexes, from six years of age to fourteen, and supper was announced at eleven o'clock.

An apparently destitute woman was cared for by the poor authorites of Sedalia, Mo., during a severe illness. It was afterwards learned that she was a widow, residing in a neighboring county, where she owned a fine farm, had a bank account of $2,000, and belonged to a wealthy family. Feeling sure that she was about to be sick, she decided to go to Sedalia under an assumed name and receive treatment free as a pauper. The Mayor has compelled her to pay the bill.

Near Glasgow, Ky., is a robin roost that quite rivals the famous pigeon roosts of which so much has in time past been written. A cedar thicket of almost sixty acres furnishes the birds with a lodging place during the cold nights of the winter and at sundown great flocks pour in from every direction, at times obscuring the sky in their flight. Men with torches and clubs resort to this place nightly and carry away bags full of the birds, which they sell for good prices in the neighboring towns. One man has in a few nights killed over two thousand and hundreds and hundreds are carried away nightly, but without producing any seeming diminution in the feathered hosts.

Several habitual players against a Louisville faro bank found out that the dealing was tricky, and resolved to get their money back. Just as the cards had been placed in the box, a player handed in a $20 bill for chips. A second player stepped to the dealer's side and: "That looks like a counterfeit." While the note was being critically examined, a third player changed the pack of cards for the one that had been "stocked." The play was resumed. The conspirators, knowing beforehand how the cards would run, quickly won more than they had lost, and might have broken the bank, if their manifest eagerness had not aroused the dealer's suspicion. He examined the pack, and denounced the fraud, but paid the losses.

LOVING HIS DOGS BETTER THAN HIS WIFE.

A case was heard by the Southport (England) magistrates recently which once more demonstrates the love which some men bear for dogs. A young "gentleman" named Thomas Thorpe, living at Southport, who was said to be in the receipt of £226 a year from property, beside what he earned from his profession, was charged with having some time since assaulted his wife. The evidence went to show that they had been married for several years, and that for the past two years he had ill-used her most shamefully, beating her three or four times every week. If she neglected to feed his dogs he used to break out in the most awful passion, and he had recently become so violent that she was now really afraid he would do her serious injury. On the night in question, he, as soon as he arrived home, asked her if she had fed the dogs, to which she replied that they had been attended to. Being doubtful of this, he commenced to curse and swear and strike her. She implored him not to ill-use her for a dog, but he only became worse. He struck her a violent blow on the face, knocked her down and then kicked her several times. On one occasion he opened her head in two places with a chopping board. Prisoner had no defence to offer for his strange conduct. For the assault a fine of forty shillings and costs was imposed, including the advocate's fee, and a deed of separation was also granted, he having to allow his wife twenty shillings per week.

A CUSTOM-HOUSE SCARE.

A writer in a contemporary describes a terrible scare that upset the Custom-House authorities in Venice, some time since. There came to the city a curiously-shaped box, and this contained a still more curiously-shaped contrivance—implement—instrument—article, which gravely alarmed the Custom-House officers, who sent for their superiors, who in turn sent for the police. The thing was made of leather, and upon it some extraordinary lumps or elevations. At length an astute official hit upon the idea—it was an infernal machine! This was just about the time of the Bremerhaven explosion, and every one was on the lookout for one of these dreaded objects. What to do next nobody knew. In the end a reckless porter was bribed to carry the article to an outhouse, and there it reposed for some days, the most daring of those who had the right to approach looking through the window furthest away from the terrible affair to see whether it looked as if it were going soon to explode. Their main object was, of course, to catch the criminal who sent it, and one day the desperate villain—an English officer—arrived, and actually dared to complain of delay in forwarding the machine. He said it was not an infernal machine at all—simply his wife's side saddle. So it was; and for the first time in their lives the Custom-House authorities were made acquainted with what in Venice was more than a novelty.

AN ECCENTRIC NOBLEMAN.

Says the London Telegraph: One of the wealthiest and most eccentric noblemen in Europe, Prince Joseph Sulkowski, Duke of Bielitz, arrived at Copenhagen a short time ago, on his way to Norway, where he proposes to spend the season in bear hunting. He was accompanied by a numerous suite, consisting of a highly-salaried lady companion, a maitre de chapelle, a reader, a body surgeon, a valet de chambre, two running footmen, an enormous mastiff, a huge ourang-outang, two voluble parrots, and several cagefuls of singing birds. One favorite member of his household, a Bengal tiger, he had been compelled to leave behind him at Hamburg, as the steamboat authorities respectfully but positively declined to convey that princely retainer across the seas. Prince Sulkowski's personal habits, as described in a letter from Copenhagen, are somewhat out of the common. He rises at 1 p. m., breakfasts an hour later, and listens to musical selections performed by the members of his household until seven. From seven to eight he takes a nap, which is followed by more chamber music until 1 a. m., his regular dinner hour. Having dined sumptuously, he sallies out on foot, accompanied by his secretary, and walks about the town until seven, when he return to his hotel and goes to bed.

AFTER TWENTY YEARS.

Captain G. W. Neilson, of New Orleans, has just come into possession of a magnificent silver telescope, awarded to him over twenty years ago by the British Government for brave and noble conduct in rescuing during a fierce gale on Nov. 6, 1859, the crew of the British brig Penelope, waterlogged and at the mercy of the waves. The crew numbered eleven, and were discovered clinging to the rigging of the helpless vessel. The telescope was first sent to Washington, then to Boston, then to New Orleans, where it remained during the war. The owner was advertised for in 1878, but not until a short time ago did the captain hear of it. The old sailor is now happy in the thought that his action did not go unrecognized by the British admiralty.

Take a true view of life; be proud that you have work in the world's busy path, and do it well and honorably.

Love without return is like a question without an answer.

A Denver hook and ladder company ran five hundred feet, raised a twenty-five foot ladder, and put a man on top, recently, in twenty-five and one-half seconds—the best time on record.

Let every man strive to add a good name to his other capital.

If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver, or "billousness," and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as to take SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR OR MEDICINE.

The Cheapest, Purest, and Best Family Medicine in the world!

A Effectual Specific for all diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Spleen

Regulate the Liver and prevent

CHILLS AND FEVER MALARIOUS FEVERS, BOWL COMPLAINTS, RESTLESSNESS, JAUNDICE AND NAUSEA.

BAD BREATH!

Nothing is so unpleasant, nothing so common as bad breath, and in nearly every case it comes from the stomach, and can be easily corrected if you will take Simmons' Liver Regulator. Do not neglect so sure a remedy for this repulsive disorder. It will also improve your Appetite, Complexion, and General Health.

PILES!

How many suffer torture day after day, making life a burden and robbing existence of all pleasure, owing to the secret suffering from Piles. Yet relief is ready to the hand of almost any one who will use systematically the remedy that has permanently cured thousands. SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR is no drastic, violent purge, but a a gentle assistant to Nature.

CONSTIPATION!

SHOULD not be regarded as a trifling ailment—in fact, nature demands the utmost regularity of the bowels, and any deviation from this demand paves the way often to serious danger. It is quite as necessary to remove impure accumulations from the bowels as it is to eat or sleep, and no health can be expected where a costive habit of body prevails.

SICK HEADACHE!

This distressing affliction occurs most frequently. The disturbance of the stomach, arising from the imperfectly digested contents, causes a severe pain in the head, accompanied with disagreeable nausea, and this constitutes what is popularly known as sick headache.
